The mystery remains: who killed Barbara Gibbons?

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — More than three years ago, on an autumn night, Barbara Gibbons was killed, her son the accused slayer.

After a legal battle that brought playwright Arthur Miller and other public figures to his aid, 21-year-old Peter Reilly was cleared of the charges this week. Evidence previously unrevealed by the state was disclosed that placed the youth miles from the scene of the murder when it was committed in a cottage they shared in Canaan.

Gov. Ella Grasso has ordered state police to reopen their investigation into the 51-year-old woman's death.

And Joseph Gormley, chief state's attorney, says he will try to learn why the two sworn statements by witnesses were withheld from the defense when the youth was tried and convicted of manslaughter. But this may be difficult, says Gormley, because the state's attorney who prosecuted Reilly has since died.

The mystery remains: Who killed Barbara Gibbons?

"I honestly don't know," Peter Reilly said during a break from his job as an ambulance attendant in nearby Wethersfield, where he averages $125 a week.

On the day after Thanksgiving, two days after the charges were dropped, Reilly's friends at the Professional Ambulance Service threw up white bunting congratulating him.

"Congratulations, Peter!" said the printed banner in the office. "We all knew the truth. Everyone else was just a little slow."

Peter Reilly says he found out the truth about himself when he was 13 or 14 years old, why his last name was different from that of his mother, but that he didn't hate her for it.

"The difference," he said, "my mother was raped back in the '50s and that's me. The assailant was never caught. She never married. Her maiden name was Gibbons. She just gave me a different name. Why? It was just her choice to give me a different last name and that's what she did.

"I first learned about it when I was 13 or 14, something like that. It was a little hard to understand at the time. Human beings are human beings and things like this do happen and it's just something that happened. It's in the past. It's something that I've learned to deal with. It doesn't affect my personality. What happened couldn't be helped, I guess. What else can I say.

"I asked about my father before that but I think she waited till she thought I was old enough to understand. Yes, I do believe my mother. My mother's very honest with me. She was raped in New York City. She is originally from New York.

"She never considered abortion. She wanted me. She did not want to put me up for adoption. I give her a lot of credit. She brought me up alone and it's not easy. She was both a father and a mother to me. I had my grandparents earlier in life when I was younger because we lived with my grandparents.

"But then we were out on our own and she was all the parents I had and she was really something else. There wasn't anything she wouldn't do for me and there wasn't anything I wouldn't do for her."

By prosecution accounts, Barbara Gibbons was both alcoholic and promiscuous. When found by her son, she was nude on the floor of her bedroom with her throat slashed, her legs and ribs broken and a T-shirt wrapped around her neck.

During Reilly's trial in 1974, John Bianchi, the state prosecutor who died last August, asked the youth:

"Even though you loved your mother — and I don't doubt that for the slightest minute — her actions left you pretty sad at times?"

"At times," replied Reilly. "You had to understand my mother."

Looking back today, Reilly said in an interview that he loved his mother very much.

"So to speak, we were an average American family, just the two of us," he said. "She took me fishing. She taught me to fish. I had no father to take me out fishing. She taught me canoeing. She'd go out and play a game of catch with me when I was young. And she showed me how to throw a football ... She gave me everything a father could.

Reilly at first confessed to the crime, but later recanted.

"I don't really understand the state's thinking on the whole situation," he says today. "I was questioned and questioned until I made a confession that was, so to speak, spoon fed. I was saying I did it, but I didn't remember how, but the police were right. That was the way I was brought up, that the police were always right. And after a good brainwashing, I guess you could call it, I confessed to it but the time sequence and everything proved that I didn't do it. I know I didn't do it. But after many hours of no sleep, I guess anybody could be made to say something."

In a taped recording of police interrogations played during Reilly's trial, Lt. James Shay told the youth at one point:

"There are many things we can do to make this a difficult process for you. I don't want you to play any more head games with us, and if you do, we will take you and will lock you up and will treat you like an animal. You will realize that treating two state policemen like goddamn idiots is not going to work. Now, someone is dead. You are responsible and you know it. We are offering you our hand. Take it."

Reilly, who is 5-7, weighs 130 pounds, has long, blond hair and wears silver-rimmed glasses, spent 143 days in jail. He was freed on Feb. 21, 1974, on a $50,000 cash bond raised by friends. Two months later, a jury convicted him of first degree manslaughter and he was sentenced to 6-to-16 years in prison. He remained free, however, on bond pending appeals. Playwright Miller helped to focus nationwide attention on the case.

Reilly now lives with Mickey and Marion Madow, long time friends. He is planning to return to college.

"My mother," he says, "deserves to have her murderer known. It seems the trail has gotten a little covered in three years."

New quakes rock Turkey

Fear death toll may reach 5,000

MURADIYE, Turkey (AP) — Two strong aftershocks leveled the remaining buildings in Muradiye on Saturday and frightened survivors of the earthquake that devastated more than 100 villages in eastern Turkey. No further deaths were reported.

Officials said 3,636 bodies have already been recovered from the rubble of this city and surrounding villages, and they fear the toll may reach 5,000. The bodies were being buried in mass graves.

Saturday's aftershocks caused a short circuit and set off fires, but the flames were quickly put out, officials said. One of the buildings destroyed was an historic castle.

Impassable dirt roads hampered distribution of relief supplies. Bitter winter weather and heavy snow in the mountainous area near the borders of Iran and the Soviet Union added to the problem of earthquake damage.

Some areas were still cut off, with helicopters dropping supplies and picking up the most seriously wounded. Several villages wiped out by the quake Wednesday afternoon were not reached by rescuers until Saturday.

Two thousand Turkish soldiers reached Caldiran, 10 miles north of here, on Saturday. Only one building, a military barracks, remained partially intact.

Residents claimed many persons only injured on Wednesday died because they were trapped in the debris for two freezing nights.

"We heard moans and screams until Thursday from the ruins," one survivor said. "But there is complete silence now."

Forty-four students died in the nearby village of Ucozlu when their primary school was shaken apart. A house collapsed in Alikelle, entombing 80 persons at a wedding reception.

"First there was a terrible, loud noise, then dust was everywhere and walls were falling in like playing cards. I remember hearing screams all around me, but I could do nothing. I do not even remember how I saved myself," he said.

Some reports said relief supplies pouring into Turkey from other nations still were piling up in the provincial capital of Van, 50 miles away. But officials here said most survivors at least had blankets, shelter and food.

At least 40 railroad cars full of relief supplies had been dispatched by Saturday, with a round-the-clock airlift of Turkish military cargo planes running tents, blankets, food and medical supplies into Van. The United States has made 25 cargo planes available from the American base at Incirlik to bring supplies in from donating NATO countries.

Supplies have been donated by the United States, Iran, West Germany, Italy, Saudi Arabia, Greece and other countries. The U.N. Children's Fund announced it was sending clothing and appealed for cash donations to help in the relief effort.

Officials said continuing aftershocks were terrifying survivors. The Turkish state radio said one strong and two lighter jolts rocked Ercis, just west of here, Friday night.

N. California swept by galeforce winds

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Power line workers and fire fighters worked Saturday to patch up damage done by galeforce winds that swept into Northern California with a chilly fury.

The winds toppled trees and power lines and fanned scattered fires late Friday and early Saturday.

By daylight Saturday, the ferocity of the gusts had eased.

Nevertheless, the California Highway Patrol issued wind warnings for parts of Interstate 80 and Interstate 5 in Yolo County and the Interstate 880 Sacramento bypass.

High winds gusting up to 70 miles an hour downed power lines touched off about 20 fires Friday night, but most were minor.

A fire that charred 200 acres of grassland, brush and oak trees near Castiloga was controlled early Saturday afternoon, 18 hours after it broke out, said Vernon Ashby of the California Division of Forestry.

A fireman suffered a serious back injury Friday night while fighting that blaze when a large oak tree fell on a fire truck, Ashby said. The man's identity was not available.

A Pacific Gas & Electric Co. spokesman said problems with power lines had diminished considerably Saturday after a night of power outages affecting more than 70,000 customers in the San Francisco Bay area, San Jose and the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys.

One person was killed when a tree crashed onto a car at Echo Summit near Lake Tahoe, the highway patrol said.

Weather

Gusty winds today but diminishing by evening. A few clouds, but skies mostly clear today and Monday. High temperatures about 68 both days; lows about 45. Sunset today 4:42 p.m., sunrise Monday 6:36 a.m., sunset 4:42.

Six die, 10 injured in boarding house fire

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fire swept through a boarding home in the city's Germantown district Saturday night, killing at least six persons and injuring 10 othrs, police said.

Firemen found five bodies on the top floor of the three-story dwelling, and a sixth victim was pronounced dead at a hospital, police said.

They said five of the injured were admitted to hospitals for treatment. The other five were treated and released.

A spokesman for Medical College of Pennsylvania said one of the dead was a man about 65 years old who was badly burned. He said the hospital also was treating two other elderly residents for smoke inhalation.

The victims' identities were not immediately available.

The fire started at about 10 p.m. and was brought under control about an hour later. Police said the cause was unknown.

Carter committee says:

Will accept inaugural contributions

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the two top officers of the committee paying the bills for Jimmy Carter's inaugural festivities said Saturday that it will be accepting contributions of up to $5,000 from corporations and labor unions after all.

"We are accepting contributions from businesses and unions. In fact, we want them," Bardyl Tirana, co-chairman of the 1977 Inaugural Committee, said in an interview.

Tirana corrected a statement Friday by inaugural committee spokeswomen that the committee would refuse corporate or union funds.

Their comments had come in response to the Federal Election Commission's announcement that the group was not bound by political funding laws designed to prevent improper influencing of elections.

Tirana said the donations will be used to fund public events and pay for free transportation for some of the crowds expected for the Jan. 20 swearingin and the various festivities connected with it.

He said the committee will refuse contributions exceeding the money limits imposed by the campaign spending law that governed this year's presidential election. Corporations are prohibited by the laws from using company funds for campaign contributions.

"We're following their measure of the appropriate amount of a contribution. We want to avoid on contributions any suggestions of undue influence," he said.

This would mean, for example, that a corporation or union could not contribute more than $5,000.

Tirana said committee expenses and the cost of parties and the inaugural parade will be funded out of the revenue from sales of tickets to parties and inaugural souvenirs.

He said the contributions also would be used to fund cultural activities during the inaugural week.

Carter has invited 300,000 to 400,000 people who worked in his campaign to Washington during the inaugural week.

But other visitors won't be left out, Tirana said. "There will be many other events for the public, regardless of who they are."

How highest ranking woman on Carter teams sees it:

Double standard in hiring for top jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Blum, the highest ranking woman on the Carter transition team, says women and minorities are being judged by a different standard than white men for top jobs.

Men often have the advantage in getting top jobs because of their administrative experience, said Mrs. Blum, who is one of Carter's most influential advisers.

"Women and blacks and very often members of other minority groups have to be judged a little differently because they simply haven't had the opportunity to prove themselves that a standard white male has," she said.

"So right now we're saying to the people who are making the judgments: use a different standard. Look at background. Look at ability. Look at experience. Look at their education... You don't use administrative experience as the main criteria."

Mrs. Blum acknowledged that this may not be a popular attitude but added, "We've got to start some place in getting these people if we're going to get them involved in all levels of government, as Jimmy has promised. We're going to have to make sure they're not excluded because they have not had the experience of a male of the same age."

In an interview in her transition office Blum said the man she calls "Jimmy — I mean President-elect Carter" has made a commitment to appoint women and blacks to his Cabinet as well as to other top government positions.

"He doesn't believe in the quota system," she said, "but he has said there will be women and blacks in all levels of government, beginning with his Cabinet.

"The Congressional Black Caucus was working on a talent bank of blacks during the election and is continuing to do so. The Democratic National Committee has a women's talent bank which has collected resumes. So now we're in a pretty good position to have a long list of women and blacks, something that hasn't happened before."

Mrs. Blum, 37 and the mother of four, has black long hair and blue eyes. Friends describe her as a woman of great dignity, sensitivity and good looks. As director of operations and deputy assistant to transition director Jack H. Watson Jr., her job involves making sure the internal operation runs smoothly. She sees that such services as telephones are installed and that people know what they are supposed to be doing.

"As soon as I finish this, I'll be branching into general participatory and supervisory work," she said.

Mrs. Blum said she first met Carter five years ago when she was an environmental lobbyist for the State of Georgia and trying to get a land-use planning bill passed for the Chattahoochee River.

"Our goals were similar," she said. "He agreed it needed to be done and went out of his way to be helpful."

Mrs. Blum said she is not an intimate friend of the Carters, but she does know them well enough to see that Mrs. Carter gives her husband advice on policy issues.

"The woman is brilliant and very reasonable," Mrs. Blum said. "She is very strong in her ideas. They have the kind of relationship where they are free to disagree with one another. She doesn't dictate policy to him nor he to her. They both have a great deal of flexibility but they both feel free to express to each other the way they feel, and they often do influence one another, although not always."

Mrs. Blum, a native of Hutchinson, Kan., holds a degree in psychiatric social work from Florida State University. She has an apartment in Washington and visits her Atlanta-based family on weekends. Her husband, Donald, recently sold a Lum's restaurant franchise in Atlanta and now deals in investments.

"My husband has become mother and father and cook and bottle washer," and everything else," Mrs. Blum said. "But he has been for a long time, ever since I got involved with the campaign. I work 11 to 12 hours a day." The family may decide to move to Washington, she said.

Before going to New Hampshire to ring doorbells for Jimmy Carter, Mrs. Blum was active in various environmental, social service and cultural groups in Atlanta.

Asked if she expects to be appointed to a top White House position, Mrs. Blum replied, "I haven't really carried this a step further and decided what I'd like to be when I grow up. I think there are positions where you can have both administrative responsibilities and work in policy area."

Gilmore's 9th day of hunger strike

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Convicted killer Gary Gilmore continued his hunger strike through a ninth day Saturday, as his attorneys prepared for a Board of Pardons hearing and negotiated book and film rights to his life story.

Gilmore is expected to ask the Pardons Board on Tuesday to proceed with his firing squad execution without delay. The Pardons Board may grant Gilmore's request or commute his death sentence to life imprisonment.

The board also will consider a petition from clergymen and residents asking that Gilmore not be executed until Utah's 1973 death penalty law is tested for its constitutionality.

Gilmore has refused to eat until he speaks with his girl friend, Nicole Barrett, who was admitted to a Provo mental hospital Nov. 19 after taking an overdose of sleeping pills three days earlier in an apparent suicide pact with Gilmore.

Provo attorney Ronald Stanger, who is handling Gilmore's defense, said in a telephone interview Saturday he wants to meet with the hospital officials, who have not allowed Gilmore to telephone Mrs. Barrett.

Psychiatrist John Woods said Saturday that Mrs. Barrett has prohibited releasing any information on her condition. Asked if Mrs. Barrett was aware Gilmore was not eating, Woods said he could not comment.

Stanger said he is working with a "tickly situation involving two emotional people" and does not want any possible meeting with hospital officials publicized.

Gilmore's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Vern Damico of Provo, said Friday that Gilmore might end his fast if he were told of Mrs. Barrett's condition.

Gilmore's other attorney, Robert Moody, is negotiating offers to buy rights to his story. Moody said details on offers should be available this week.

Stanger and Moody said Damico told them Gilmore wants profits from the sale of his story to go to families of his victims.

Convicted of first-degree murder in the death of a Provo motel clerk, Gilmore faces a similar charge in the death of a part-time service station attendant. Both were married college students with children and were shot during robberies on consecutive nights last July.

Mobile home burns; loss at $20,000

A mobile home caught fire in La Verne Saturday afternoon causing an estimated $20,000 in damages.

The fire, at the Fountain Mobile Home Park, 3530 Damien Ave., was apparently started by a faulty furnace in the home of Dorothy H. Speer, who was home at the time. She escaped without injury.

La Verne firemen had the fire under control within 10 minutes, but not before extensive smoke and fire damage had taken place.

Jaguar flees, but not long

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A full-grown jaguar escaped from its cage Friday, but was captured and tranquilized before it could get outside the zoo compound, police said.

"The suspect is in custody," said officer Blayne Carpenter after the runaway feline was returned to its cage.

Carpenter said two police officers helped in the hunt for the jaguar.

Turnover in Mexican leadership amidst economic crisis, dissent

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Luis Echeverria turns over the red, white and green presidential sash to his former finance minister, Jose Lopez Portillo, on Wednesday. He also gives Lopez Portillo a Mexican peso battered by devaluation and a government staggered by rumor and dissent.

Lopez Portillo's inaugural speech is being anxiously awaited in Mexico and abroad. Campaigning unopposed, he has given few hints of what his political and economic stance will be in the coming six years.

Lopez Portillo accepted the nomination of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary party — PRI — 13 months ago. Since then, his countrymen have seen:

—The peso devalued more than 50 per cent.

—The cost of imported goods increased more than 100 per cent.

—Inflation continuing at a yearly rate of about 20 per cent.

—Gasoline prices increased 33 per cent.

—Electrical rates increased 52 per cent.

—New car prices increased almost 50 per cent.

They have also been whipsawed by strong and persistent rumors, including one about a pending coup on Nov. 20 so strong that school teachers ordered their students to stay indoors that day.

Echeverria has been called a Communist by respected businessmen and farmers, and has in turn called them rumormongers who want to destabilize Mexico so foreigners can take over.

Echeverria says Mexico is undergoing an economic adjustment, not a crisis. But unemployment is pushing 50 per cent and expected to go higher, industrial production has almost stopped and it takes more pesos now to buy a dollar than it has in 100 years.

For decades, Mexicans pointed proudly to the country's economic growth, which has hovered at around 6 or 7 per cent. This year it may not reach 3 per cent, some economists feel.

Heavy deficit spending by the federal government is generally accepted as a basic cause for the economic problems. The Institute of Finance Executives estimates the deficit to be about $4.68 billion, up from about $936 million when Echeverria took office.

Much of the money was spent on social and agricultural plans. Echeverria spent huge sums on oil development that could make the country rich in the future. He has doubled Mexico's electrical generating capacity, increased the road system from 43,400 miles to 124,000 miles, built hundreds of new schools, increased the number covered by the social security administration from 11 million to 25 million and set up low-cost workers housing financed by a 5 per cent employer payroll tax.

He has also moved the government into areas generally reserved for private enterprise. The government now owns and operates a long list of businesses ranging from steelmaking to night clubs.

Critics feel Echeverria wasted money trying to make himself a leader of the Third World, but did little to curb government corruption.

The heavy spending eventually took its effect. On Sept. 1, Echeverria stunned the nation when he allowed the peso, which had been pegged at 12½ to the U.S dollar for 22 years, to float on money markets. It dropped sharply in value. Another float and a further devaluation came on Oct. 26.

On Nov. 21, the central bank suspended the buying and selling of foreign currency because so many people were taking money out of Mexico that the nation's reserves were in danger.

The wholesale price index rose 6.2 per cent in the 30 days after the Sept. 1 devaluation, not including a government-authorized 10 per cent price increase in many basic items.

The devaluations were expected to improve exports dramatically by making Mexican goods cheaper abroad. But figures from this September were only 2 per cent higher than in September 1975. In the eight months preceding devaluation, exports had grown by 14 per cent.

People began withdrawing their savings to buy gold coins that could be hidden, forcing the government to suspend the sale of gold coins.

"People were scared stiff," said B. R. Mehl, a Mexican who is vice president for marketing for International Harvester here. "Even people with small savings were withdrawing them and sending them abroad. Those people had to bring the money back but those with large sums abroad will need more assurances."

"We feel a recession coming on," said Albert Shikiar, president of Admiral de Mexico, a manufacturer of television sets. "Factories are laying off people, and those people are our clients."

Nation's 1st woman governor turns 100

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nellie Taylor Ross, who served as the nation's first woman governor, turns 100 on Monday and says she's touched by the many birthday letters she's received from Wyoming schoolchildren.

"The best thing I could do for the women's cause at the time was to do a good job as governor and afterwards. I wanted to show that women could take the responsibility and do well," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Ross said her two years as Wyoming's governor after her election in 1924 even eclipsed in importance the 20 years she was director of the U.S. Mint.

Mrs. Ross, who lives in Washington, hasn't been in Wyoming since 1972 when she attended the centennial celebration of Yellowstone National Park.

But the bundles of letters that have arrived daily this month wishing her a "happy birthday" serve as a reminder of her strong ties to the Equality State.

"They touch me a great deal," she said of the birthday letters. "It makes me happy that they think of me."

After serving as cochairman of the Democratic National Committee in the early 1930s, she was named director of the U.S. Mint in 1933, the first woman to hold the office. She retired in 1953.

Mrs. Ross said she doesn't think she equaled the accomplishments of suffragette Carrie Nation, but she believes her career marked a milestone in the battle for women's equality.

Women's rights champions, however, claimed that Mrs. Ross failed to advance the women's cause as governor, and their criticism contributed to her defeat in a 1926 re-election bid.

She had been catapulted into politics in October 1924, when her husband, Gov. William B. Ross, died. Mrs. Ross, who had not been active in politics, was persuaded by Democrats to seek the office in the November election.

Although Mrs. Ross was elected the same day that Ma Ferguson won the governorship of Texas, Wyoming gained the distinction of having the first woman governor because its inauguration was held three weeks before Texas'.

Thousands march fo peace in N. Ireland at rally in London

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of men, women and children marched, sang and wept for peace in Northern Ireland at an international rally Saturday in London's Trafalgar Square.

American folksinger Joan Baez sang, and the archbishops of the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches prayed for an end to more than seven years of deadly sectarian feuding. It was organized by the Northern Ireland Women's Peace Movement, founded 15 weeks ago by Mrs. Betty Williams after she saw three children die.

Police estimated the crowd, drawn from Britain, Ireland and half a dozen other countries, at about 10,500. This was smaller than expected despite clear fall weather.

"This is not just a rally, this is life," said Margaret Doherty, a Roman Catholic from Londonderry in Northern Ireland. "Just last night we had a call from home. One man had been kicked to death. In retaliation two young men were shot. Three people last night. That's what it's all about."

"Nine people dead in the last 10 days," said her friend Mrs. Joyce Kelly, a Protestant.

"I'm speaking as a woman who has lost my brother to the bloody British Army and my son beaten up and tattooed as a traitor by the IRA (Irish Republican Army)," said Mrs. Doherty. "Nobody has a right to kill.

"Tell the American people," said Mrs. Eilish Jordan, also from Londonderry. "Tell them if they want to send money they can send it for peace, not guns. Most important, we need their prayers."

Mrs. Williams, 32, a Belfast housewife, glanced at the cloudless sky, a London rarity, and declared: "I think this means God is with us."

"The world is here today," said Mairead Corrigan, 23, a secretary and aunt of the children whose death, by a slain gunman's runaway car, sparked the peace movement.

Mrs. Ellen Falk Joergenson, from Stavanger, on Norway's west coast, said: "We came because we look up to these women. It is awful when people in the same country have war together, and when it is religious war that is awful too. That's not religion."

Peace supporters took all shapes and colors, from an Indian guru with orange robe to 20-year-old English divinity student Hugh James, who came 300 miles from Durham because "I felt the Lord was calling me to support the movement."

Danny Gunnery, a wandering Irish minstrel, was resplendent in green Irish kilt. He said he had come from France "to show my support for peace. The only thing they're doing over there now is making millionaires out of the undertakers."

Counter-demonstrations were staged mainly by the predominantly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army which aims to drive the British out of Northern Ireland and merge the province with the Irish Republic. The IRA claims the women's movement plays into British government hands.

Hangglider pilot falls 1,500 feet to his death

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A 26-year-old hangglider enthusiast fell at least 1,500 feet to his death Saturday after his glider was released from a hot-air balloon, police said.

Donald Cohen of Miami, still strapped to his hang-glider, landed beside an apartment house pool in a residential area of Fort Lauderdale, officers said.

Kathleen Rollins, a visitor from Cleveland, said she was lying beside the pool when she heard a flapping noise.

"As I looked up, I saw this big yellow kite," she said. "Then I saw the boy as he was falling. He hit the side of the pool. His head and shoulder hit the cement. He never moved."

Witnesses told police that Cohen had taken off from Holiday Park in a hang-glider towed by a hot-air balloon. But the hangglider went into a nose-dive after it was released by the balloon, police said.

A police spokesman said it was believed that Cohen fell from 1,500 feet, but an officer on the scene said Cohen could have been as high as 5,000 feet when he lost control of the hang-glider.

"It's our understanding that he was trying to break a record which has to do with the altitude before release from the balloon," said the spokesman.

Autopsy to tell cause of death in CIM knifing

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

Officials today are awaiting the results of an autopsy to determine the cause of death of a 33-year-old prison inmate who was stabbed in the chest and beaten at the California Institution for Men at Chino Friday morning.

Peter LeClerc, being held in the Chino prison on a burglary charge, died at San Bernardino County Hospital about 5:30 p.m. Friday.

Officials said that LeClerc was being prepared for surgery to wire a broken jaw when he died.

Prison staff members witnessed the 9 a.m. stabbing on the first floor of Palm Hall, the prison's maximum security unit.

Officials said that the incident occurred when four inmates including LeClerc were exercising outside their cells.

The other three inmates allegedly stabbed LeClerc twice in the chest and inflicted serious head injuries on their victim.

Prison officials said they feel the stabbing was planned and gang-related.

No weapon was found after the stabbing.

Officials declined to name the three inmates accused in the incident.

The matter will be referred to the district attorney's office for charges against the trio.

New budget format studied

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

A new budget format which could partially decentralize the budget process and add greater parent involvement to the budget procedure is being considered by the Pomona School Board.

Scheduled to begin in 1977-78, the present format, which is a computer print out approximately 60 pages long, would be replaced by a slightly more general format giving individual listings for expenses at each school.

The new budget's master sheet would provide general headings for each school in the district. Then a slightly more detailed page would be allotted for each of the district's campuses or department's such as the Education Center or Adult Education.

Supt. Charles Carpenter told trustees that the new system is designed to provide decentralization of budget requests so that teachers and site administrators or principals would have more direct say so in their own school's budget. Carpenter said the new procedure might also give parents a more active part in preparation of budgets for a given school if the board wishes to carry things in that direction.

"The new method would provide a way to present much of the budget in a way that relates to schools and programs more directly," said Carpenter. "Using the old 60 odd page line item budget you had to be some kind of a genius to figure out how individual items fit into the total budget."

While offering the new style budget for board consideration Carpenter also warned that only about 90 to 95 per cent of the budget would be immediately evident in the new format. Such items as a certain percentage of an administrator's time given over to a certain function might not be immediately noticeable.

The new format was received optimistically by three member board as President Mary Montes and Trustee Ken Pine were unable to attend. Board Vice President C. Allen Braswell was enthusiastic over the opportunity for parents to assume a greater role in school affairs, but was warned by Trustee Don Donnelly that such enthusiasm could turn around when a team of parents, teachers and administrators at a given school were turned down on a given budget request.

The board will consider the matter more fully at its next meeting.

Women angered by sale of socks

CLEVELAND (AP) — More than 250 members of the National Organization of Women invaded the May Co.'s downtown store Saturday to protest a display of men's knee-length socks which they said made light of rape.

Some of the women climbed on a glass counter, and some threw socks to the floor, where the socks were stomped on.

Koalas given private rooms at S.D. zoo

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Audrey, Gum Drop, Cough Drop and Coke now have private rooms of their own. So do Waltzing, Matilda and the older female without any name.

The seven koalas in the San Diego Zoo were ushered into their new $110,000 complex Thursday. They obviously were pleased. It's modeled after the Lone Pine Koala Sanctuary near Brisbane, Australia, where six of the koalas lived before becoming a Bicentennial gift to the United States this year.

Spotlight on crime

Woman sees robbery and is beaten

A Pomona woman was beaten Saturday morning after witnessing a robbery and attempting to report it to police.

Helen C. Bennett, 907 Indian Hill Blvd., told police she was walking towards a self-service laundromat at 777 Indian Hill Blvd., Pomona, where she observed a man being robbed by two others.

She turned to leave and report the incident when she was struck in the face and knocked to the ground by an unknown assailant who was carrying a heavy, blunt object.

Meanwhile, inside the laundromat, James Henry Kutra, 52, 139 W. Green St., Claremont, was robbed of his wallet and $8 in cash as he prepared to do his laundry. Kutra reported that one of the men who robbed him had a gun.

Police have speculated that the Bennett woman was attacked by a lookout for the other pair. She was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital and released after being treated for a facial abrasion.

Gas station robbed

A Pomona service station was robbed early Saturday morning by two gunmen.

Larry Lee Crawford, 39, was working at the Shell service station, 1518 N. Garey Ave., shortly after midnight, when he was approached by two armed men who demanded money.

After emptying the cashbox, the two men forced Crawford into the office and threatened to kill him if he did not open the safe. He explained he did not have a key and the gunmen ordered him to lie on the floor as they fled on foot.

The suspects were described as black males, between the ages of 17 and 22, both approximately 5 feet 6 inches tall, with medium builds and both wearing knit caps.

Crews to fly in to fight mountain fire

The U.S. Forest Service will fly firefighting crews into the Mt. Hawkins area beginning at daybreak today to fight a blaze which has burned 45 acres of brush since Friday afternoon.

The Forest Service spokesman said that the crews must be flown in by helicopter because the area between Copter Ridge, three miles east of Crystal Lake, and Iron Fork is inaccessible by road.

The fire was spotted Friday by helicopter crews searching for an airplane thought down in an area west of Mt. Baldy, but later reported at Riverside airport.

Authorities said that the pilot reported that the emergency locator transmitter on his plane malfunctioned while the plane was flying over the mountains.

High winds hampered efforts to halt the slow-burning brush fire in the Angeles National Forest above Glendora. The gusts were strong enough to make flying into the area impossible, so ground crews had to battle the blaze without the aid of air tankers.

TOURIST ATTRACTION

Tourists from all parts of the country flock to the hometown of President-elect Jimmy Carter with the usually vain hope of seeing him. They lineup to visit with Miss Lillian, his mother, at the depot, then they sit on the station platform in Plains under a giant peanut with a Carter grin.

Social planning stressed locally

A new section of the city's General Plan, the Human Resources Element, was adopted recently by the Pomona City Council.

The section is basically a policy statement noting the city's concern for social planning. Much of what the section calls for is already in effect — such as consideration of the social impact proposed developments might have on the community.

Only one minor change was made in the document as proposed to the City Council. In that change, Mayor Ray Lepire added words noting that social services can only be provided when funds are available to do so.

In other business, the council first rejected and later approved salary raises for Ronald Kranzer, director of Public Works, Fire Chief John Fowlkes and Police Chief Richard Slaght.

The council rejected the raises until after it met in executive session to discuss the issue. The vote to approve the salaries was then made unanimous.

With the increases, the salaries of the three officials are $2,663 per month for Kranzer, $2,827 per month for Fowlkes and $2,771 per month for Slaght.

Holiday crafts classes set

A three-part series demonstrating the creation of holiday ornaments will begin Tuesday at the Pomona Public Library.

The first part of the series will begin at 7:30 p.m. and feature the creation of traditional Lithuanian decorations using drinking straws. The second and third parts of the series will be held on Tuesdays, Dec. 7 and 14, also at 7:30 p.m.

Santa's reading club for children will begin Wednesday and run through Jan. 3. Children who join the club and read 10 books during the month will receive a free ice cream cone and a certificate.

Other children's activities at the library during the week will include a bedtime story hour for preschoolers Monday at 7:30 p.m.; preschool activities Tuesday and Wednesday at 10:30 a.m.; Kid Power Wednesday at 3:30 p.m.; family films Wednesday and Thursday at 7 p.m.; and T.V. Club Tuesday and Thursday 5 to 7 p.m.

Four men seeking House Demo post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four men are seeking the job of House Democratic leader. After months of soliciting support from fellow Democrats, the candidates report pledges that add up to more than 500.

The only problem is that there are only 290 Democrats in the House.

These exaggerated and conflicting claims of support are part of the stiff leadership contest to succeed Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill, who apparently is unopposed to succeed retiring Speaker Carl Albert.

The Dec. 6 secret balloting will choose a winner for the No. 2 post of majority leader from among Reps. John McFall of California, now third-ranked as majority whip; Philip Burton of California, chairman of the Democratic Caucus; Richard Bolling of Missouri; and James Wright of Texas.

Burton is generally conceded to be ahead, but he is said to have lost much of the early lead he compiled during the last 18 months. Opponents say this loss is due to his powerbroker style in a year when a close ally, former Rep. Wayne Hays of Ohio, was forced to resign in a sex-payroll scandal.

Foes also blame the slippage on the allegedly heavy-handed manner in which Burton ran several caucus sessions on reform matters last summer. Burton denies he has lost ground.

McFall is usually considered to be last. His prospects are said to have been hurt by the disclosure two weeks ago that he had accepted $3,000 in cash from Korean businessman Tongsun Park two years ago.

Park also gave McFall a party when he became majority whip in 1973 and gave him a silver service tea set. Three months ago, McFall was given a digital watch by a South Korean legislator.

If McFall loses, it would be the first time in recent history that a step-by-step progression up the leadership ladder had been blocked. This could reflect the fact that nearly half the members of the next Congress will have served less than four years, and they aren't wedded to precedents.

At least 22 present and former congressmen are reported to be under federal investigation about allegations that they took cash, campaign donations, jewelry, furniture, vacations or other gifts from Park and agents of the South Korean government who reportedly wanted to influence U.S. attitudes toward Seoul.

Among those benefiting from Park's cash was Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., who has acknowledged that he accepted $4,650 in campaign contributions from Park in 1972 and 1974. Brademas is the leading contender for the third-ranked job McFall now occupies.

Brademas said the donations were legal at the time, and he reported them. Laws passed since bar campaign donations from foreigners.

O'Neill also has been linked to Park. He was the beneficiary of a 1973 birthday party given by Park at a fancy Georgetown private club. Aides say he took no gifts or money from Park.

McFall aides ridiculed rumors that McFall would withdraw and throw his support to Wright.

Wright defended McFall's integrity and said he would not suggest that McFall withdraw. Wright said neither he nor his staff had had any such discussions with McFall.

One variable that could affect the outcome is the question of whether O'Neill will state his preference.

Almanac

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Nov. 28, the 333rd day of 1976. There are 33 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1520, the Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan reached the Pacific Ocean after passing through the South American strait which now bears his name.

On this date —

In 1863, Americans observed the first Thanksgiving Day set aside by national proclamation.

In 1942, nearly 500 people died in a fire that destroyed the Cocoanut Grove night club in Boston.

In 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt, Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill met at Tehran, Iran, to map World War II strategy.

In 1963, President Lyndon Johnson announced that Cape Canaveral, Fla., would be renamed Cape Kennedy in honor of the late President John Kennedy.

Ten years ago: Hungary's Communist Party chief, Janos Kadar, assailed Red China for what he called a disruptive policy and pledged support for a world Communist conference.

One year ago: President Ford nominated Federal Appeals Court judge John Stevens to succeed William Douglas as a Supreme Court justice.

Today's birthdays: Pianist Jose Iturbi is 84. Singer Rose Bampton is 67.

Thought for today: It's a lot tougher to be a football coach than a President. You've got four years as President, and they guard you. A coach doesn't have anyone to protect him when things go wrong. — President Harry Truman, 1884-1972.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, American troops under George Washington were under orders to leave the Newark, N.J., area and march south.

Economist can see checkless society

PALO ALTO (AP) — Don't worry if you can't balance your checkbook, a few years from now you may not be using it at all.

Tom Horan, a senior industrial economist at Stanford Research Institute here and an expert on the so-called "checkless society," says checking accounts may soon go the way of the dinosaur and nickel cigar. The reason is the growth of Electronic Funds Transfer Systems (EFTS), which do what they sound like — allow you to transfer funds electronically instead of with a check.

"It's all around us today and we're not aware of it," Horan said in an interview. "It first started to become apparent with credit cards. We flash them and essentially eliminate cash when we do. Now a computer structure is starting to be build up behind those cards and something else is coming up called a debit card."

A debit card, says Horan, works essentially the same way as a check except that it does it electronically.

"A credit card is saying, 'This is my I.O.U.' A debit card assesses my funds on deposit and says, 'Here's my payment.' It's like saying a check is drawn on a deposit I have," he explained.

While credit cards essentially lend consumers money and charge them interest, debit cards allow users to keep their money in a savings account earning interest until the funds are actually spent on something. Then the merchant simply puts the consumer's card in an electronic terminal that instructs the bank to take the money out of the customer's account and put it in the merchant's.

"There are two significant things about that," says Horan. "One is that you've eliminated the paper media, but even more significant from the customer's standpoint, you've made payment from an interest-bearing account, whereas all checking accounts are non-interest-bearing."

The advantage of paying for goods out of a savings account, says Horan, "will virtually eliminate the need for a noninterest-bearing checking account." Horan concedes, however, checks will still be needed to pay their bills through the mail.

Forerunners of debit cards are already being used. One system installed by Glendale Federal Savings in 22 Smith's Food King supermarkets in Southern California is already processing more than 90,000 transactions a month, according to Glendale Federal vice president Bob Hargis.

The system allows users to make deposits or withdrawals or pay their grocery bills directly out of their savings accounts, thus earning interest right up to the day they bring home the bacon.

Despite the seemingly apparent benefits, Horan says both banks and consumers have some serious reservations about EFTS.

"People are afraid of loss of privacy," he said. "After all, the computer banks that store all this data are getting bigger and bigger, and you could keep pretty close track of what a person was doing if you could monitor each time he or she paid for a meal, bought a tank of gas or did something else involving a credit card."

Kiwi is future fruit

LA GRANGE, Calif. (AP) — The kiwifruit looks like a hairy brown chicken egg, but enthusiastic farmers are calling it "the fruit of the future."

Forty years after its vigorous, twining vines first took root in the United States, the kiwi is being distributed ever more widely. Growers say they expect production to skyrocket in the next few years.

It is a drab, even ugly fruit, covered with hair and a thin brown skin. But the emerald green pulp underneath has a tangy, strawberry-like taste, and even the pinhead-sized black seeds can be eaten.

"It's the fruit of the future," says Ted Shurtleff, who with several partners has put in 20 acres in San Luis Obispo County. "It's delicious, can be stored for weeks in home refrigerators and makes a spectacular jam."

In addition, the kiwifruit is subject to few insects or diseases. Growers say it is chock full of vitamin A and has twice as much vitamin C as orange juice. An average-sized kiwi has about 60 calories.

Most plantings are small because of the high cost of getting started — $3,000 or more an acre — and the four-year wait for the first crop.

But the wait can be worthwhile. Kiwifruit, now selling for up to 80 cents each in markets, can bring growers $2,000 to $3,000 a ton. Mature vines yield about five tons an acre.

Joe Hall, a grower and nurseryman in this little Stanislaus County community, said he was "one of the first in the state to grow them" when he started planting kiwis 10 years ago. "I have 10 acres now, and I'll be putting in 10 more soon."

The kiwi, native to south central China, was introduced into new Zealand in 1906, where it was called the Chinese gooseberry. New Zealand, which produces most of the world supply, began exporting it as the kiwifruit in 1953.

Kiwi plants reached the United States in 1935, but the first serious commercial ventures began in the mid-1960s, when two growers imported several thousand plants from New Zealand to set up California's first kiwi vineyards. "Kiwi" is a nickname for a New Zealander.

Now almost all the U.S. production comes from California — 120 tons in 1975. Officials say the harvest could reach 3,000 to 4,000 tons by 1980.

'New York' syndrome feared

Gas chief urges new, 'realistic' energy plan

California risks falling into "the New York syndrome" unless it solves its own energy problems instead of waiting for the federal government to bail it out, said a top executive of Southern California Gas Co.

Harvey A. Proctor, chairman of the board of the utility, spoke at a public hearing on a Draft Energy Policy Overview Report by the California Energy Resources Conservation and Development Commission.

The report is scheduled for adoption by the state energy commission Dec. 22, before being forwarded to the governor.

Proctor called "unrealistic" the draft report's suggestion that California not aggressively seek new gas supplies because the Federal Power Commission could allocate them to other markets.

"This is the course of greatest risk, because we would not have a solution to our problems but only a 'sharing of the misery' with other states," he said.

Without major new gas supplies, Proctor said, service to high priority gas customers in Southern California will be cut off by 1980.

He supported the draft report's policy of "planning for uncertainty," which says California should not commit itself to a single source of energy, adding that the gas company's proposed projects meet this concept of flexibility.

Planned large-scale projects can be ready to provide needed gas by 1980, but face being stymied by uncertain and confusing state regulatory procedures.

In part, the draft report contends that large-scale projects — such as those proposed for liquefied natural gas imports, coal gasification and an Arctic Gas pipeline — are uneconomic. Proctor disputed this.

"Small scale energy facilities, whether they be gas supply or other energy forms, are estimated to cost from 30 per cent to 50 per cent more per unit of energy capacity than the full scale projects we and other utilities have proposed," Proctor explained.

Southern California's need for the new gas supply projects is not caused by excess growth, "where conservation and a dampening of growth would alleviate or solve the problem," as the draft report suggests, Proctor said.

The critical problem, he outlined, is the decline in gas supply from present sources. New projects are needed to maintain service to the area's 12 million consumers presently dependent on natural gas — not to meet growth.

McSweeny appointed to V.P. role

John E. McSweeny has been appointed vice president and program director for the Navy Moderate Range Tactical Systems program at the General Dynamics plant in Pomona.

He will be responsible for program management of the Phalanx, a close-in ship defense gun system under development for the U. S. Navy and an anti-ship missile defense weapon.

McSweeny was formerly program director responsible for Phalanx engineering development and production activities at Pomona and has led the development of this breakthrough in gun fire control technology.

He joined General Dynamics at Pomona in 1961 as a senior electronics engineer and has held engineering and management responsibilities in microwave development projects, development of system concepts, and systems analysis and engineering in advanced systems groups.

He graduated from Loyola University where he received a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering and the University of Colorado where he received his master's degree in the same field.

The Pomona division is a developer and producer of tactical missiles and tactical weapons systems for the U.S. Armed Forces and those of allied nations. Its products include the Standard Missile 1, Standard Missile 2, Sparrow, and Standard ARM missiles.

Trial set for stabbing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 26-year-old Los Angeles man has been bound over for trial in connection with the multiple stabbing death of an 80-year-old woman near Farmers Market in October.

Municipal Judge Elwood Lui set a Dec. 6 arraignment hearing for Ellis Lloyd, accused in the death of Hazel Archibald who investigators say was stabbed 30 times when she tried to resist an apparent attempt to snatch her handbag.

Gen. Haig haunted by past, Watergate's rumbling

NATO commander is shackled by politics

EDITOR'S NOTE: In a day in the life of Gen. Alexander Haig, any day, the subject of Watergate rarely comes up. But it's rumbling in the background like far away artillery fire as Haig goes about his duties as Supreme Allied Commander of NATO.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

SCHLESWIG, W. GERMANY (AP) — The last remaining C118 in the Air Force inventory, a four-engine prop job handsomely appointed with bunk beds and a conference room, let down in a murky sky over the Kiel Canal and delivered NATO's top soldier to the waiting salutes of a Danish general and a couple of German admirals and generals.

Gen. Alexander Meigs Haig Jr., 51, loped off in his slightly stooped, shambling gait — like Gary Cooper meeting that train — to hear how the war games were progressing along NATO's vital Baltic approaches.

Less than five hours earlier at "Gebenden," his Belgian chateau, the Supreme Allied Commander had been raising the good night toast at a black tie dinner for U.S. Ambassador to NATO Robert Strausz-Hupe.

Another black tie dinner, this one given by a Dutch industrialist, faced him this very evening. In the preceding week, Haig had flown to the United States for a major speech, lectured at the Air War College, addressed a businessmen's luncheon in Luxembourg and granted a long interview to a prominent Danish journalist. He had also played some tennis and had read some Solzhenitsyn.

Now he was in crisply starched fatigues and a new style field jacket which no one in the Army was authorized yet to wear, except generals, who can choose their own haberdashery when black tie is not specified. The steely blue eyes were focused on an overlay map of Jutland in the darkened briefing room, and a Panzer colonel with an illuminated pointer was telling how the Blue army, composed mainly of U.S. Marines shipped over from California, had crossed the River Schlei during the night. "Very good," he said, but now the Leathernecks were falling back against an Orange force's counterattack.

Watergate and Haig's White House days as Richard Nixon's adviser until the resignation receded in the drone of the briefer's voice. They were dim and distant battles that had no part in this scenario but still rumbled in the background like far away artillery fire.

Haig's two-year term as commander-in-chief of U.S. forces in Europe ended Nov. 1 and was extended two years by President Ford. But Jimmy Carter can call Haig home, if he wishes, after he becomes the President.

The general dislikes briefings and permits no more than one a day in his schedule. His impatience turned to a smile of satisfaction when the exercise director, a German two-star, complimented the participating allies on melding their commands and tactics successfully.

"That's what these fall maneuvers are all about," said Haig, striding to his helicopter. "Ten nations forced to operate together, support, supply and communicate with each other in air, ground and sea actions. Service the other guy's tanks and planes. Share his C-rations. For 27 years it was just each country playing its own separate games at the same time as the others."

His chopper, flying a metal pennant with four stars, set down in a muddy field next to a camouflaged tent that served as forward command post for the retreating blue side. "Goddamn," groused CWO Richard LaMonica of the Bronx, N.Y., the general's pilot. "The only mudhole for miles around and those dumb Marines put us right in the middle of it." Haig headed to the communications center, lit by ghostly red bulbs and manned by a dozen Marines at field phones.

"Looks like a bookie joint," cracked Defense Department security man Jack Mulligan, a Bostonian who describes himself as "the general's push and shove guy." No man is a hero to his own valet but Haig's bodyguard thinks he is "something special, a class guy with no B.S. about him."

While his aide, Maj. Bill Boozer, and a German brigadier with the name Schroeder stenciled on his jacket scrambled to keep up, the SACEUR (Supreme Allied Commander Europe) crouched under tarpaulins and climbed up gun mounts to chat with lowly grunts in the kind of vivid language that got Patton into trouble with the mothers of World War II.

An hour later Haig was on the other side of the river practicing his German with a halfdozen long-haired draftees manning a new style military ferry for the Orange forces.

There was no attacking Red army, which NATO is supposed to be all about. In the war games of the detente era, neither side is ever red, only orange or blue. Haig exuded the same easy, breezy informality with the young Germans.

It is an important part of Haig's personal arsenal, as a general and a diplomat, that he can be talking one minute with the generals and swapping barrack humor with a private the next. He is perhaps the only Pentagon-type who feels at home in the Stanford think tank, dining with Bill Buckley, Abe Rosenthal and Frank Shakespeare at New York's "21," and shooting the breeze with White House correspondents.

Lunch in the field, however, almost strained those resources. The war game plan called for the SACEUR to dine al fresco with a squad of Marines and eight German conscripts. C-rations were supposed to be on the menu but a Bundeswehr mobile kitchen materialized out of the mist with delicious hot chicken schnitzel and roast kartoffeln (potatoes).

After Haig introduced himself all around with a beguiling awshucks grin, Brigadier Schroeder, on his left, set out to make the acquaintance of the burly Marine across from him, a crew-cut, unshaven warrior who might have spilled from Bill Mauldin's inkwell.

"You a general, too?" grunted the Marine through a mouthful of bread. "Both you guys the same rank then?"

"Nein! Nein!" protested Schroeder in deep shock. "Das ist general uber alles!"

Non-plussed, the Marine turned to his buddy, another prime specimen of slack-jawed Americana: "The thin one's Gen. Hubert Alice. I didn't get the German cat's name."

After witnessing the Orange team push tank reinforcements across the Schlei on the new German ferry, Haig was helicoptered to a press conference with German journalists.

"What do you think of the British Rhine Army? Does it make you cry?" asked a Hamburg journalist, bringing up straight away a topic that got Gen. George Brown, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, in trouble.

Haig beamed his boyish smile and said he avoided "making value judgments on our allies" as scrupulously as he avoided comment on contingency planning. "I got two extra inches of scar tissue on my carcass from indulging in speculation on contingencies. It's always sterile and always speculative."

Asked about the build-up of Warsaw Pact forces in the past decade, Haig pronounced NATO's conventional arms "less than adequate." He deplored NATO's sluggish approach to standardizing its bewildering and uneconomic assortment of tanks, planes, weapons and ammunition.

Miranda controversy:

Do arrest rules impede law enforcement, or are they needed to protect rights?

EDITOR'S NOTE: Does the Miranda rule interfere with law enforcement, or is it needed to protect an arrested person's rights? Those are controversial issues today, but surprisingly little information has been gathered on which to base a judgement.

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The neat bundle of 2½ by 3½-inch cards nestles in the right shirt pocket of Patrolman J. L. Vincent's light blue uniform.

Each time he makes an arrest — 62 times in a recent four-month period on his high-crime beat in northeast Washington — he fishes out one of them.

Although he knows what it says by heart, he reads it to the suspect anyway.

"You have the right to remain silent," he reads. "You are not required to say anything to us at any time ..."

It goes on for five paragraphs.

It is a "Miranda card" — carried by law enforcement officers around the country because of a 1966 Supreme Court ruling spelling out the warning that police must give suspects.

Now the Supreme Court has been asked to decide whether the 1966 rule is really needed to protect an arrested persons' rights or whether it unduly interferes with law enforcement.

Iowa Atty. Gen. Richard C. Turner, appealing an order overturning the conviction of a former mental patient for the rape and murder of a 10-year-old girl, says it does interfere.

President Ford agrees with him, and President-elect Jimmy Carter says society has gone too far in protecting the guilty. Some police and prosecutors agree, others do not.

"At first every policeman was upset about it," said Detective Sgt. Winston Norman in Washington, D. C. "But I don't see where it realy hurt us."

In Olympia, Wash., Police Chief Chester W. Breuer said the decision has increased the cost of law enforcement, but has been worth it.

"I feel it has made a lot better investigation," said Breuer. "Because of the ruling, you are going to spend a lot more time on the investigation and not depend on a confession."

The little statistical information that is available, mostly from the late '60s, indicates that the Miranda rule has had little impact on law enforcement.

The Miranda rule takes its name from Ernesto Miranda, a 23-year-old school dropout who was arrested in Phoenix, Ariz., on March 13, 1963, and charged with the kidnaping and rape 10 days earlier of an 18-year-old girl. After the victim picked him out of a police lineup, two officers took him into an interrogation room. Two hours later he confessed.

The case went to the Supreme Court at a time of mounting concern over the pressure tactics of some police forces to obtain confessions.

The heart of the 5-4 decision was a paragraph by Chief Justice Earl Warren which said in part:

"Prior to any questioning, the person must be warned that he has a right to remain silent, that any statement he does make may be used as evidence against him, and that he has a right to the presence of an attorney ... The defendant may waive effecuation of these rights, provided the waiver is made voluntarily ... If, however, he indicates in any manner and at any stage of the process that he wishes to consult with an attorney before speaking, there can be no questioning."

As the Supreme Court moved from a philosophy of protecting individual rights in the Warren court to a philosophy of what's best for society in Chief Justice Warren E. Burger's court, a reaction to the Miranda rule set in. Generally, the justices have not yet rolled back the guarantees of the rule, but they have weakened it.

In 1971, the Supreme Court decided that statements otherwise inadmissible under Miranda could be used to rebut any alibis a defendant came up with when he took the witness stand.

"The shield provided by Miranda cannot be perverted into a license to use perjury by way of a defense," Chief Justice Burger wrote for a six-member majority.

The stage for the present assault on the rule was set in 1974 when U.S. District Court Judge William C. Hanson of Fort Dodge, Iowa, threw out the conviction of Robert A. Williams in the sex slaying of 10-year-old Pamela Powers.

Williams had given himself up in Davenport, Iowa, two days after the girl disappeared at the Des Moines YMCA, where he lived. He was given the required warnings and called a lawyer in Des Moines. As he was being driven back to Des Moines, he told a police detective that he would tell him the whole story after he had seen the attorney.

During the drive the detective, Cleatus Leaming, suggested to him that if the girl's body were not quickly located it might be impossible to find it later because a snowstorm was coming. Leaming also said, falsely, that he already knew approximately where the body was. About two hours later, Williams led police to the body. At Williams' trial, Leaming conceded that he had been trying to get information from the suspect before he could see his lawyer. Williams was convicted and sentenced to life in prison.

In overturning the conviction, Hanson said Leaming had "clearly and grossly violated" Williams' constitutional right not to be required to incriminate himself. He found in substance that the detective tricked the suspect into confessing.

Iowa's attorney general argued that this should not make the confession inadmissible as long as it was given voluntarily.

"What is really wrong with tricking a man into telling the truth?" Turner asked the Supreme Court.

In his dissent from the 1966 Miranda ruling, the late Justice John Marshall Harlan said there could be "little doubt that the new rule would markedly decrease the number of confessions."

Oddly enough, in view of the furor about the ruling, no national statistics have ever been assembled to show Miranda's effect on confession rates. Local studies in the 1960s, together with recent interviews with lawyers and police, indicate it has had little.

Yale University law students took turns observing operations in the New Haven, Conn., police station around the clock for 11 weeks in the summer of 1966. They found that the

Without waiting around for standardization, "a 10-year luxury that we can't afford," the general praised progress made during the fall maneuvers on "interoperability," modifying existing weapons and equipment so they could be used or serviced by the various allied armies. During the war games extending from Norway to the Bosporus, Dutch tanks were serviced with spares from Bundeswehr stocks, German observers called in American artillery fire after both sides mastered an 88-word bilingual vocabulary, 50 cents worth of lanyard enabled British bombs to be fitted on U.S. planes, and almost every allied infantryman discovered that Italian C-rations contain cognac.

There was one spectacular setback, too. Almost every NATO force ruled out paper plates and plastic spoons for ecological reasons. The grunt in the boondocks was back to metal mess kits and time-loathed K.P.

"It rarely does anymore," said Haig, sprawled in an armchair for the long plane ride back to Brussels. "I guess Europeans just aren't that turned on about it. It never was that big a thing over here."

There are those who think Al Haig kept the White House going and the country together during Nixon's last days. Others suspect he took a more direct part in the Watergate coverup than he has ever admitted. Haig doesn't say.

"I've developed a tough skin to criticism over the years," the general said, watching the plane climb above the storm front. "After the White House, after Watergate, I was prepared for anything, but what they write in the newspapers still bothers my wife."

Now his admirers, mostly NATO's highest commanders, regard him as a "can-do guy," who has turned out to be more cerebral than the brilliant Gen. Lauris Norstad, tougher but as well liked as the enormously popular Andrew Goodpaster, his predecessor, and one of the best staff officers since George Marshall.

Haig's critics, many of them Pentagon contemporaries who were passed over when Nixon jumped him from two to four stars, point to his brief combat record — less than a year in Korea, less than a year in Vietnam, his many desk-borne assignments close to the Pentagon and, always, the White House and Watergate connections.

Haig was born in Philadelphia, and his father, an attorney, died when he was very young. He attended Catholic schools and as an altar boy, he came under the influence of a kindly parish priest who hoped he might have a vocation. But it was brother Frank who went into the Jesuits, went on to become a nuclear physicist and is now on the faculty at Loyola in Baltimore.

Gravity measured by suspended ball

And when people ask him what possible, practical advantage that kind of thing could lead to, the professor has an answer.

"It was not so long ago that people asked Edison what the advantage of a light bulb was and wondered why. Faraday was bothering with something like electricity.

"I'm measuring gravity waves out of a scientific curiosity even though I can't see any immediate practical purpose. But sooner or later the engineers will find some application or other. They always do."

He offered two analogies as examples to help laymen understand how it's done.

"Think of the earth as a sphere of jello which takes various shapes and molds and oscillates at different pitches. These are called spheroid oscillations.

"Then there are also oscillations that result when certain gravity waves hit the earth much like fingers striking keys of a piano. Different vibrations are caused by different waves; we've measured 300 modes in all."

The gravity rays that touch off selected oscillations emanate from dying stars at varying intensity. Tuman and his students have classified each pitch with identifying signals and they record the patterns of vibrations as gravity shakes the "jello" and fingers the "piano keys."

The prehistoric-looking site of his gravity meter is an ideal place to conduct the measurements, Tuman said, because it's rock base extends 40 to 50 miles toward the center of the earth. This solid platform acts as a reliable antenna to receive and record the vibrations.

Tuman said he enjoys the study of gravity because science is weakest in that field and therefore most challenging. However, his experimentation is not limited to gravity alone.

The professor records earthquakes on a seismometer in his lab at the college, and can speak at length about all the intricacies of collisions between the Pacific and North American continental plates and their point of division — the San Andreas fault west of Turlock.

Anyone looking for a sign to tip them off before the next earthquake might be interested to know that Tuman believes he has found a preliminary indicator.

Miranda

Miranda rule might have adversely affected interrogations in six cases out of 127.

In Los Angeles the next year, the district attorney's office surveyed 250 cases in which requests for the filing of felony complaints were rejected. It turned out that only three were rejected because of statements being inadmissible under the Miranda rule.

A University of Pittsburgh study in 1967 showed that after the Miranda decision the percentage of guilty pleas in Pittsburgh actually increased by 5.5 per cent for serious crimes.

Recent interviews indicate the pattern nearly 10 years later remains the same.

"In my experience, it has not had any substantial impact on guilty pleas," said State Attorney Richard E. Gerstein of Miami, Fla.

"If it has, it has been impossible to perceive," said Bert Neuborne, a New York University law professor and former staff lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union. "The only guilty pleas Miranda has prevented are the ones that shouldn't have been pleaded in the first place."

"If you don't have more than an incriminating statement from the defendant," added Capt. John Connor of the Washington, D.C., police robbery branch, "you don't have much of a case to begin with."

Miranda, for example, was retried and convicted on the basis of an eyewitness identification. He was sentenced to 20 to 30 years in prison and was paroled in 1972.

Police arrested Fernando Zamora Rodriguez, 23, in a nearby bar. As Rodriguez was taken into custody, an officer read to him from a card printed in English and Spanish.

"You have the right to remain silent," it said.

"Anything you say can be used against you."

It was a Miranda card.

NOW . . . The new Greyhound Bus station in Claremont, left, was an abandoned gas station before it was remodeled inside and out for its new use. At right, further south on Indian Hill Boulevard, a vacant station, one of 27 in Pomona alone, advertises its availability. In several locations AND . . . THEN around the valley old stations are being converted to new business uses.

King's crown dimmed

Ghostly station revived by bus depot

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

In the decade that followed the end of World War II, the "king" emerged to command the valley.

His presence was felt as citrus and walnut trees gave way to concrete intersections and asphalt driveways leading to tract homes, drive-in restaurants and service stations located on nearly every corner.

That was 20 years ago and the king — the automobile — still dominates in the valley.

But between air pollution, spiraling sales prices and Arab oil embargoes, the king's crown has lost some of its luster.

It would be difficult to find any more soiled point on that crown than abandoned gas stations which can be seen almost anywhere in the valley — Holt Avenue in Pomona, Mission Boulevard in Ontario and even Indian Hill Boulevard in Claremont.

Many of the ghostly stations are monuments to permissive planning, combining conspicuous locations with stark steel architecture that gives new insight to the term "blight."

The obvious cure for the disease is the elimination of the vacant station by clearing the land.

Unfortunately, in many cases, that is not possible due to long-term leases signed years ago between the big oil companies and property owners — agreements that are still earning money for some property owners years after the last gallon of ethyl was pumped.

In other cases the cost of clearing the site is greater than the land is worth.

When the site cannot be cleared, there remains the alternative of finding another use for the site and buildings. It is an alternative being explored throughout the valley in recent months, with some good results and some bad.

Most of the bad examples, as any motorist in the valley will attest, are old filling stations turned into auto related businesses such as muffler, body or tune-up shops that often serve only to emphasize the worst previously existing conditions.

That's not true in all cases of course.

In a number of spots around the valley old gas stations have been turned into auto repair shops that are fairly clean and attractive new businesses.

There's a limit to how many auto repair shops, even clean ones, that a town can support, however. Which means uses divorced from the automobile must be found.

The best example locally is probably the Greyhound Bus Station on Indian Hill Boulevard just south of the San Bernardino Freeway in Claremont.

Once a filling station, alterations to the exterior and interior of the building have produced a new use that is permanent in appearance and visually appealing in contrast to the former use.

Other examples of dramatic conversion could include a former ARCO station on Diamond Bar Boulevard in Diamond Bar that will soon be home for several small shops and businesses — and only a thoughtful observer will recognize the old service station.

In Pomona, similar plans are developing for an abandoned station at Park and Holt avenues.

Other uses seen around the valley include a drive-in dairy, used car lot, copying service and even an adult bookstore.

The variety of uses possible through conversion of the gas station structure, which for all its typical unattractiveness is very sturdy, is seemingly limitless.

In a 1974 book by architect A. L. Kerth, there are 97 possible conversion plans listed for all kinds of uses including banking, laundry, clothing, photography and plant stores. The work is entitled "A New Life for the Abandoned Service Station."

That doesn't mean that all conversions will be attractive or an asset to the community. It depends on the amount of money and effort expended to change the property.

And it isn't cheap.

"We're talking about at least several thousand dollars just in site improvements without touching the structure," explained Jim Lightfoot of the Pomona planning department.

Most on site changes, he said, involve alterations to the ingress and egress on corner lots, where driveways were often built almost on top of the corner — which runs counter to modern traffic safety standards.

Then there is the typical expanse of interrupted cement which demands landscaping with planters.

For the structure itself there is usually need to alter the roofline and exterior texture in addition to whatever interior work must be done to accomodate a new business operation.

"It can get pretty expensive. But considering building costs today it can be practical as well," said Lightfoot.

"Our goal on conversions is to get a viable business that will be an attractive addition to the commercial area," he said.

In Pomona all conversions require a conditional use permit that allows the city to monitor and control the standards for conversion.

Lightfoot estimated that serious inquiries about converting service stations total perhaps six or eight per year, some of which are feasible and some of which aren't.

At that rate it will be a long time before Pomona and the other valley communities get rid of the existing abandoned properties, but it's a step in the right direction.

Pomona crime war sought

By JACK BURSON
PB Staff Writer

Richard A. Slaght, the 24-year veteran of the Pomona Police Department who was appointed its chief Sept. 29, has called on the citizens of the city to stand up against criminals and assist the department identify and prosecute them.

At the same time, Slaght cautioned residents that "This police department cannot solve or take care of all the problems in this community without their help. It is not a one-way street."

The new chief, who has worked every type of department job since he joined in 1952, said that one of the biggest problems police face is the reluctance of some persons to "get involved" because of their fear of retaliation or perhaps frustration linked to the feeling that there is nothing anyone can do about the situation.

For those who choose to stand up and assist police, Slaght promised the full support of the Pomona Police Department.

Slaght, 46, followed James Richards into the job after Richards was accused of embezzlement in Arvada, Colo., where he had been police chief until accepting the Pomona post. Those charges have yet to be resolved. Richards was fired as chief of the Pomona department Sept. 20.

Slaght said the Richards episode "created a definite morale problem not only within this organization, but within the community.

"It was a very unfortunate situation and I hope that Jim Richards will be considered innocent unless proved guilty."

Slaght, who was born in Pasadena, said that he has the feeling that crime in the city this year is not of the magnitude it was last year. He said that police called-for-services are down from last year, but added that it now takes longer for officers to take care of those calls than it did in 1975. He's planning to find out why.

The most recent FBI statistics show crime still on rise, but it is down in most categories in Pomona, he said.

Slaght called this "an encouraging trend."

"The murder rate, nationwide, is down 15 per cent," Slaght said, "and comparitively speaking, we're probably a little better than that."

Last year was an infamous period for the city with more than 20 persons murdered.

The Pomona Police Department currently has 128 sworn officers — a 13 per cent reduction in personnel from the same period last year. The reduction is the result of the ending of a federally-funded anti-burglary task force, Slaght said. In addition, there are 37 civilian employes, but there is a shortage of seven civilians within the department. Despite an advertising campaign recently, those jobs have not been filled.

Slaght admitted that police response to some calls has been slower than desirable but blames the shortage of manpower for the situation. He added that eventually residents may have to accept some sort of priority scheme in which they can expect immediate police response to some types of calls and a later response to others.

"You have only so many people, and you can go so many directions at one time," he said.

Slaght said the department is attempting to establish a better working relationship with minority groups. It takes time to open doors, he said, but he plans to meet with leaders of those groups in order to "get some input." He said that from most minority residents, police are receiving "positive response." But, he added, there are some cases in which the response is negative. Crime is a deep concern to most minority residents, he added.

The future may hold some kind of restructuring for the Pomona Police Department, Slaght said. Before taking such an action, he said, he planned to call for an outside consultant for recommendations.

"I personally feel that we have a very, very professional organization. The people I work with are, on the whole, very professional in their attitudes and activities. And, on the whole, the City of Pomona can be very proud of the law enforcement it has," he said.

Crime, one of the chief concerns of many persons in Pomona, is also his chief concern, Slaght added.

"I hope and pray that I will be able to do an even better job with what we have here in the future," he said.

Like rich uncle with poor relations

City of Industry shares $22 million 'playland'

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

The City of Industry — like a rich uncle sharing his wealth with his poorer relations — is offering a $22 million recreational playland to its neighbors.

The thin, crescent-shaped industrial city, stretching 15 miles along the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific railroad tracks from Pomona to El Monte, has begun to build a 500-acre regional park on the southwest corner of Temple and Azusa avenues.

The development will include a 27-hole golf course, tennis courts, bridle trails, a swimming pool, and other forms of recreation.

But the pride of the city will be an $11 million complex that will house a convention center, exhibit hall and golf club house where its business and industrial leaders can show off their wares and entertain customers in style.

The park is being developed under the auspices of the Industry Urban Development Agency, which has sold $23.5 million worth of bonds to get the project started.

Graham Ritchie, executive director of the agency, said the bonds will probably be retired from the agency's income in less than 15 years, a remarkable feat since the population of the entire city is about 500.

One of the major undertakings in the conversion of the neglected hump to a landscaped attraction is the disposition of a former garbage dump which takes up about a third of the land.

Ritchie says the garbage from the disposal site will be dispursed in noncritical areas, and will be used to fill some of the canyons which now are more than a 120 feet deep. Some of the taller hills will also be cut to balance out deeper fills. In all, Ritchie estimated four million yards of dirt will be moved.

As part of the project, Industry and Los Angeles County have entered into an agreement to extend and widen Temple Avenue along the northern limits of the proposed park. Ritchie said earth moving operations already have begun, and the convention center is expected to be completed in about a year. The entire park is to be finished in three years, he said.

Money for the project, along with a large number of other projects in Industry is coming from a unique effort to redevelop fallow land around the two railroads and make it attractive to industries.

This has been made possible by a state law passed five years ago, which allows cities to set up urban development projects.

When such projects are defined, all property taxes from the land to be developed are turned over to the redevelopment agency to pay the costs. This means, nobody — not the county, not the city, not the school districts, nor special districts — receives any tax money for the duration of the redevelopment project. The theory is that when the land is fully developed and returned to the taxing agencies, it will be much more valuable than it is at present.

Approximately 80 per cent of the entire 20 square-mile City of Industry is under urban redevelopment and its tax money is going to Ritchie's agency. Between 1972 and 1976, a total of $17 million has gone into the agency's treasury toward the redevelopment of land in Industry. Of that total, $8,218,955 was earned during the last fiscal year, and considerably more is expected to be returned to the agency this year, according to deputies of Los Angeles County Auditor-Controller Mark H. Bloodgood.

Ritchie has used the money to develop industrial park sites, shopping centers, and now the regional parks. He says at least five more industrial centers are on the books.

Even though the City of Industry gets no direct dollars from the redevelopment projects,it has benefited very handsomely over the past few years.

The redevelopment agency has built the city an ultramodern civic center that is the envy of the surrounding communities. The work of the agency also has generated a tremendous increase in sales tax receipts which is now more than adequate to finance the operation of its municipal government in high style.

Ritchie is not only the director of the redevelopment agency, he is also Industry's city attorney. The city is currently operating without a city manager.

Why should a city with a population of just 500 build a $22 million recreation center? Ritchie shrugs off the question, something he obviously has been asked many times.

"About 50,000 people from the surrounding communities come to work in Industry every day," he says. "We want to do something for them as well as the rest of the area. We also want to provide a place for industrial and business leaders where they can be proud to take customers."

He said that when the plan for the regional park was first submitted to the state for approval, he was told that it would be a duplication of facilities at the Otterbein Regional Park across the railroad tracks in Rowland Heights.

"The Otterbein park is a county project. It has been sitting there for years, with no one doing anything to move it along," he shrugged. "At the rate it is going, it will probably remain undeveloped long after we finish ours."

Pomona sets meet

Pomona City Council will not conduct its regularly scheduled session Monday night, but will meet in a joint dinner session Tuesday night with the city's Community Life Commission at the Firehouse Inn in Pomona.

The dinner meeting, scheduled for 7 p.m., is expected to be a discussion session between the council and commission concerning the commission's goals and objectives for the coming year.

A problem seeks solution

When Mr. Ford became president, he called in batteries of economists for a series of summit meetings. There were economists of the left, of the right and of the middle, liberal and conservative, business and labor, academic and government. The works.

Some reporters sat in on those meetings, designed to develop thoughts for managing the flagging economy.

Regardless of announcements made, one thing came through loud and clear to those present. The economists could not agree on the problem and they could not agree on answers.

What was done, therefore, was to leave it to Arthur Burns and his Federal Reserve Board — with Burns saying, honestly and consistently, that management of the money supply itself was not enough. But it had to do because no one could get together on a program.

Now President-elect Jimmy Carter has the problem, or will on January 20. If newspaper and magazine reports are correct, he must depend on the same assorted body of economists. Or their cousins.

Yet there are no more signs today than there were two years ago that these men can agree on what must be done — or what shouldn't.

Worse, there are faint signals, if reports are to be believed, that despite Mr. Carter's soothing words, the new president and Burns are moving toward a head-on collision. Presumably Mr. Carter wants to step up the supply of money at a faster rate, though he has not said so. And Burns has served notice he plans no such accommodation, but rather intends what might be interpreted as a slight tightening.

This leaves Mr. Carter lost in a plethora of conflicting advice, with no one to guide him. His situation, of course, is no better and no worse than that of the last half dozen presidents. None of them did well in the crunch on meeting economic crises.

What this means is that Mr. Carter, no more than any of his predecessors, knows how to reduce unemployment and inflation in the short run. Nor in the long run either, except by cut and try — a minor fix here and there.

In the end, any satisfactory solution depends less on economic - financial steps than on somehow building confidence among a great many groups.

Confidence among consumers so that they will increase their buying.

Confidence among manufacturers so that they will take the risk and spend the capital necessary to buy new plants and modernize equipment. Confidence among investors so that they will buy the stocks and bonds the companies sell to achieve this expansion and modernization.

And confidence by management and labor that the future will be stable — so that there will not be successive rounds of price boosts and hefty labor requests in honest anticipation of continued inflation.

How a man — even if president — goes about inspiring this widespread confidence among those who have lived through the depression of the 1930s and the current recession — is a mystery. The political scientists and psychologists are even more divided than the economists. And as ineffective, as we learned in the Vietnam war.

How Carter wields the pen

Americans will not know for some time whether they elected the better man Nov. 2, but at least they elected the better handwriter.

So says autograph expert Charles Hamilton, who made an analysis of the signatures of the presidential candidates for the Writing Instrument Manufacturers Assn. Jimmy Carter's handwriting, he reports, is more legible than Gerald Ford's.

Not that anyone can base any predictions on this fact. Many of the most brilliant leaders in history had terrible handwriting, Hamilton notes. For example, some of Napoleon's letters have never been completely deciphered.

As for past American presidents, Woodrow Wilson had the most legible handwriting while John F. Kennedy had the least legible. John Adams wrote the boldest signature, but his administration was one of the least successful. In the final analysis, it won't be how Jimmy Carter wields the pen but what kind of laws he signs his name to that will determine his place in history.

The school bureaucracy

Dear Editor:

The County Schools Office (through the Associated Pomona Teachers) has released a startling list of 100 positions in the Pomona school district which are administrative in nature and contribute nothing to the quality of education, but do much to increase the costs of the school system.

A total of well over $2,620,000 is expended each year for an administrative staff large enough to administer the entire school system in the state of California.

The dollar figure does not include the clerical and support staff which this bureaucracy has overlaid to further diminish the value of the classroom dollar.

The Pomona Board of Education has consistently added layer on layer of non-productive staff personnel to an already topheavy administrative staff. Your tax override dollar has no hope of reaching the classroom to improve the quality of education when it is filtered through the overpaid, overstaffed district office.

The classroom teacher stands as the public interface who is always blamed for inferior conditions, but is seldom commended for their dedication, their genius at innovation, and "making do" with the pittance provided for the quality of the classroom. After the three million dollar cream is scraped off at the district level, how much is left to assure our children of a quality education? The school hierarchy has been a self-serving institution ambivalent toward parents and teachers alike, defended by a rubber stamp school board which still must learn the ingredients of quality in the classroom.

It is past due time that salary ceilings were imposed, and the district taxpayers receive a fair return on the heavy funding which they plow into a school system which relegates quality education to the leftovers of the bureaucracy.

Carter versus Bureaucracy

WASHINGTON — President-elect Jimmy Carter, with much clanking of the crusader's armor, is girding for battle with the bureaucracy. But the faceless men and women who man the bureaucratic barricades tend to look upon him as a Don Quixote who will tilt in vain with the Washington windmills.

They have watched presidents come and go. Some have barged around the White House, issuing orders and putting on a show of authority. But in the end, the bureaucrats have always remained to introduce the next president to the federal maze.

Now, out of the peanut pastures of southern Georgia, Carter is coming to Washington to reform the bureaucracy. He will find a vast, civilian-suited army, soldiers of the swivel chair, bombarding one another with memos in septuplicate. At the end of each day, an estimated 100 tons of wastepaper are picked up off the battlefield.

Carter can lead a charge against any of the balkanized bureaus and find plenty of waste. If he is looking for a place to begin, he might start with the 1,267 advisory committees that have grown up in the shadows of the federal agencies.

The idea behind advisory committees was to give the citizens a greater voice in determining public policy. But most of the committees have become bureaucratic barnacles on the federal establishment. They are populated by 22,256 citizens who were recruited to advise the government. Some stopped giving advice years ago. Yet they have stayed on and on, feasting on a steady diet of government greenbacks.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D.-Vt., has conducted an investigation of the committees that are supposed to be advising the Defense and Agriculture departments. His findings haven't been released to the public, but they will provide the president-elect with some targets when he begins his assault on the bureaucracy.

Congress has already tried to stamp out the useless committees by passing a stern law. The new law contains a "sunset provision," which terminates obsolete advisory committees. But Congress didn't reckon with the tenacity of the bureaucratic growth.

Many obscure and obsolete advisory committees, which long ago ran out of advice, still abound in the backrooms of government. Leahy found at least five dormant committees, for example, that are still drawing nourishment from the Defense and Agriculture departments.

One committee hasn't assembled its members or issued a report since it was formed in 1962. Another committee hasn't met since 1972. Two others haven't met or issued reports since their formation in 1974. Yet another committee hasn't even gotten around to appointing its members. "Termination of these five moribund committees," declared Leahy in his confidential report, "would save $18,000 in support costs for 1976 alone."

The committees that bestir themselves often duplicate the work of the agencies they were created to advise. The work of the Air Force Historical Advisory Committee, for example, is often performed by Air Force regulars.

It is the nature of the useless, if they can get away with it, to conceal their uselessness. The nonproductive advisory committees, therefore, have resisted public scrutiny. Such committees as the National Tobacco Advisory Committee, National Peanut Advisory Committee and National Cotton Advisory Committee have avoided the illumination that Congress intended, according to Leahy.

As an exercise in Catch-22 reasoning, some of the Pentagon's advisory committees have used the Freedom of Information Act to suppress information. The act is supposed to admit more sunshine into the dark recesses of government. Yet Leahy's investigators found that the Pentagon "continues to justify the closing of committee meetings under an artificially narrow reading" of the very law that was "designed to expand, not limit, public review of government proceedings."

Leahy charged that 40 Pentagon committees met behind closed doors in 1975, for example, by distorting the intent of the Freedom of Information Act. His investigators counted over 60 closed meetings in 1974 and 1975 that failed to "cite a specific exemption or a reason for barring the public from the session."

The secrecy, however, hasn't been invoked merely to hide inefficiency, but also to cover up conflicts of interest. The 1974 index to the membership of advisory committees shows that 29 of the nation's largest corporations have planted at least 21 representatives apiece on federal advisory committees.

Youth—the 2nd time around

Youth can be more fun the second time around! All you have to do is start something.

Mary Baker Eddy was 86 when she started the Christian Science Monitor.

Frank Lloyd Wright was 89 when he designed the Guggenheim Museum. When somebody asked the innovative architect which of his buildings he deemed the best, he replied, "The next one."

America's elderly are as susceptible as the rest of us to the notion that government should take care of us. But the intellect, as certainly as the leg muscles, tend to atrophy from disuse.

The men and women whose mature years are the most fun and the most fruitful are those who have a challenge — an unfulfilled dream — a reason to get up in the morning.

Hulda Crooks is going to climb Mount Whitney next August — for the 16th time — at 81!

If you lack that degree of physical energy, buy a bunch of paint and you be the next Grandma Moses, but, at whatever age, the best of all possible time to start something is TODAY!

The most tragic brainwashing to which humankind has ever been subjected is the propaganda from government and unions and industry and some doctors that you're as "good as dead" at 65.

With enough repetition, the most foolish philosophy comes to be accepted as fact.

So they give you a gold watch and a pension and pack you off to Florida where you find a rocking chair in the midst of others who got there ahead of you — and from them you learn to walk old and talk old and think old and act old and contemplate your aches and pains and practice up to be dead.

That doesn't take practice!

Alfred Burlini retired as a meat cutter at 65, made his woodcarving hobby a new vocation — and became a renowned and prosperous sculptor.

Studies at Michigan State University confirm that learning capacity diminishes little, if at all, with advancing years. Senior citizens there are studying foreign languages — in preparation for travel, for writing or just for "stretching their minds."

The percentage of Americans over 65 will be half of our total population within another 20 years. To waste such a resource would be a social injustice and an economic catastrophe.

And meanwhile the chemists and the biologists are busy slowing down the aging process; they've done it already in lab animals. They'll make time stand still if within the next 20 years each of us has an additional 20.

Start something!

A University of Wisconsin study reveals that those of us who remain physically well and active into our 80s and 90s are moderate, flexible, enjoy people, enjoy nature and are able to laugh at ourselves . . . we like flowers and dogs and northern lights and the traffic along a detour.

And the Rev. James Aker of Raleigh, N.C., preaches three strenuous revivals a month at the age of 105!

Youth can be more fun and more fruitful — the second time around.

And another thing, Old Boy, shave! Every morning! You look better, you feel better.

And another thing, Old Girl — don't ever stop primping. Anybody, including yourself, would rather smell of perfume than medicine!

Just in jest

We Americans are probably the most voluble people in the world when it comes to giving lip service to conservation and anti-pollution programs. We talk and we preach and we cajole — we even go so far as to legislate. But in spite of all our righteous protestations, what does all the sound and fury get us? Well, according to the Federal Highway Administration, no one is actually practicing what he preaches. As a case in point, this year American motorists will burn more gasoline than during any other year in the country's history.

As described in a one time popular song, family planning was once usually just a matter of "a boy for you a girl for me." But sometimes even the best laid plans would go astray and the end result would be all boys. Often that was a bit disheartening to parents who wanted both a boy and a girl. In fact, it was one of the terrible uncertainties incident to raising a family in the good old days. But how different it is today! Getting "a boy for you a girl for me" is no longer the problem it once was; for no matter what you get, by the time they reach teen age you can't tell them apart anyway.

Carter inherits crown problem

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — For nearly two years Jimmy Carter has promised that as president he would do what was right rather than what was expedient. He has pledged leadership that is good and honest and fair and filled with love. Presumably he was elected because enough voters in America believed his campaign guarantees.

Soon now the time will come for action rather than vows. And both Carter and his constituents may be disappointed. No doubt the new chief executive will try to be guided by decency, but political reality can be unkind toward men with good intentions. By necessity the formation of public policy is not always a moral activity.

Consider one small, obscure and comparatively unimportant illustration: the international dilemma of the Crown of St. Stephen. The crown has been a source of friction between Hungary and the United States for three decades. Each American president has dealt with it to no final resolve. Now comes President Carter's turn.

The crown is an impressive relic, with chains of gold and dangles of rubies. But its significance is not in its intrinsic value. Pope Sylvester II gave the crown to Hungary's King Stephen in 1000 A.D., apparently because of the latter's efforts to convert his countrymen to Christianity. Since then the crown has assumed an emotional and political character that is singular in the world.

It is said that Hungary has never possessed the crown so much as the crown has possesssed Hungary. It is in fact the mark of government. When Ferdinand of Hapsburg became king in the 14th century he refused to wear the crown and was therefore not recognized by much of the population. Hence the crown has a constitutional suggestion that is not only of patriotic but of hard legal importance as well.

And so here is the problem. In the last days of World War II, as Europe was being gutted, Hungary's Crown Guard removed the relic to Austria and there gave it to U.S. officials for safekeeping. Thirty years later it still remains in U.S. custody, probably at Fort Knox. Hungary has repeatedly asked for its return, but every president since the war has steadfastly refused to send it home.

Very clearly the U.S. policy for all this time has been incorrect. The crown belongs to Hungary, its people deserve to have what is theirs. When Jimmy Carter gets around to the matter, therefore, his moral course is simple, and yet his decision will not be a clear-cut one because there are considerations other than propriety.

Hungary since the war has been a communist nation. The present regime was installed 20 years ago by Soviet tanks. There are 700,000 Hungarians in America, and millions in other free nations, who believe that the return of the crown would be a legitimization of detested, oppressive, anti-democratic and bastardized Hungarian rule.

"The return would be a terrible blow to those of us who still have hope," says Istvan Gereban. He is a respected leader of the Hungarian Freedom Fighters, many of whom had to flee their country for fear of Communist bullets. Gereben says the crown is now more than a symbol of Hungarian government, it is a symbol of the resolve of free Hungarians to do away with Soviet colonization.

Hence this problem, a tiny minute in the years of decisions facing President Carter, is almost ugly in its alternatives. Hungary is not an enemy, it is in fact a cooperative trading ally that pays its debts and strives for ever warmer U.S. relations. And yet it is Communist, and we wished that it weren't. Keeping its crown is a selfish but altogether effective way of underlining our wish.

In short, sadly, we hold this relic as blackmail.

So what will President Carter do? He has told Istvan Gereben that he wants to study the crown circumstances more thoroughly, and has requested opinions from leaders of the Hungarian - American community. This may of course mean he wants all the facts before doing what's right; then again, perhaps he is already looking for expediencies.

A problem seeks solution

When Mr. Ford became president, he called in batteries of economists for a series of summit meetings. There were economists of the left, of the right and of the middle, liberal and conservative, business and labor, academic and government. The works.

Some reporters sat in on those meetings, designed to develop thoughts for managing the flagging economy.

Regardless of announcements made, one thing came through loud and clear to those present. The economists could not agree on the problem and they could not agree on answers.

What was done, therefore, was to leave it to Arthur Burns and his Federal Reserve Board — with Burns saying, honestly and consistently, that management of the money supply itself was not enough. But it had to do because no one could get together on a program.

Now President-elect Jimmy Carter has the problem, or will on January 20. If newspaper and magazine reports are correct, he must depend on the same assorted body of economists. Or their cousins.

Yet there are no more signs today than there were two years ago that these men can agree on what must be done — or what shouldn't.

Worse, there are faint signals, if reports are to be believed, that despite Mr. Carter's soothing words, the new president and Burns are moving toward a head-on collision. Presumably Mr. Carter wants to step up the supply of money at a faster rate, though he has not said so. And Burns has served notice he plans no such accommodation, but rather intends what might be interpreted as a slight tightening.

This leaves Mr. Carter lost in a plethora of conflicting advice, with no one to guide him. His situation, of course, is no better and no worse than that of the last half dozen presidents. None of them did well in the crunch on meeting economic crises.

What this means is that Mr. Carter, no more than any of his predecessors, knows how to reduce unemployment and inflation in the short run. Nor in the long run either, except by cut and try — a minor fix here and there.

In the end, any satisfactory solution depends less on economic - financial steps than on somehow building confidence among a great many groups.

Confidence among consumers so that they will increase their buying.

Confidence among manufacturers so that they will take the risk and spend the capital necessary to buy new plants and modernize equipment. Confidence among investors so that they will buy the stocks and bonds the companies sell to achieve this expansion and modernization.

And confidence by management and labor that the future will be stable — so that there will not be successive rounds of price boosts and hefty labor requests in honest anticipation of continued inflation.

How a man — even if president — goes about inspiring this widespread confidence among those who have lived through the depression of the 1930s and the current recession — is a mystery. The political scientists and psychologists are even more divided than the economists. And as ineffective, as we learned in the Vietnam war.

Crumpled letter a heartache

Dear Ann: I received the following from the United States Post Office:

Dear Postal Customer:

Please accept our sincere apologies for this damage to your mail.

Although every effort is made to prevent incidents of this nature, occasionally damage will occur because of the great volume we handle and the mechanized equipment which must be utilized to assure fastest possible service.

We are constantly striving to improve our processing methods so that even a rare occurrence such as this can be eliminated.

Your mail is important to you and you have every right to expect it to be delivered in good condition. We hope this incident will not seriously inconvenience you.

Sincerely, Verl D. Koons, SC Manager/Postmaster, Santa Rosa, Cal.

Nice? Well — what am I supposed to do about this mutilated, completely illegible letter from our son who left home five months ago?

We've been out of our minds with worry and now that we've heard from him we don't know what he wrote because we can't read it. What's worse, the return address is punched out by a machine and we can't write back. I am frustrated and furious I could scream.

With the price of postage sky-high wouldn't you think they could do a better job with the mail? Please print this letter and suggest something to calm my nerves. I'm ready to explode — Mother In A Rage.

Dear Mother: I feel for you, dear. What a rotten piece of luck! Why couldn't they have mailed a piece of junk mail instead? Ever since automated equipment has taken over, when things go on the fritz they really mess up but good. (Before automation, PEOPLE made the mistakes.)

Let's hope every son who left home and wrote for the first time will see your letter and write again. It would be even better if every runaway son and daughter who hasn't written at all would do so now. Just think of how many happy hearts may result from your misfortune.

Dear Ann Landers: When I was mixing cake batter last evening, our 12-year-old daughter came into the kitchen and said, "Yummy."

I turned by back for a minute and she put her whole hand into the batter. I was angered by her piggishness and gave her a light tap on the wrist with the cake-tin. She yelled as if I had broken her arm. Her father came rushing into the kitchen an chewed me out for "battering" the child.

He said all kids love cake batter and I had no right to hit her. Now, of course, I'M a beast and HE'S a saint. Will you comment, please? — No Monster, Just Normal.

Dear Normal: Sure all kids love cake batter, but a 12-ye ar-old should know about spoons. A sudden "reminder" such as you administered was perfectly O.K. And if you didn't tell her to use a spoon next time you should have.

Dear Ann: I'm trying to lose weight and need to know if certain facts are right or wrong. Are white, whole-wheat, and brown bread equally fattening? If the bread is toasted are th ere fewer calories? Are potatoes fattening? — Hippy In Hamilton.

Dear Hip: One slice of white bread has 65 calories, whole wheat 57, dark brown 96. No difference in calorie between toasted and untoasted bread. Potatoes are relatively nonfattening. It's what most people put ON the potatoes that adds the weight.

Man who made those monsters

Consider these three film characters: Frankenstein's monster, Dracula and the Wolf Man. Do you have some kind of mental picture of what each is supposed to look like? So do I. Their images are standardized now. Credit for that the late Jack Pierce, a longtime makeup artist at Universal studios. He literally stitched, padded, pasted, sculpted and painted each of them to the specifications of his own imagination. Writers variously described them, true. But it was Pierce who created what we all envision when their names come up.

In the cynical lingo of the door-to-door salesman, a "Mooch" is somebody who's easy to sell. Not a fool or a dumbbell or a sucker, exactly. Just a person who tends to listen, understand, believe, accept and sign on the dotted line. It's widely known that a lot of good sales men themselves are mooches. It's also claimed that a disproportionately high number of mooches share another common characteristic. They're ticklish.

KURT RUSSELL

Q. "How old is that actor Kurt Russell in the TV show called 'The Quest' and what was his first movie?"

A. About age 30. I believe he was 13 when he got his first part in a Walt Disney picture named "The Absent Minded Professor."

Q. "In racetrack parlance, what's a 'mourning glory'?"

A. A thoroughbred that runs faster in the workouts than in the races.

Putting live oysters into the deep freeze, remember, does not necessarily kill them. Oysters frozen for 10 months have been seen to be alive when thawed out. That cold storage makes them delicate, however. Brittle. Easily injured.

LOVE AND WAR

Our Love and War man says he can think of no job wherein a young lady is more likely to meet interesting men than that of secretary to a U.S. senator. No references intended here to those Washington, D.C., helpmates who can't type. The average senator gets about 60 callers a day, almost all of them men. The true secretary, is she so wishes, winds up in conversa tion with them, briefly or at length, whichever. One report indicates she may be asked for dates about five times a day. Bear in mind, a lot of these visitors are from out of town, most especially in a mood for entertainment.

Why cigar smokers seem to handle their liquor better than smokers of cigarettes and pipes is baffling, if true. But that's the contention of a bartender of lengthy experience. Said cigar smokers may act a little silly, but rarely do they cause any real trouble, this authority avers. The cigarette smokers, on the other hand, are unpredictable, he claims, and the pipe smokers need to be treated with caution because that sort gets overly sensitive.

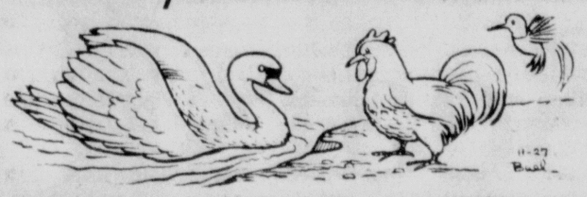
Birds' feathers vary with size



DEAR DR. MILLER: Does the hummingbird have as many feathers, only smaller, as my pet banty rooster has? — P.N.

DEAR P.N.: No, the hummer has smaller and fewer feathers. Generally, the bigger the bird the more feathers you'll find. Hummers happily get by on a thousand, give or take a few. Your banty's probably packing 5,000 or so, while a really big bird, a swan for example, may feature feathers in the tens of thousands (actually an average of some 25,000).

DEAR DR. MILLER: This morning I got up at 3 o'clock to check my guppies. They seemed a bit sluggish lately, and they were even more sluggish than usual. When I turned the light on, I found the water temperature was only 65 degrees, so it drops down that low during the night. Could this be why they're so sluggish lately? The water temperature during the day is usually about 72 degrees. — S.F.

DEAR S.F.: Most fish get progressively more sluggish when the water temperature drops below their preferred range. Since 65 degrees is ten degrees cooler than they really like it, it's not surprising your guppies would be sluggish. During the night they'd be additionally so, of course, because they're trying to relax a bit. Suddenly switching on a bright light at that point is a shock to their system which shouldn't be often repeated. A thermostatic temperature should be provided to help hold that water temperature to within their preferred range. While their current sluggishness may be due to other environmental problems or specific disease, at least an even temperature would give them a better chance to cope. If it can be determined they actually have a specific disease, then holding the temperature a few degrees above their preferred 75 may be indicated as a form of therapy. In any event, wide temperature fluctuations should be avoided.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Klunker, my cat, always has the sniffles. I use nasal decongestant drops, but they don't help much. They could, more, I think, if he didn't hate them so much. Can you give me a formula for nose drops that would work better for my cat? — A.P.

DEAR A.P.: One-eighth teaspoon salt in a half cup of water would produce nose drops of equal effectiveness, and they'd be a lot cheaper. However, it's unlikely Klunker can abide any type of nose drops. The best plan is to drop the whole idea and carry Klunker, chronic drip and all, in to his own doctor for perhaps more specific treatment.

When it's best to be quiet

I saw our youngest, Brucie, digging in the shrubbery the other day with a soup spoon and said to my husband, "Brucie needs a little sandbox. I saw one in the toy department at Crooks for $12.88 with a little seat in each corner, a red and white fringed awning over it and a sand pail and a shovel."

My husband smiled a cheap little smile and said, "Surely, you're making mock. I can whip him up a sandbox for a fraction of that price."

The first night we drove 20 miles across town to a dump in search of a semi-truck tire. It cost us $3.

The second night, we drove to the lumber yard for $5 worth of scraps to construct a platform to keep the semi-truck tire from killing the grass.

The third night after dinner was spent painting the platform and semi-truck tire with paint costing $3.50.

The next evening, we backed up the station wagon covered with $1.50 of wall-to-wall plastic and loaded up 300 pounds of white sand at $1.65 per hundred pounds.

Since the sand wasn't deep enough to write your name in, we returned the next night for another 300 pounds at $1.65 per hundred pounds.

The tire was still without shade, so we invested in a large beach umbrella ($5.95) and threw in a shovel and pail for $1.2

Friday was a big night for us. The sandbox was finished. Right after dinner, we took our crew into the yard to see how Brucie was enjoying his Sandbox Hilton.

We tilted the umbrella and peeked into the semi spare tire. A cat had littered in it. We found Brucie sitting in the dirt digging in the shubbery with a soup spoon.

Now, there are times when a wife knows she should keep her mouth shut and other times when it's worth the cost of a lawyer to open it.

"Let's see," I said, "$3 plus $5, plus $3.50, $9.90, $1.50, $5.95 and $1.25 comes to $30.10. What fraction is that of $12.88?"

I haven't seen that look on my husband's face since the Christmas Eve he assembled the tricycle and I asked him why he had a chain and three wing nuts left over.

Jaundice sign of many ills

DEAR DR. LAMB — Six years ago I had infectious hepatitis. Recently I came into contact with someone who stated she had yellow jaundice. I would like to know if yellow jaundice is contagious and, if so, how is it transmitted? I would also like to know if these are similar diseases or what the differences between the two may be.

I have been told that a person who has had hepatitis is not permitted to donate blood. Is this true? Also, what damage is done to the liver if a person is infected with hepatitis a second time?

DEAR READER — Jaundice is a sign of many different diseases. It can be caused by pernicious anemia from vitamin B-12 deficiency. Or it can be caused from excess blood destruction in other forms of anemia.

Jaundice can be caused by any number of infections involving the liver, including yellow fever, and infectious hepatitis. In this instance the liver is no longer able to form bile and eliminate excess pigment.

The liver may be damaged by chemicals — including alcohol — to the extent that it cannot rid the body of pigments that cause jaundice. The liver can also be damaged by cancer.

The drainage of bile from the liver may be blocked, causing jaundice. This can occur from stones in the bile duct, small obstructions in the smallest bile ducts or even a tumor surrounding the bile duct from cancer of the pancreas.

There are two forms of infectious hepatitis that cause jaundice (and both can occur without evident jaundice, too.) One type is from a virus in contaminated food or water. This disease is contagious in the way that food poisoning is contagious, and if you do not eat or drink anything containing the virus you will not catch the disease.

The other form of hepatitis was once called serum hepatitis as it is transmitted by the blood. It tends to occur after receiving blood or plasma that contains the virus. It can occur when a cut or break in the skin is exposed to bodily secretions containing the virus. Surgeons have a high risk of being infected, from a nick in the skin and contamination from a person who harbors the infectious virus. Drug addicts who use contaminated needles are apt to get this form of hepatitis.

The persistence of the virus in blood and bodily secretions has resulted in blood banks trying to avoid obtaining blood from anyone who has ever had the disease, and that usually means turning down all potential donors who have had jaundice. A blood test is also done to determine if a person has had an infection or is a carrier of the virus.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-8, Living With Your Liver, to give you more information on how the liver works and what causes jaundice. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. You can't tell how much damage will result from infectious hepatitis. Many people recover without any apparent residual damage.

I should add that serum hepatitis (Hepatitis B) can be transmitted in other ways besides needles and blood transfusions. I do not know what kind of jaundice your friend has, but everyone needs to know that this form of hepatitis can also be transmitted by sexual intercourse.

A: Castro has his war-weary warriors flown for rest and relaxation to Cuba — which used to be a popular resort until it went in the Red.

Q: The new 13-cent stamp has the profile of a beautiful woman with the legend below: "She gave her life." Who was she? — Connie Vallere, Miami Beach, Fla.

A: Clara Maass, a New Jersey nurse who, in 1901, volunteered her services to the U.S. Army in Florida, Cuba and the Philippines. In June of that year, with scientists seeking the origin of yellow fever, she submitted to being bitten by a mosquito, received a mild case of fever and recovered quickly. Two months later she was given another mosquito bite. This proved fatal, helping to pin the cause of the disease squarely on the mosquito.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Let compassion take precedence over logic today. You'll get more enjoyment from that which you do from your heart.
which you do from your heart.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This should be a pleasant day with friends, so long as nothing material is at stake. A misunderstanding could arise moneywise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your chances for success look quite good today, even though you will have a reluctant ally. Persons you didn't count on will be there to take up the slack.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This could be a very productive day if you devote your efforts to things of a creative nature. Pull out the stops where your imagination is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Joint ventures appear to be a source of profit today, provided they're not too speculative. Play it close to the vest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Base your decisions today on the big picture. Once you get the comprehensive view, you'll see how the smaller pieces fit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Putting forth a little extra effort or doing favors today for persons who have an effect on your career could pay a large bonus at a future date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're very popular today. Others will go out of their way to help you, but take care that a well-meaning friend doesn't give you poor business advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be patient today. Good things will come to you if you're willing to wait. Stir matters up and you'll dilute your luck.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't let pettiness play a role in your actions today. Be generous and forgiving. You'll win others to your banner more readily.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your chances for gain look exceedingly keen today if you concentrate on situations that could add to your resources.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although you may have some minor disappointments today, everything should work out in the long run. Keep the faith.

Your Birthday, Nov. 29, 1976

Your chances for gain look very bright this year. In fact, your beneficial happenings could come through two different sources.

God has a plan for you

Brother Lawrence was a simple monk who lived several centuries ago in Europe. One winter day, at the age of 18, he stood looking at a tree. The tree was dead, naked, barren, and totally cold. He walked towards the tree and touched a dead twig. It snapped and fell to the snow-covered ground. As he stared at the tree, he thought: "This tree isn't dead — it just appears so at this time of year. Surely, there is a strength within it which will surge forth with the warmth of spring. New buds will sprout on dead branches; beautiful new leaves will unfold. A dead tree will come back to life. There is a destiny, there is an energy, there is a force, there is a power and it is good. Its name God." That moment was the turning point in his life.

What is God's plan for you? To guide you and to give you energy and power. God is there ahead of you constantly. Is there still some sin hidden inside of you? Drop it. Is there some dream? Hold on to it. Is there some good? Reach for it. Give your life to God!

Damien dinner dance

The climax of Damien High School's annual fund raising drive will take place Saturday, Dec. 11, at a holiday dinner dance in the school gymnasium in La Verne.

The Christmas fete is sponsored by the Saint Monica's Guild, with Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Fahey as co-chairmen. Guests will be greeted by the traditional Lenternas and the gym will be decorated in a holiday theme.

The evening will begin with cocktails at 7 p.m. and dinner will be served at 8. Charles Granger will play for dancing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The dinner will feature salad, ham, turkey, lobster, potatoes, vegetables and rolls. In keeping with the holiday theme, persimmon pudding will be served.

Reservations must be made in advance since the number attending will be limited to 400. The cost is $15 per couple.

Park permits

Three reduced-rate specials are now available at most units of the state park system or by mail from department headquarters.

A $15 day-use permit for state beaches, parks, and recreation areas, good for the rest of 1976 and all of 1977, can be used in place of the charge of $1.50 per day per vehicle.

Also good for the rest of 1976 and all of 1977 is a combination day-use and boat-launching permit for $30, to be used instead of the daily $1.50 vehicle parking fee and the $1.50 boat-launching fee at all state park units that offer boating.

A $20 off-season camping ticket book contains 10 tickets, each good for one campsite for one night on a first-come, first-served basis during the off-season (winter at many state park units and summer at some desert parks).

These tickets can be used instead of the regular charge of $2 to $5 a night per campsite at most state parks.

To order any of these by mail, send a check or money order to Department of Parks and Recreation, P.O. Box 2858, Sacramento, CA 95812. They may also be picked up at most state park offices.

Operations officer named

Edward Le Blanc of Upland has been appointed operations officer at Bank of America's Florence-Hines branch in Los Angeles.

Le Blanc, with the bank since 1971, has completed an operations refresher course following a personal leave from the bank. He formerly was the head of the auditing department in the banking firm's national banking office.

New assignment

Mrs. Lois Seifert, consultant in religious education for United Methodist Churches in the U.S. has accepted a new part time position as coordinator of ministries for Pilgrim Place in Claremont.

She will serve with the medical center, McCabe Forest Home, and Pitzer Lodge. She will continue also to serve in her present church post.

The newly appointed coordinator of ministries will work in consultation with Pilgrim Place's Town Meeting Health and Welfare Committee of which Dr. G. Merrill Lenox is chairman. She will be a member also of the staff of G. Worth George, executive director of Pilgrim Place.

Her chief responsibility will be coordinating the services offered by residents to other residents in the medical facility.

EARLY ICE FISHING — It may seem premature to some people, but scores of fishermen have already found that the ice on Lake Onalaska in La Crosse, Wis., is thick enough to start one of the season's favorite sports.

'Teen Angels' fool drug dealers

CHICAGO (AP) — Jane is 26, married to a Chicago policeman and has a baby. Posing as a high school pupil she has fooled hundreds of drug dealers.

The Mundelein College graduate in psychology became a youth officer after joining the Chicago Police Department three years ago. She is a Teen Angel, a member of a special unit of youth officers cracking down on drug traffic in schools by masquerading as pupils.

The young undercover investigators are picked by Sgt. Ron Kelly, 41, who was ordered in 1974 to "go into the schools, buy the drugs, find the pushers and arrest them."

Since then, the special squad has made more than 560 school-related felony drug arrests, nailing pushers selling to pupils at dozens of city and suburban high schools.

Jane's job is to go to classes, fit in, buy drugs and work her way up the narcotics supply ladder.

"I always check when homecoming or a big dance is scheduled," says Jane. "I must judge if a boy is getting drugs for me because I want them, or if he is dealing. When I ask, 'Is there any good PCP around here?' and he pulls out $200 worth from his pocket, that's one thing. But if he says, 'I haven't got any, but I'll get you some,' then I shy away quickly. I don't want to involve him. He's not the problem."

PCP — phencyclidine (an animal tranquilizer) — is a hallucinogen. Kelly says it's the biggest problem facing the city now.

In her undercover role, Jane says she wears whatever the girls wear and is just an average student.

"Your social group dictates the drug you take," she said. "I try and enter the clique using PCP and other hallucinogens to find out where they get them. Usually, one guy is selling Seconal, another does Tuinal, another does speed, another does marijuana, and so forth. Often the student dealers are the 'big men' on campus. They have the money, the clothes, the cars, and take the other kids to rock concerts."

Jane says she trys to work more with boys. "Usually, it's the girls who can trip me up. They just know I'm not 17."

"One principal gave me good advice," she said. "He said it wouldn't be my looks or dress that would give me away. It was my air of self-confidence which an adolescent just doesn't have. So I have to watch this, and remember to giggle a lot."

Kelly said, "It's not the kids we're after. It's the pushers who use them as runners, or supply students who sell in the schools.

"I'm free to recruit anyone from the 600-member youth division. I scout the training academy for fresh faces. I want trained, educated people who look youthful, know how to talk, enjoy working with kids and see narcotics as a problem."

Kelly says his "new breed of cops" poses not only as students but also as pushers, junkies, hookers, pimps, big money types from out of town, whatever is needed.

"The women are our secret weapon and are given exceptional latitude," he said.

Some are clean-cut, some are sloe-eyed and sexy, some are pixieish or waifish, other utilize their looks and figures to make older drug peddlers lust for them, he said.

The unit's muscle comes from a core of veteran narcotics officers who asked to be assigned to the youth division. They describe Kelly as inspirational.

In coordinating the investigations, Kelly said, "I may assign a team of women to enroll in a school and make small buys. Other officers form backup teams, and the older guys place the school under surveillance."

Damien dinner dance

The climax of Damien High School's annual fund raising drive will take place Saturday, Dec. 11, at a holiday dinner dance in the school gymnasium in La Verne.

The Christmas fete is sponsored by the Saint Monica's Guild, with Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Fahey as co-chairmen. Guests will be greeted by the traditional Lenternas and the gym will be decorated in a holiday theme.

The evening will begin with cocktails at 7 p.m. and dinner will be served at 8. Charles Granger will play for dancing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The dinner will feature salad, ham, turkey, lobster, potatoes, vegetables and rolls. In keeping with the holiday theme, persimmon pudding will be served.

Reservations must be made in advance since the number attending will be limited to 400. The cost is $15 per couple.

Park permits

Three reduced-rate specials are now available at most units of the state park system or by mail from department headquarters.

A $15 day-use permit for state beaches, parks, and recreation areas, good for the rest of 1976 and all of 1977, can be used in place of the charge of $1.50 per day per vehicle.

Also good for the rest of 1976 and all of 1977 is a combination day-use and boat-launching permit for $30, to be used instead of the daily $1.50 vehicle parking fee at the $1.50 boat-launching fee at all state park units that offer boating.

A $20 off-season camping ticket book contain 10 tickets, each good for one campsite for one night in a first-come, first-served basis during the off-sison (winter at many state park units and summer at ine desert parks).

These tickets can be used instead of the regular chrge of $2 to $5 a night per campsite at most state park

To order any of these by mail, send a check or mney order to Department of Parks and Recreation, P.OSox 2858, Sacramento, CA 95812. They may also be picks up at most state park offices.

EARLY ICE FISHING — It may seem premature to some people, but scores of fishermen have already found that the ice on Lake Onaiaska in La Crosse, Wis., is thick enough to start one of the season's favorite sports.

LAZY DAY — Ah, for the good life at the San Francisco Zoo. Photographer Jim Palmer found the lions and bears really taking it easy recently in the warm California sunshine. They were not concerned with the hectic life and high crime that plague the city.

'Teen Angels' fool drug dealers

CHICAGO (AP) — Jane is 26, married to a Chicago policeman and has a baby. Posing as a high school pupil she has fooled hundreds of drug dealers.

The Mundelein College graduate in psychology became a youth officer after joining the Chicago Police Department three years ago. She is a Teen Angel, a member of a special unit of youth officers cracking down on drug traffic in schools by masquerading as pupils.

The young undercover investigators are picked by Sgt. Ron Kelly, 41, who was ordered in 1974 to "go into the schools, buy the drugs, find the pushers and arrest them."

Since then, the special squad has made more than 560 school-related felony drug arrests, nailing pushers selling to pupils at dozens of city and suburban high schools.

Jane's job is to go to classes, fit in, buy drugs and work her way up the narcotics supply ladder.

"I always check when homecoming or a big dance is scheduled," says Jane. "I must judge if a boy is getting drugs for me because I want them, or if he is dealing. When I ask, 'Is there any good PCP around here?' and he pulls out $200 worth from his pocket, that's one thing. But if he says, 'I haven't got any, but I'll get you some,' then I shy away quickly. I don't want to involve him. He's not the problem."

PCP — phencyclidine (an animal tranquilizer) — is a hallucinogen. Kelly says it's the biggest problem facing the city now.

In her undercover role, Jane says she wears whatever the girls wear and is just an average student.

"Your social group dictates the drug you take," she said. "I try and enter the clique using PCP and other hallucinogens to find out where they get them. Usually, one guy is selling Seconal, another does Tuinal, another does speed, another does marijuana, and so forth. Often the student dealers are the 'big men' on campus. They have the money, the clothes, the cars, and take the other kids to rock concerts."

Jane says she trys to work more with boys. "Usually, it's the girls who can trip me up. They just know I'm not 17."

"One principal gave me good advice," she said. "He said it wouldn't be my looks or dress that would give me away. It was my air of self-confidence which an adolescent just doesn't have. So I have to watch this, and remember to giggle a lot."

Kelly said, "It's not the kids we're after. It's the pushers who use them as runners, or supply students who sell in the schools.

"I'm free to recruit anyone from the 600-member youth division. I scout the training academy for fresh faces. I want trained, educated people who look youthful, know how to talk, enjoy working with kids and see narcotics as a problem."

Kelly says his "new breed of cops" poses not only as students but also as pushers, junkies, hookers, pimps, big money types from out of town, whatever is needed.

"The women are our secret weapon and are given exceptional latitude," he said.

Some are clean-cut, some are sloe-eyed and sexy, some are pixieish or waifish, other utilize their looks and figures to make older drug peddlers lust for them, he said.

The unit's muscle comes from a core of veteran narcotics officers who asked to be assigned to the youth division. They describe Kelly as inspirational.

In coordinating the investigations, Kelly said, "I may assign a team of women to enroll in a school and make small buys. Other officers form backup teams, and the older guys place the school under surveillance."

I REMEMBER PAPA — "Life with Father," starring William Powell and Irene Dunne, will be shown on KTLA, Channel 5, at 8 p.m. Thursday. Ninth in the series, IBM presents Movies To Remember, the film is telecast with only one commercial interruption.

Historic exhibit planned

Paintings and drawings by Michael Wheelden depicting historic homes of Southern California will be on exhibit from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and next Sunday at the Casa de Rancho Cucamonga (Rains House), 7869 Vineyard Ave., Cucamonga.

Among local sites shown are the Garrett Winery, the Old Stone Church, the Thomas Winery and the Christmas Tree House (Whitson House).

Wheelden was raised in Ontario and attended Chaffey High School and Chaffey College. He is now a senior at San Diego State University. He turned his artistic efforts to the local scene because he believes greater awareness of our historic past should be generated.

Wheelden has exhibited widely throughout Southern California and has been commissioned to do renderings at the Coronado Design Center in San Diego. He was recently awarded a scholarship to study art in London, Venice and Rome.

Cal Poly Concert Band to present program

The Cal Poly Concert Band will present "A Celebration Concert of American and English Music" in the University Theater at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Tickets are $2 general admission, $1 for students and senior citizens.

A highlight of the concert will be "Laude," a new work by American composer Howard Hanson. The composition was commissioned by the College Band Directors National Association.

The concert will also include "Alleluia! Laudamus Te" by Alfred Reed, "Satiric Dances" by Norman Dello Joio, "Capriccio Concertant" by Francis McBeth, "Four Cornish Dances" by English composer Malcolm Arnold, and "Silver Sleigh" by Caesar Giovannini.

Verdi opera at Music Center

The New York City Opera will open its third week at the Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center with a performance of Verdi's "La Traviata" at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Maralin Niska will essay the role of Violetta. Alfredo will be sung by Lando Bartolini, Pablo Elvira sings the elder Germont, and Alan Baker will be heard as the Baron Douphol. Judith Somogi will conduct.

Beverly Sills will be heard in the first of three performances of the Boston Opera's production of Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," Sarah Caldwell conducting, on Wednesday. Diane Curry will be heard as Berta, Richard Fredricks as Figaro, Spiro Malas as Don Bartolo, Henry Price as Aimaviva and Samuel Ramey as Don Basilio.

Bizet's "Carmen" will be sung in French on Thursday with Olivia Stapp in the title role, Glenys Fowles as Micaela, Ermanno Mauro as Don Jose, Richard Fredricks as Escamillo, Richard McKee as Zuniga and Thomas Jamerson as Morales. Imre Pallo will conduct.

J. Strauss' "Die Fledermaus" will be heard in English on Friday with Ilona Simon, Gianna Rolandi, Charles Roe, David Griffith, Dominic Cossa, David Rae Smith and Malas in the principal roles, Pallo conducting.

"Il Barbiere di Siviglia" is repeated at the Saturday matinee with the same cast as above. On Saturday evening, Puccini's "Turandot" receives its last performance of the season. Miss Niska (in place of Earline Ballard) will be heard in a debut performance in the title role. The other principals are Sung Sook Lee, Mauro, Jamerson and Ramey, Pallo conducting.

Offenbach's "La Belle Helene" repeats at the Sunday matinee with Carole Farley, Price, James Billings, Howard Hensel and McKee, Miner conducting. On Sunday night, Wagner's "Der Fliegende Hollander" will be heard in German with Johanna Meier, Sandra Walker, Guillermo Sarabia, William Wilderman and Stan Unruh, Pallo conducting.

Library to offer sacred music

Soprano Carol Pearson will present a program of early American sacred music, including selections from the historic Bay Psalm Book, at the Huntington Library in San Marino at 1:30 and 2:30 p.m. Wednesday. Admission is free.

The Bay Psalm Book, published in 1640, was the first book printed in the American colonies. The Huntington Library owns one of the 12 copies still in existence.

Les Ballets de Trockadero de Monte Carlo

Male ballet troupe stays on its toes

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Natch Taylor, costume designer and ballet director, reverently fingered a tiny, yellowing cloud of tulle from a collection of dance costumes worn by prima ballerina Anna Pavlova.

"I'm always looking for ideas," he said, holding it up to his 6½-foot frame. "How would this look in a slightly larger size?"

He was serious.

That night, there he was, tutued and toe-shoed, chest hair curling seductively from his bodice, dancing as "Suzina LaFuzziovitch" on the stage of the University of California's Zellerbach Auditorium.

A curious crowd of students, professors, dance aficionados and couples with children showed up to giggle through the frequently unsettling spectacle of men dressed as ballerinas, mincing across stage on point and leaping into the arms of dance partners far smaller than they.

Based in culture-unshockable New York, the touring Trocks pirouetted before audiences in the Midwest before traveling here to the fringe of the nation. At most of the stops, dance critics filed in to watch and write serious commentary on the ballerinos' artistry and comedy.

One prestigious New York critic endangered detente by writing that the Trockadero dancer performing the travesty version of "Don Quixote" outpointed Russian ballerina Nina Sorokina, dancing the role "straight" with the Bolshoi Ballet across town.

"There are very few dance companies and individuals that get the serious attention that we've gotten," said Trock general manager Eugene McDougle, a trace of wonder in his voice.

But then, dancing is serious business, even if your leaps are calculated to look like something out of a high hurdles race and your partner spins you like a barstool.

"This is not something one does as a joke," McDougle said, not quite smiling. "We take our comedy very seriously. Comedians will practice and practice every little gesture to get it right."

Travesty dancing has come a long way from ballet's Romantic Period in the 19th Century, when the toe shoe was on the other foot. Then, when style and technique were everything and the ballerina reigned supreme, male dancers seemed superfluous. Their roles were taken by women, and men appeared only as character actors or porteurs to carry the sylphlike ballerina across the stage.

"We're not trying to be female impersonators," said Taylor. "We make no bones about our hairy chests and hairy armpits. We're impersonating a machine, making a joke on the ballerina who is herself a machine."

Critics have glowed about the obvious mastery of ballet theory and technique that underlies the Trockaderos' buffoonery.

"The Monte Carlo is the creation of ballet fanatics," wrote Ariene Croce in New Yorker magazine. "They've seen the performances, memorized the steps, read the books, listened to the music ... and turned the whole scorching performance inside out."

It is a comedy of near misses; subtle, in spite of the hairy chests, wigs and exaggerated makeup.

Anybody's who's seen Swan Lake, Taylor said, knows there's a number where ballerinas float across the stage in pantomime of swans swimming across a lake.

"We take it one step farther," Taylor said. "The Trocks do the crawl and the dog paddle."

The Trocks even get a laugh from the stage names they have chosen for themselves: "Vanya Verikosa," "Vera Namethatunova," and "Olga Tchikaboumskaya," who the program says defected from Russia by disguising herself as a bale of wheat.

Taylor said the Trocks, going on their ninth season in New York, will keep it up "as long as there are people who want to have a good time and laugh at our jokes."

As for himself, Taylor — whose size makes him a logical candidate to dance male roles in partner to the leaps and twirls of the Trockaderos' prima donalds — figures travesty dancing is good training.

"There aren't that many male dancers who are good at being partners."

Concert slated at LVC

The La Verne College music department will present its winter concert in Founders Hall at 8 p.m. Friday. Admission is free.

The concert will feature the college choir and chamber singers, directed by James Fahringer and instrumental ensembles directed by David Evans. Arra Avakian, professor of the American Armenian University, is the guest director of the choir which will sing Armenian Christmas in Armenian.

The major work on the program will be "Cermony of Carols" by Benjamin Britten with the Chamber Singers and Mary Dropkin, harpist. Other composers represented at the concert include Charpentier, Frankenpohl, Lully, Pergolesi and Victoria.

GARDEN OF EDEN — Cindy Yost and Paul Kruip portray Eve and Adam in "Back to the Garden," an original pop opera by Sid Smolen in the Little Theater at Mt. San Antonio College at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and the following weekend.

MSAC to present original pop opera

Sid Smolen's pop opera, "Back to the Garden," will have its world premiere in the Little Theater at Mt. San Antonio College at 8 p.m. Friday. The performance will be repeated at the same time Saturday and Dec. 10 and 11.

"Garden," the first of three productions scheduled this year by the MSAC Players, is directed by guest director Antonia Zbranek. It will be the college entry in the American College Theater Festival.

"Garden" will feature the combined talents of the MSAC drama and music departments, with Smolen, who is an artist-in-residence at the college this year, as music director.

Smolen has written many songs and has performed in night clubs around the country for a number of years, but "Garden" is his first full-length production. Written in the contemporary idiom, "Garden" is a balance of words and music which are thought-provoking and entertaining. The composer is proficient on guitar, clarinet, base and piano.

Zbranek, a theater arts doctoral candidate at USC last year directed USC's production of Woody Allen's newest play, "Death." She has worked with the Dallas Theater Center, performing the part of Emily in Thorton Wilder's "Our Town," and with the Greek National Theater.

The lead role of Adam will be played by Paul Kruip. Smolen's singing partner, who will also be assistant music director. Gary Toops, music instructor, will serve as music conductor, with Gary Davis, drama instructor, as technical director.

Tickets at $1.25 for general admission and $1 for students, may be ordered by calling the Little Theater, Ext. 236, between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Charlton Heston

THRIVES ON DANGER — Charlton Heston, right, is in jeopardy in most of his films, and the formula pays off well. Here he portrays a police captain searching for a sniper at a football game in "Two-Minute Warning." John Cassavetes, left, is a SWAT leader.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charlton Heston plus jeopardy — that's the magic formula of success that has been discovered by the computer-minded bosses of Universal Pictures.

First it was Heston vs. a disabled 747 jetliner in "Airport 1975." A remarkable hit for a sequal — $25.7 domestic rentals. Then it was Heston vs. earthquake and dambreak in "Earthquake" ($36 million domestic rentals). Next he took on the Japanese navy in "Midway," already $19.5 million domestic.

The indominable star is now working at Universal in "Gray Lady Down," which does not concern Central Park muggers but is a saga of efforts to rescue a sunken nuclear submarine. And this month in the nation's theaters Heston can be seen in "Two-Minute Warning" as a Los Angeles police captain in search of a sniper who panics a football crowd at the Coliseum.

"I suppose there is a common denominator of the five pictures — hopefully it's success," commented the actor, at 52 still physical enough to handle any emergency.

"But there are differences. Two of the pictures were disaster films, two were 'event' films, and I guess 'Midway' could be called a historical movie. But I don't try to analyze them too much. I'm afraid to rock the boat."

Gazing back on a 50-film career in which he has done everything from racing chariots to parting the Red Sea, Heston remarked: "If I ever write my autobiography, I have a title for it: 'A Gallon of Spirit Gum, a Barrel of Blood.' That's what I have used in my lifetime.

"To the drama student, the smell of spirit gum you use to attach beards is exciting. 'This is it' you say. Now I am so goddam tired of it I can't stand the smell. The worst is when you're sitting on a mountain slope at 5:30 in the morning in 30-degree weather and the makeup man puts the spirit gum under your nose." Defensively, Heston grew his own beard for "Gray Lady Down."

"Two-Minute Warning" has already drawn critical potshots for its depiction of violence, a common target in films nowadays. Heston is sensitive about the criticisms.

"A few years ago I was making a picture with Walter Seltzer called 'Skyjacked,' he said. "I said I wanted to make sure that the film would not convince anyone that it would be a cute idea to hijack a jetliner. For that reason, the hijacker (James Brolin) was portrayed as a mean s.o.b. who deserved what he got."

The film recently played to high ratings on television, retitled "Sky Terror," said Heston, "since 'Skyjacked' is a no-no word because of all the airline commercials on TV."

He added that he harbored reservations about "Two-Minute Warning."

"I didn't want it to be like 'Taxi Driver' and 'Dog Day Afternoon,' which flirted dangerously with making acts of terrorism attractive, I don't mean to detract from the truly remarkable performances of Robert DeNiro and Al Pacino. But when you empathize with their characters it is difficult not to sympathize with them.

"'Two-Minute Warning' is entirely the opposite. You hardly ever see the sniper; you see what he sees. The focus of concern is on the cop and the other characters. If the film has a comment, it tells of the terrifying contagion of violence in our society."

The film was directed by Larry Peerce ("The Other Side of the Mountain") and pits Heston as the cool cop vs. John Cassavetes, who is eager to move in with his S.W.A.T. team. Among the victims and bystanders are Martin Balsam, Beau Bridges, Marilyn Hassett, David Janssen, Jack Klugman, Walter Pidgeon, Gena Rowlands, Brock Peters a David Groh.

Paramount has also made a movie about terrorism in a football stadium, "Black Sunday" based on the best-selling novel of the same name. The company says its film won't be released until February and maybe not until next summer.

Suez building program hits a financial snag

SUEZ, EGYPT (AP) — The cities of the Suez Canal have been largely rebuilt three years after the last war with Israel, and almost 900,000 people have returned to their homes. But long-range plans to develop the region remain in doubt.

The Egyptian government has spent about a billion dollars in reconstruction of Suez, Ismailia and Port Said, the canal's three main cities, and a dozen villages in between, but the reconstruction budget has been running at a deficit in recent months, sources here say.

They give this as the main reason for the recent resignation of Osman Ahmed Osman, the building contractor named minister of reconstruction a week after the fighting stopped in October 1973.

He had been promised allocations for this year of some $750 million but by late August had received only one-third this sum. His contracting company, which erected the Aswan High Dam and did most of the work on the canal cities, is finding itself painfully stretched, the source said.

Only a very small start has been made on the plans for the next 25 years, which envisage turning the entire canal region into an urbanized industrial and agricultural strip of 2.5 million people. The plans, according to the foreign experts who drew them up, are to cost an additional $12 billion.

Neverthless, the canal region is alive again because of the program of rebuilding areas that were 85 per cent destroyed in Suez and 20 per cent in each of Ismailia and Port Said. attack in the 1967 and 1973 wars with Israel. A million inhabitants were evacuated to towns in the Nile Valley.

The rebuilding of the cities and the return of their people was at least an implied condition of the Sinai disengagement agreements. Under the terms negotiatied by U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the Israelis withdrew to positions 20 miles east of the canal.

"We rebuilt 7,000 housing units in Suez, 6,000 in Ismailia and 4,000 in Port Said," said Hasaballah Kafrawy, head of the Executive Authority for the Reconstruction of the Canal Cities. "Some 55,000 apartments, 210 schools and 46 hospitals were repaired."

Even so, he added, 45,000 housing units are needed in the three cities before their populations can be adequately housed and proper services provided.

Suez had a 1967 population of 250,000, of which some 200,000 persons have returned.

"Services are lagging seriously in Suez," said Kafrawy, "and much work remains to be done. We hope all the prewar population will be back by the end of next year, if funds are available."

In Ismailia, 220,000 people are living in homes, or 77,000 more than there were in 1967. But overcrowding is serious, although economic activity is greater than in Suez because of large tracts of agricultural land surrounding the city.

President Anwar Sadat declared the whole of Port Said a "free trade city" last January. That means goods can be sold for hard currency free of customs duties, and industrialists were invited to set up assembly plants and transhipment facilities.

Kafrawy said there are 360,000 persons in Port Said, 80,000 more than in 1967. But again there is overcrowding. Water is cut off several hours a day because of a shortage and there are power failures.

Only some 40 firms have set up business in the areas allotted for outside investment. These are all warehousing activities and local officials say not a single industrial project has yet been established.

The Port Said free trade zone is meant to be a chief element in the growth of the canal region. Industries elsewhere are to benefit to some extent from plans.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A neurologist investigating PBB contamination says doctors are finding a high incidence of central nervous system disorders among Michigan farmers.

Dr. Sidney Diamond, a neurologist with a 35-member team from New York, said he has encountered card players who can no longer keep track of their playing hands, long-time farmers who can't plow a straight furrow, and drivers with formerly spotless records who suddenly began getting tickets and having minor accidents.

Diamond, whose team has been examining farmers and their families at Kent Community Hospital here, made clear that he is not certain the disturbances are related to PBB.

"We're not sold," Diamond said. But he said it is possible the problems are related to the contamination which resulted from the accidental mixing of PBB (polybrominated biphenyl), a fire-retarding chemical, with cattle feed in 1973.

Diamond said he had seen farmers with defects in memory and some who apparently had lost intellectual capacity and coordination.

Other farmers, Diamond said, experienced numbness, periods of unconsciousness, unexplained irritability and shortened attention spans.

Dr. Irving Selikoff, head of the research team funded by the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, said the group will have to compare lab data on PBB content in the bodies of those tested with results of the neurological tests before any conclusions can be drawn.

"There are a lot of things like pesticides or fertilizers on the farms these people come from which could cause this to happen," Selikoff said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. diplomats, trying to head off any price increase by the oil exporting countries, are warning that higher oil prices would seriously hurt economies around the world by fanning inflation and stalling growth.

The oil exporting countries, affiliated in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), are schedued to meet Dec. 15 in Qatar in the Persian Gulf, and oil prices are expected to be on the agenda.

U.S. diplomats say if OPEC boosts prices by 15 per cent, for example, it would mean a $5.5 billion increase in the American oil bill. That in turn would raise the U.S. inflation rate from its current 6 per cent to 7 per cent and cut the economic growth rate of 4 per cent to 3.4 per cent.

Although the OPEC countries have not announced what price decisions will be made next month, there has been speculation price increases could go as high as 20 per cent. The Shah of Iran has suggested a 15 per cent hike.

U.S. officials say they are unwilling to concede there will defintely be a price hike and that the economic impact of such a step up may persuade OPEC countries to desist.

Government economic projections indicate the most serious effects of a big price boost would be felt in England and Italy, which are already suffering inflationary woes.

Meanwhile, the Financial Times of London reported today that the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development is forecasting a world recession for the second half of next year. This forecast by the organization, composed of the major Western industrialized nations and Japan, is aimed at persuading OPEC to moderate future oil price increases.

The newspaper said that the recession forecast is being used by "high-level international officials to back up intense diplomatic activity" directed at the OPEC nations.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Robert Funseth argued against any oil price increases by asserting that it would hurt OPEC countries also.

"They are part of the world economy as well," Funseth said. The OPEC countries have cited international inflation to justify past increases, but Funseth said the four-fold price increase imposed by the oil cartel since 1973 more than compensates for the higher import costs to them.

Funseth declined comment on a report that high administration officials want to threaten Iran with a reduction in U.S. arms sales in retaliation for higher oil prices.

The report said that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has rejected such a step in the past but might reconsider now because of the deteriorating worldwide economic situation.

From cows to claret

Cattleman switches to wine grape growing

OAKVILLE (AP) — Don Sokol jokingly concedes he may have left the proverbial frying pan and climbed into the fire when he quit the troubled cattle business to become a wine-grape grower.

"I guess I make some facetious remarks about going from one depressed industry to another," said Sokol with a hearty laugh.

"But I wanted to inject some uncertainty into the thing because it was certain I was going to lose money in the cattle business and here I've got a fighting chance."

Sokol sold off a 15,000-acre cattle ranch near Prairie City, Ore., in 1973, and after two years of personal business bought a prime 80-acre vineyard here in the midst of the Napa Valley, home of California's most famous wineries.

He took over the vineyards during the 1975 harvest and finds with other growers that inflated costs and deflated grape prices have combined with difficult weather to make 1976 a less than vintage year for the farmers.

Crops are down as much as 50 to 60 per cent, depending on the grape variety and area, due to a prolonged drought and untimely heat early in the growing season. And while according to early indications prices are up from 1975, growers don't think it's enough to compensate for smaller production and higher costs for labor, equipment and other expenses.

Sokol immediately became involved with the Napa Valley Grape Growers Association. He says a survey by the group showed that being a vineyard owner may very well be an expensive bit of prestige.

"The survey showed that out-of-pocket expenses to grow the grapes and get them to the winery is slightly over $800 an acre," he said.

"If you add on things like taxes, interest, depreciation and so on you come up with a real cost on the average of $1,200 an acre. If you need $1,200 an acre for costs alone, you can see if you want a return on your investment you've got to get more ... probably gross around $1,600 an acre before there's much return."

That means to break even at the $1,200 point, a vineyard must produce an average of four tons an acre. The grapes must sell for $300 a ton.

"The average published price for Chardonnay, which makes the finest white wines, was $350 a ton in 1975," Sokol said of the grape that frequently produces around two tons an acre.

The high-water mark for grape prices was 1973 when the two top quality grapes, Chardonnay and Cabernet Sauvignon, fetched as much as $1,000 a ton. That dropped to around $350 a ton in 1975 and preliminary 1976 prices range around $400 to $425 for Cabernet Sauvignon.

The growers' survey, covering about one-third of the some 16,000 vineyard acres in the valley, was taken "because we wanted to find out if on the average vineyards were a paying proposition," said Sokol.

"And we found out that on the average, they were not. That doesn't mean an exceptional operator can't make a go of it. But the average is losing money and the below average really losing money."

Supply and demand has something to do with it. Although tonnage per acre is down, the Napa Valley has gone from 8,967 acres of bearing vineyards in 1966 before the big wine boom to 16,161 in 1975 — with another 6,895 planted but not in production.

Many wineries have their own vineyards and are aware of costs involved. "I think some of them are finding they can purchase grapes cheaper than they can grow them themselves," Sokol said.

And while wineries may be sympathetic to the problems of their suppliers, they say there isn't much they can do about it."

Gerry Gleason, spokesman for Christian Brothers, the largest single owners of vineyard land in the Napa Valley, said, "We can see it from both sides. We have our own grapes and we buy from growers.

"The growers tell us what it costs them and we know they're right because it costs us the same, and we can't afford it either. But to really raise the prices would be underwriting the growers and that is also something we can't afford."

Sokol noted grape growers aren't alone with rising costs and lower prices, it's just that vineyards sound more romantic than celery.

Bearing vineyard land in the Napa Valley sells for around $8,000 to $8,500 an acre with minimum 20-acre parcels. Open land suitable for vineyards but without any improvements runs for from $4,000 to $4,500 an acre. It costs approximately $5,500 an acre to prepare the land, plant vines, install trellises and frost protection — either sprinklers or large wind movers.

"Then, although you've got $10,000 an acre invested, there's a waiting period until the fourth year for full production," he said.

Some speculative vineyards, along with some older ones producing poorly, have been uprooted and replaced with other crops.

What's in the future?

Wineries feel a simple answer is for them to sell more wine, meaning they will buy more grapes. The current white wine popularity has helped growers with those grapes, but red wine sales are lagging.

That leaves the grape grower hanging for the time being while his costs continue to increase.

"Like the old cowboy said," said Sokol, "there's two ways of licking this thing: We either make more money — or we spend less."

Italy declares war on tax evasion

And once again the fear is that the new rules may be "Italianized" before all Italians can be taxed effectively.

A lot rides on the success or failure of the intensified war on tax evaders.

If the minority government of Christian Democrat Premier Giulio Andreotti succeeds in a task that has proved trying to strongmen from the Caesars to Mussolini, Italy may emerge from its current fiscal malaise a healthy nation. It may break even or put some funds aside rather than add to its $16 billion foreign debt.

Tax evasion last year — mostly by the big and small industrialists, the commercial establishment and the self-employed — is estimated by labor sources and financial experts at the equivalent of about $12 billion, equaling the state's deficit for the year. The government discloses no figures on tax evasion although acknowledging it as Italy's No. 1 problem.

Andreotti, surviving in office through the abstentions of the big Communist party in Parliament, has put collection at the top of his "obligatory priorities" if Italy is to avoid financial collapse. He vowed: "The state will collect from everyone what is its due."

Last year the government's tax revenue was $24 billion, but over a half of it, $14 billion, came from the salaried workers, while about $5.5 billion came from industrialists and $3.5 billion from the professional class of doctors, lawyers, engineers and architects.

As part of its crackdown, the government plans to make doctors' fees tax deductable so that as patients claim them, they will also disclose to finance inspectors the names of their physicians and how much they were paid.

There still is no real estate tax on the house occupied by the owner, but other houses owned by him will be taxed as another measure to corner the rich, who are now under fire for not bearing the tax burden.

Lately, an array of personnel has been deployed to check on those who bypass sales taxes. And along the Thyrrenian and the Adriatic coasts, port officials have already impounded scores of yachts owned by Italians but which fly foreign flags to escape taxes.

Hundreds of vessels of the yacht set tacked away from the taxmen and are now moored on the French side of the Riviera.

Previous governments have been resigned to Italians' antitax feelings. The state-run television system, for instance, offers prizes to those who pay their $20 annual license fee through a lottery from paid returns.

"I try to cheat and I succeed," confesses one Roman. "My reasoning is simple: I am not sure if the state will put my money to good use."

Some Milan businessmen say they pay so much in bribes that there seems little reason to pay the right amount of taxes.

"You have tax consultants," author Franco Valobra told an American. "We have tax evasion consultants. The function of both is to help their clients, in your case to make sure that you pay next to nothing and have it smuggled abroad."

Estimates of the flight of capital abroad in the past 10 years have been put at $30 billion.

Only five years ago a citizen had to pay 38 different taxes. Last year joint returns were decreed compulsory but this year were ruled unconstitutional, partly because they infringed on the financial independence of women and partly because accumulated returns pushed a couple's earning to a higher tax bracket.

It was not until 1974 that Italy instituted the full payroll deduction system.

The stars in the game are still the very rich. According to one study in the independent leftist weekly Panorama, 90 per cent of industrialists who filed put their annual income under $12,000 and 92 per cent of self-employed professionals at below $5,000 a year, both considered low even for an average monthly income.

Bridge by Jacobys

By OSWALD & JAMES JACOBY

The late Walter F. Wyman of Boston was a regular contributor to the early Bridge World magazines. Not only was he a fine player and writer, but a delightful person and a great gentleman.

The bidding may be explained in part by the fact that North and South had a 40-point part score, so that two spades made game.

North really should have bid three spades over the lastditch three clubs bid by Mr. Wyman who sat West, but this was 1930 and people were afraid of overcalls. Anyway, North did pass and South tried three diamonds which became the final contract.

Against the normal lead of the nine of hearts (no one had tried the lead of third best from three back then) East would try to cash three heart tricks. South would ruff, draw trumps and wind up with game and rubber.

The normal lead was not made. Walter led his ace of spades first. Then he shifted to a heart. East won and led back a spade. It was obvious to East that Walter had led a singleton ace. It was equally obvious to South who played low. Walter took his queen, put his partner back in with a second heart and set the contract by means of a spade ruff.

Ask the Jacobys

We continue to get questions about how far the bidding should be carried when there is a part score and the opener makes a forcing two bid.

The answer to this question is that responder must bid once, but may pass opener's minimum rebid of his own suit.

Computers becoming big hobby business

LOS ANGELES — (BW) — Will the hobby of computing become bigger than photography by 1985?

Will the general public latch on to the fun and games that are possible with computers?

"The computer industry is entering its first consumer Christmas season and it will undoubtedly be a big one," said Ryal R. Poppa, president and chief executive officer of Pertec Computer Corp.

Christmas season for the computer industry?

"During the past year, an increasing number of computer hobby shops have opened across the country. Chains of stores have opened, such as the Byte Shop and The Computer Store. An individual can now buy a microprocessor and build his own computer and system for less than $3,000," Poppa said.

And all of this is happening at an uncommon rate, he added. So far this year the computer hobbyist has spent an estimated $15 million and will spend at least that much in the next three months.

"That isn't enough to put computing in the league of photography, hi-fidelity, or even art. But it is enough to make a lot of companies take note of the trend and the industry," Poppa said.

Pertec Computer, which manufactures minicomputer perpheral devices and a type of computer memory device called the "Floppy Disk," is one of the first major corporations to move into the personal computer business.

Pertec achieved this through the August acquisition of Icom, a pioneer manufacturer of tiny peripherals and subsystems for microprocessor-based systems. Unlike many of the firms supplying the personal computer market, Icom was a strong operation when Pertec computer bought it last summer.

"A lot of the existing companies in the hobby-oriented or personal computing market won't survive. Their quality control, cost analysis, pricing and marketing programs are all typical of garage operations.

"If the business booms, the surge will leave them unable to deliver. If it settles back down, they may be caught with closets filled with spare parts, raw materials and future prototypes.

"I feel it is too soon to determine how much of a market for computers will develop at the personal level. For Pertec and Icom the personal computer market is a bonus on top of a growing demand for microprocessor-based peripherals in industrial applications," he said.

Before being acquired by Pertec Computer, Icom went from start-up to a $4 million a year sales rate in just two years. And, the company was quite profitable, Poppa said.

"We can see a future market of a billion dollars a year for microprocessors — those computers on a postage stamp-sized chip," Poppa said. "And for us this will mean millions of dollars in orders from microprocessor-based systems users, such as automobile manufacturers, chemical plants, hospitals, financial institutions — any place where low-cost intelligence can improve a service, a product or a manufacturing process."

Will the fun of computing also yield a second enormous market?

"We'll know more about that after Christmas 1976 and 1977," Poppa said.

Sharing job new business approach

PALO ALTO (AP) — A job can be a drag.. But how about half a job?

A number of employes, ranging from housewives who want a little extra money to seasoned executives who want a little less work, are finding that sharing a job gives them a shot at the best of both worlds.

And although employers aren't jumping head first into job sharing, many say it gives them two alert and eager workers instead of one whose enthusiasm and efficiency inevitably declines on Friday afternoon.

Karen Paulsen, who has been sharing a receptionist's job with high school friend Julie Manchester at Alza Corp. here for six months, says the arrantement allows her to take care of business at home and the office.

"I have a little girl so I was interested in a job that would allow me to be a mother at the same time," she says, adding. "It works out famously. You're here for four hours and it doesn't get drawn-out. You can greet people enthusiastically because you're not bored."

Ted Stephens, manager of compensation and benefits at Alza, thinks job sharing makes workers more productive because they can work out their own schedules.

"Some people just don't function well at eight in the morning," he says. "Some do best at 7 p.m. Why not give them that choice?"

David Edwards, special projects editor for Hudson Publishing, which puts out home improvement books and magazines, had 90 people apply for an assistant editor's job but decided to pick a pair.

"I've got a position where I've got to bounce ideas off my people," says Edwards. "I felt I was getting two heads instead of one. There are no serious drawbacks. The only thing is that if I leave a message for one assistant, I have to be very sure it's relayed correctly. Otherwise, it comes out like the old telephone game — more and more garbled."

Michael Closson of New Ways to Work, a nonprofit vocational resource center serving the Bay Area, says public employers have been more receptive to job sharing than private firms.

"I think they're more prepared to take risks," says Closson, adding that the City of Palo Alto alone has nine shared jobs.

Although New Ways to Work offers counseling to both employes and employers on how to make job sharing work, Closson says some companies just can't get with the program.

"It's mostly conservatism," he says, "being locked into the idea of 40 hours a week. Most people who work temporary jobs have been considered temporary and not really committed to the job. But we're seeing quite a trend among people who want to work parttime."

Richardson plans meet

BELGRADE, Yogoslavia (AP) — Elliot Richardson, the United States secretary of commerce, will meet with government and economic leaders here today as part of his 16-day tour of Europe and North Africa.

Richardson flew from Budapest to Belgrade on Thursday to discuss investment and trade issues.

He is scheduled to stop in Morocco and Portugal on the way home.

Woman marine pushed out of window

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A young woman marine is in critical condition when she was allegedly pushed out the fifth-floor window of a hotel near the Los Angeles International Airport.

Pfc. Jody McCracken, 18, of Omer, Mich., said she had just checked into the hotel when the incident occurred Tuesday night. Police said she was unable to name her assailant, but indicated that an argument had ocurred just before.

Britons see nothing but disaster ahead

LONDON (AP) — "The future don't hold anything."

Bob d'Angelo sat back in his chair and looked around the quiet pub for someone to disagree with his sweeping prognosis of Britain. Nobody did.

A brooding pessimism as to the future of this country was the most striking feature in a series of informal conversations with pubgoers in one of London's more typical, lower working class pubs.

There's a deep belief that — as grim as things are here — they're going to get grimmer. And while many blame the government for their problems many also blame themselves.

"Nobody can help us out," explained James Butler as he sat with his wife Rose. "It will get worse and worse. Soon people won't be able to live here."

The Butlers used to come to their local tavern, the Gloucester Arms in Kentish Town just north of central London, three or four times a week. Now they come only once. He makes $81.60 a week as a truck driver, and with prices as high as they are now, they can afford only one night out a week.

Of their $81 the Butlers spend $32 for rent and another $32 for food. That leaves them $17 for the gas and electricity bills, clothing and entertainment.

"It's very bad," said Mrs. Butler. "Prices are going up week after week. You can't budget anymore."

"If you've got three little children and can't work, I don't know how you'd eat," said Joyce Trusler, as she sat at one of the six small round tables that dot the pub.

In less than two years the pound has dropped in value from $2.35 to $1.60, causing prices for almost everything to soar.

Everyone has their own idea of why the economy has deteriorated. Some blame the European Common Market, which Britain joined in 1973. Others blame the decimal system of currency which Britain adopted in 1970.

But almost all point to three problems they feel are most responsible for the current situation. These are the number of immigrants coming into Britain, the misuse of the social welfare system and finally, themselves.

"There are too many lazy people here," said Michael Lay who owns a pub further down the road. "We're spoiled here. Too many benefits."

"Things won't get better here," said the man as he took a long draw of his beer. "We've created a nation of fiddlers."

"We're still the greatest country in the world as far as technology goes," he said, "but we don't use it. You must have incentive. Without it nobody works, nobody invests."

He claims that the high tax rate here (as much as 83 per cent) has discouraged personal incentive.

"We blame ourselves for letting the government do what they want," said David Shaw, a truck driver. "People just haven't stuck together."

Since the 1950s a considerable number of immigrants from the West Indies, Asia and Africa have entered Britain. At the time of the 1971 census it was estimated that about 1.5 million nonwhite Commonwealth immigrants and their families were living here, and this is mentioned by many as one of the causes of Britain's economic decline.

"If we took all the immigrants out of this country we'd be 100 per cent better off," said Butler. "Enoch Powell has the right idea."

Powell is a maverick British polititon who calls for a halt to immigration and the expatriation of current immigrants.

"I think the government is too lenient to people," said Helen Drennen as she sipped her wine. "This is the only country that welcomes people with open arms."

Drive-ins lose their popularity

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Back in the Golden '60s, cars used to line up for blocks around Mel's Drive-In, waiting for the opportunity to buy 35-cent hamburgers served by 15 scantily clad carhops.

"There were five policemen directing traffic. Everyone loved it," recalled Mel Weiss, whose operation once sold 3,000 meals a day.

Mel's Drive-In was turned into a parking lot a few months ago, mirroring a national trend away from curbside dining.

Weiss, who in 1947 founded the once-popular gathering place for teenagers and families, sold his chain of 30 drive-ins four years ago. His flagship restaurant on South Van Ness was a key locale for the movie "American Graffiti," a nostalgic look at an era when drive-ins were teen-age social centers.

The film was actually based on goings-on in Modesto, site of Burgies' and Al's Drive-in. That, too, closed down years ago.

Like their counterparts around the country, Mel's and Burgies' have been replaced by fast-food franchises that dispense across-the-counter hamburgers, tacos and fried chicken to take out.

Royce Hailey claims to have introduced curbside food service to the world in 1921 with a drive-in near Dallas. At one time he had 70 Pig Stands from Los Angeles to New York, but most have since been converted to coffee shops and only five still have curb service.

A major reason for the demise of the drive-in was the appeal they held for teen-agers, Hailey said.

"There were disruptions by the teen-agers, and we lost some adult customers because of that," he said. "The teens liked to be seen, and would spend more time than money there. That made it unprofitable."

Weiss said: 'I think the problem was that years ago, people felt very secure in eating at drive-ins. But in the last few years, there was a fear, for some reason, and people weren't comfortable eating outside."

"The old-fashioned drive-in of yesteryear has gone by the wayside," said W. H. "Buckshot" Price, executive vice president of the Texas Restaurant Association. "What a shame. Kids enjoyed them. So did mothers with kids who didn't want to have to haul them inside a restaurant."

Price said a few enterprising businessmen are keeping the idea alive, updating drive-ins with fancy designs and putting curbside waitresses on roller skates. Two such drive-ins in Austin, Tex. are doing a "booming business," he said.

There are economic reasons for the shift, too. A recent Bank of America report on restaurants said drive-ins average profit rates of 6 to 12 per cent, compared with fast-food profit rates of 10-20 per cent.

Taxes are 2 to 3 per cent of the operating cost for drive-ins because they need more property, double the rate for other restaurants, the study said, noting that payrolls at drive-ins tend to be higher.

No one knows the precise extent of the drive-in decline. Susan Mills of the National Restaurant Association in Washington said restaurant statistics aren't compiled separately on drive-ins.

"It's obvious that drive-in establishments are disappearing," she said. "The trend is to fast-food chains that at most might have a drive-up window."

"There's not many left any more," said Rod Raskin of Bob's Big Boy. The chain has 930 restaurants across the United States and Canada, but only five are drive-ins.

"We haven't built a drive-in since 1964," said Raskin. "We closed one last year, and we won't build another."

One of the last holdouts is the Five-Spot, which opened in San Jose around 1937. Twenty years ago the Five-Spot was serving 800 meals a day, said Paul Watkins, head cook for 23 years. "It's down to about 150 a day, and falling," Watkins added.

"Back in the '50s it was four cars deep and double-parked in the street almost around the clock. We had four cooks in the kitchen, four hops on the lot and still couldn't keep up with the orders."

Will Rogers' wit remains timeless

CLAREMORE, Okla. (AP) — The ghost of Will Rogers spoke out, touching on presidential politics, liquor by the drink and death.

Not everyone heard him — only those who sought refuge Thursday in the reading room of the spacious Will Rogers Memorial.

Outside that room, the hoopla of the famed humorist's 97th birthday party was in full swing with music, songs and speeches.

But inside, Will's timeless remarks, written as long as half a century ago, seemed uncannily appropriate to the just-completed election as his admirers read them aloud.

He seemed to reminisce about the campaigns of President Ford and his successor, Gov. Jimmy Carter:

"The minute either one of those candidates started going into them states, they would lose 'em or pretty near lose 'em.

"I would have liked to have seen how this election would have gone if both guys had gone to Europe or some other place after the nominations. I bet it would have been a tie." (Nov. 18, 1928).

"The Democrats hope they will do something, but they fear they won't. They hope 50 per cent and they fear 50 (per cent). Now, you can't be any more fair than that, can you?" (March 5, 1933).

To those who would have complained regardless of which candidate won: "Every time we have an election, we get in worse men and the country keeps right on going. Times have proven one thing and that is you can't ruin this country ever, with politics." (Nov. 4, 1928).

Will added: "Political elections ... are a good deal like marriages, there's no accounting for anyone's taste." (May 10, 1925).

Typically, he had some advice to lend to the incoming chief executive: "Popularity is the easiest thing in the world to gain and it is the hardest thing to hold." (May 18, 1930).

And, just for fun, Will defined a Democrat: "He is a fellow who never had any (money) but doesn't see any reason why he shouldn't have some." (March 26, 1933).

Will, incidentally, didn't vote Tuesday or on any other election day:

"Nope, if this country goes to the bow-wows there ain't no one can blame me for it. I keep saying I'm a Democrat, but I ain't. I just pretend to be 'cause Democrats are funny and I'm supposed to be." (Jan. 26, 1933).

After the speeches were made and the songs were sung, the Pocahontas Women's Club — of which Will was an honorary member — placed a wreath on his tomb on the memorial grounds here.

"Why is it the good ones are the ones that go? That's one thing about an ornery guy, you never hear of him dying. He is into everything else but a coffin." (Jan. 25, 1931).

Soviet doctors

NEW YORK (AP) — Most doctors in the Soviet Union earn low pay and have little prestige, according to Medical World News.

The publication says about 70 per cent of the doctors who care for the health needs of the average Soviet citizen are women who earn about $150 a month.

CB alarms don't bother state police

WASHINGTON (AP) — What's a state trooper's reaction when he hears a citizens' band radio blaring out his location as he patrols the highway?

"I like Smokey reports," says Michigan State Police Lt. Rod LaMore. "There's nothing I dislike more than a CBer saying: 'It's clean and green, put the hammer down.' That means there are no policemen around."

That lack of policemen often means speeders, and that means traffic accidents, he and several other state police officials attending a recent CB-motorist aid conference said.

"Each time a Smokey call goes out, it's doing exactly what we want it to do," Cpl. Jerry Eiseman of the Maryland State Police told the conference sponsored by the Transportation Research Board. "When they give out our location, they're telling people where we are. Motorists then slow down and also know where help is if they need it."

"In the beginning," said Ron Sostkowski of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, "policemen looked down on CBers because of their detection and announcement of the location of police cars. There was little thought given, though, to the fact that traffic was slowing down in these areas (of such broadcasts)."

One exception, Eiseman said, is in some rural areas where often the state trooper is the only police official for miles. Then, such a CB report could alert criminals to police surveillance.

According to participants at the conference that include representatives from government, academia, the electronics industry and CBers themselves, more and more state police organizations are appreciating the aid CBers can provide motorists.

"There's nothing in sight to replace CB as a motorist aid," Eiseman says.

"We get faster responses to complaints received over CBs" because of quick access to the radio and fewer relay points, particularly when the trooper receives the call directly from the motorist, adds Lt. C. J. Hunter. His Ohio State Highway Patrol has equipped all of its cars with CB receivers.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol was the leader in equipping its patrol cars with CBs. Others such as Alabama and Ohio have since outfitted their cars with CBs. Maryland, New York and other states are testing CB effectiveness as a motorist aid.

Others such as Virginia still have reservations about CB-motorist aid value. And, said many conference participants, each jurisdiction must tailor its own program.

Do CBers accept police officials on the channels? According to Hunter, whose highway patrol advises motorists in billboard messages that it is monitoring the CB, they do.

"We've responded to over 92,000 CB calls through August of this year," he said.

Typical calls, the conference was told, include reports of speeders, drunk drivers, stranded motorists, objects blocking traffic, fires and various crimes.

Some CB calls are monitored directly by the police. Others are relayed by various private, volunteer organizations like REACT and ALERT that monitor CB distress calls.

Some policemen undoubtedly still do not like Smokey reports, although Alabama state trooper Lt. Billy Burch says most eventually get used to them.

And, according to Ohio's Lt. Hunter, the Smokey calls really are not that effective. Despite them, he said, "one-fourth of our traffic arrests in the last few years have been truck drivers," who broadcast many of the calls.

"I probably give more than anyone," just to slow down the traffic, says Michigan's Lt. LaMore, who often rides in unmarked cars.

Maryland's Cpl. Eleman, who calls himself the "Polar Bear" because of his white, unmarked car, says: "We encourage it in many areas." And he says CB-equipped troopers are listening to their radios.

"We monitor Channel 19 (the channel commonly used by the traveling public) because that's how we know where we're supposed to be."

Tiny town has unique distinction

GARDNERVILLE, Nev. (AP)— This tiny western Nevada town has a few thousand residents, some great Basque restaurants, a beautiful view of the eastern Sierra and a diamond cutting school.

Leonard Ludel, a third generation diamond cutter, says his institution is the only accredited one of its kind in the nation.

And he's not teaching his unique craft in New York, or Chicago or Los Angeles because he wants to live in Gardnerville.

Students from around the nation come here to learn how to turn nature's hardest substance into exquisite and glittering keepsakes.

Gardnerville is about one hour's drive south of Reno. Ranching is the economic mainstay of the area. Ludel hasn't exactly put his town on the map, but he does have perhaps Nevada's most unique school.

LAPD Unisex program ridiculed by both sexes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Unisex," a special hiring program begun by Los Angeles police in 1973 to give women the same chances as men for field patrol positions, is under attack by members of both sexes.

Police Cmdr. Peter Hagan says the program has led to a decrease in the number of policewomen because of the women's failure to pass police height, physical training and agility tests. He says the women would be better off in less demanding areas of police work.

On the other side, critics claim the requirements discriminate against women and they have filed a multi-million dollar civil rights suit against the city.

In the past three years, Unisex has produced 24 female police officers for jobs where before there were none. They trained with male recruits, passing the same height, agility and physical training tests.

On an overall basis, however, there were 159 women on the force, compared to 6,986 men, the year before the program started. Now there are 152 policewomen and 7,504 men.

Attorney Timothy Flynn, representing plaintiff Fanchon Blake, a retired LAPD sergeant, and four other policewomen in the sex discrimination suit, calls the Unisex program a failure that permits continued sex discrimination against women.

"Unisex has been a very bad joke," said Flynn. "For the last six consecutive years, the number of women on the Los Angeles police force has been decreasing, while all other major police departments in the country have been increasing the number of women."

Hagan said, "I think they (women) are physically incapable of performing some of the duties required of field patrol officers. Prior to Unisex the LAPD had a very good program for women. They were utilized in the juvenile detail, in the jail, and in the detective area.

"There is a place for women in police work, but it is not out in the radio car."

The two main issues in the dispute are the police department's minimum five-feet-four inch height standard for men and women, and a physical agility test that applicants must pass.

Police officials say the standards are necessary to ensure the safety of officers and citizens in case of violence. The critics say height and physical agility have little or no bearing on the performance of duties, serving mainly as a tool to exclude women from police field duty.

"Patrolmen, in only about two per cent of the situations, need to use force," said Hagan. "But when you have to use it, what is (a woman) going to do? Call back to the station to ask for muscle?

"I think that you're going to see a long period of no increase in policewomen on a proportional basis (with men). If we slacken our standards, then you'll see an increase."

Flynn, however, called police patrol work "sedentary in nature," with one of its biggest drawbacks being patrol personnel getting overweight and out of condition.

"And it's kind of peculiar," said Flynn, "that you demand a certain level of of upper body strength in the selection process of the job, but never test for it again."

Flynn said the physical agility test — which includes scaling a six-foot high wall — eliminates about 90 per cent of all female police patrol applicants, "while the height standard eliminates nearly all the rest."

Hagan says there is a height requirement because troublemakers would rather fight with a short officer than a tall one.

"A short person, whether male or female, is an invitation to trouble," Hagan said. "We know that a short person is more apt to get into physical altercations. If a big drunk isn't willing to be arrested peacefully, he is more apt to start trouble with a short officer."

Flynn disagrees.

"Studies in 1974 conducted by the California State Personnel Board on 90 police agencies — including the Los Angeles Police Department — showed there was no correlation between height and job performance," said Flynn.

"As for the claim that short people tend to get into fights, that just doesn't wash. There are no height requirements in most metropolitan police forces, including New York, Washington, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco — and none for the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department."

Hagan said another drawback of female field patrol officers is the possibility of police sex scandals between "healthy" male and female officers.

"I think most of us understand the chemical nature of human beings," said Hagan. "And I think it would be reasonable that if you have a healthy male and healthy female working together, something is likely to happen. They could turn an on-duty relationship into an off-duty incident.

"There is also the problem of the police officer who has a beautiful, woman partner and the officer's wife is at home with three children wondering, 'I wonder what they are doing now.'"

Flynn dismissed that concern as "foolish."

"Women today are working with men in all areas, and I don't accept that sex scandals are the necessary result of male-female working relationships."

Thais turning to 'Mechai Method' of birth control

BANG LAMUNG, Thailand (AP) — Not so long ago, Mechai Viravaidya was denounced as dirty-minded and antireligious, and jeered at for his publicity antics on behalf of a massive Thai, and Asia-wide, problem: too many people.

Today thousands of children, can chant Mechai's war song, "Lots of Children Make You Poor." Buddhist monks ceremonially bless birth control pills and interuterine devices At drugstores, a condum is known as a "Mechai".

Mechai, 35-year-old former economist, has in fact plotted and set in motion a revolution in Thailand, one he says can be launched in other crowded corners of the world.

Although he certainly can't take full credit, Mechai's methods have helped to make Thailand's relatively new birth control program into what a 1975 World Bank report describes as one of the most effective and innovative anywhere.

"Thailand even surprised itself," says one United Nations expert. The population growth rate has been lowered from a dangerously high 3.1 per cent to about 2.5 per cent over the past three years, and some government planning targets, such as sterlization, have had to be upped by as much as 200 per cent.

A recent government study concluded that even with maximum efforts for birth control, Thailand's present population of 42 million will probably soar to as many as 115 million by the turn of the century.

Regarding population control, Mechai says: "The answer had to come from the people themselves. The government had a good program but it didn't go far enough to the grass roots. Thai farmers are very success-oriented and could be made to see that having too many children might lead to ruin in a changing society."

So Mechai, a former government development expert who was educated in Australia, founded community-based planning services in 1973.

With a core group, he moved into villages and urban sectors to train shopkeepers, teachers, undertakers, traditional midwives — anyone, in fact, who commanded respect in the community.

The Mechai method has spread to about 20 per cent of Thailand's rural areas.

TOP RUSHER

Owls thrash SB

By TIM CLARK
PB Correspondent

Saturday night's Mission Bowl was no contest. The only real battle was that of man vs. nature (as in freezing!).

Weathering the unreal (for Southern California) elements, local fans were not dissapointed as they witnessed a 24-0 thrashing on the part of the mighty Owls of Citrus over Santa Barbara in the second Bowl classic.

It's a wonder that Citrus looked so good and no surprise Santa Barbara looked so bad, considering the North Pole conditions that existed. At one point in the evening the mercury dropped to 31 degrees, with a gusting wind of 20 miles per hour!

The Citrus defense undoubtedly spent its time on the sidelines cursing the Owl offense, who controlled the ball for 83 plays, thus keeping themselves quite warm while the defensive 11 froze, being able to participate in only 58 downs.

The Owls racked up 438 yards in total offense (392 rushing), including 27 first downs. Santa Barbara's offenive unit could only muster 190 yards in total offense and 10 first downs during its short visits to the gridiron, with the awesome Owl defense forcing eight turnovers, five via the pass interception. Each steal was a big one too, halting every legitimate Vaquero offensive drive.

Defensive back John Adams picked off two of the interceptions, hauling in the pigskin on his own 24 and four-yard lines, respectively. "Thumper" White picked off a Santa Barbara pass at his own 10, Kyle Haynes intercepted in the Citrus endzone, and Myron Bourne recorded a steal at his own 45.

The big story of the Mission Bowl, however, was the lightning-quick rushing attack of victorious Citrus, led by not Obie Graves or Dale Bunn, but Raymond Butler of Pomona High.

Butler, the 5-9, 165 pound sophomore "fullback," enjoyed his top rushing game in an Owl uniform, displaying the brilliance that had been predicted of him as a prep at Pomona. Butler romped for a season-high 188 yards on only 23 carries (8.1 avg.), 100 of those yards coming in the second half. As has been the case all year, Butler did all of his damage between the 10 yard-lines, allowing Obie Graves and Dale Bunn to have their patented scoring honors.

Graves got his licks in also, picking up 124 yards in 28 attempts, and scored his 16th and 17th touchdowns of the year on the ground. Obie winds up the year with 1,294 yards rushing, while Butler finishes with 761 yards.

Quarterback Bunn did not have exactly his top game of the year, but managed to complete four of his seven passes for 46 yards, but only picked up six yards rushing on 11 carries. Bunn did score the game's initial TD, sneaking over from one yard out with only 2:02 left in the first half. That score culminated a drive that started following Adams' second interception. Bunn also drove the Owls 74 and 80 yards for scores in the second half.

With the possibility of a Jr. Rose Bowl berth very dim, it looks as if the 1976 edition of Citrus football has come to an end. With the Mission Bowl victory, coach John Strycula and company wind up the campaign with an impressive 9-1-1 mark.

Trojans need two QBs to beat Irish

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Two good quarterbacks can be a detriment in professional football. But for USC, it saved the day.

In a game where Vince Evans reverted to his form of last year, backup signal caller Rob Hertel proved the key that unlocked the Trojan offense.

When it was all over, USC had prevailed, 17-13, over Notre Dame in a defensive titanic.

Hertel entered the game with 8:11 left to play in the first half. There was no score and the Trojans' offense had been pathetic. In 21 minutes and 49 seconds, Troy had a total net yardage of 34 with just one first down. Evans had completed but one of six passes for 12 yards and had fumbled the snap twice.

It was clearly time for a change. USC coach John Robinson thought so and made three switches. (1) Hertel for Evans at quarterback. (2) Ricky Bell moved from tailback to fullback replacing freshman Vic Jackson and (3) freshman Charles White replaced Bell at tailback.

It took the new unit one series, which netted only seven yards in three plays, to settle down. When USC got the the ball again, the new backfield was ready.

Notre Dame had used up some time driving to the Trojans' 23. Hertel used a little more by calling White's number twice for a pair of three-yard gainers.

With a third-and-four at his own 39-yard line, Hertel hit tight end Bill Gay over the middle at the 42. The 6-6, 225-pound junior headed for the north sideline then angled to his left and raced to the Irish 34. The play netted 27 yards and USC's second first down.

There was 1:19 left in the half. Hertel passed to Randy Simmrin for 11 yards and another first down at the 23. His next target was Shelton Diggs who picked up 10 yards and a first down at the Notre Dame 13.

Only 1:08 remained. The next pass to Diggs was incomplete. Simmrin got open in the end zone just across the goal line.

Hertel threw a high pass that the junior wide receiver leaped for and snared. But he jumped forward and when he came down on one foot, it was back out across the goalline. On a first and goal at the one-foot line, Hertel was rushed badly and tried to throw the ball out of bounds in the direction of Bell. But the big fullback got the ball and went out of bounds back at the six.

By coincidence, it was Hertel's eighth touchdown pass and Diggs' eighth touchdown reception.

It enabled USC to take a 7-0 lead into the lockerroom at halftime. Hertel did not get in again. Evans took the Trojans 80 yards in four plays including a 63-yard "bomb" to Simmrin to open the second half.

After the Irish had cut the margin to 14-7 in the fourth quarter, Evans drove USC 52 yards to Notre Dame's 28 from where Glen Walker, kicking from the 36, booted a 46-yard field goal.

On the try for a two-point conversion, linebacker Dave Lewis rode running back Al Hunter out of bounds at the one. The Irish tried an onside kick, but Troy got the ball at midfield.

Notre Dame outgained the Trojans, 352 net yards to 273; outrushed them, 200 yards to 106; had 23 first downs to USC's 15; and ran off 84 offensive plays to Troy's 68.

USC did manage to eke out a 15-yard edge in passing, 167-152 on 12 of 23 completions to 10 of 29 for the Irish.

Four times Notre Dame drove within scoring distance, three times inside the Trojans' 25. With a third-and six at USC's 14, Hunter fumbled and Troy's Ron Bush recovered. On a first-and-10 at USC's 23, Lisch fumbled and Clay Matthews recovered for the Cardinal and Gold. On a fourth-and-one at the 32, Hunter was dropped for a loss of a yard. And with a fourth-and-eight at USC's 10, Dave Reeve's try for a 27-yard field goal from the 17 was wide to the right.

"We really didn't have too much going for us this week," said Robinson. "We were down after a very emotional game with UCLA. Dave Farmer hurt his knee after five minutes. Jackson hurt his and we had to go to Ricky (Bell) at fullback.

"Vince (Evans) was off. He just wasn't reading things right and he had trouble on the snap. Hertel was great and he's going to be a great quarterback for us.

"Our defense was overwhelming," Robinson added. "They must have been on the field 45 minutes."

Hertel was modestly pleased. "I'm real happy," he said. I was nervous on the first play, but then settled down. I was glad to see Vince (Evans) get back in there and do well."

Bell, who had little practice at fullback, finished with 75 yards on 21 carries. Hunter was the game's most productive runner netting 115 yards on 21 rushes and gaining the distinction of going over the 1000 yard mark, the first N.D. player ever to do so.

Saints will be visitors

San Dimas High, 26-19 winner over Northview in a second-round CIF 2A football game Friday night, lost a coin flip at the CIF office Saturday morning and will be the visiting team for its quarterfinal contest.

The Saints (10-1) will visit Agoura (8-3) at Pierce College Friday at 8 p.m. Agoura advanced to the quarterfinals with a 22-8 win over Verbum Dei Friday night.

Damien will be the visiting team in its 3A quarterfinal game with Villa Park (10-1) since the Orange County game has hosted only one playoff game and Damien (9-1) has hosted two. Villa Park has yet to name the site for Friday's game.

Villa Park downed Pacifica, 33-7, and Damien belted Riverside Poly, 45-29, in the second round.

Rams approach NFC title

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Edging closer to a fourth straight playoff berth in the Super Bowl eliminations, the Los Angeles Rams battle the underdog New Orleans Saints today and who could have guessed the quarterbacks.

Pat Haden, the rookie from Southern California, operates the Los Angeles offense while the veteran left-hander Bobby Douglass directs the Saints.

Haden was third string at the start of the season and two weeks ago moved ahead of James Harris in the Rams' offense. Douglass, the eight-year pro veteran from Kansas also started the training season as third string.

Then Archie Manning was hurt and Bobby Scott moved in before the Saints finally settled on Douglass.

The left-hander started the current campaign with only a 41.5 per cent completion average and it was his running that made him most dangerous.

But after being the understudy to Scott against Houston and Los Angeles, Douglass has been the starter in the past four games—winning the latest two—and boasts a 51.7 percentage on his passes.

"He's capable of coming up with the big play because he's so strong, can pass and can run," commented Los Angeles Coach Chuck Knox. "He's got to be the strongest quarterback going."

Haden isn't that strong but he moved into a starting role in a 30-28 loss to St. Louis and then directed the 23-3 victory over San Francisco.

That put the Rams record at 7-3-1 for a 1½ game bulge over San Francisco in the National Football Conference West. New Orleans stands at 4—7 but in the Saints last two games they beat Detroit 17-16 and Seattle 51-27.

When they met in New Orleans, the Rams won 16-10 thanks to a Haden pass for a touchdown on a 40-yard pass to Harold Jackson.

A crowd of 65,000 is expected at the Coliseum for this renewal with its 1 p.m. PST kickoff, and the Rams are 7-0 against the Saints on this field since their series began.

Defensive tackle Merlin Olsen of the Rams will be playing in his 206th regular season game, tying him for the Ram longevity record with the now-retired Charlie Cowan.

Muncie has gained 491 yards this season and Galbreath 484.

The Rams counter with the veteran Lawrence McCutcheon who has gained 904 yards and John Cappeletti who totals 605 even though he was used primarily as a blocker last week.

Los Angeles can cinch their fourth straight divisional title with a victory over New Orleans if San Francisco loses Monday night to the Minnesota Vikings, who already have won the Central Division title.

Mounties beaten in final seconds

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

WHITTIER — Mt. San Antonio College dropped a 63-62 sqeaker to Rio Hondo in the last two seconds of the contest Saturday night at Rio Hondo on a controversial call.

The Mounties leading 62-61 with eight seconds left on the clock were forced to call time when they couldn't get the ball in play under the five count. Following the timeout, Robert Vigil was called for an over and back violation as MSAC inbounded the ball. Rio Hondo took the miscue and coverted it into a winning basket.

From the Mountie point of view they thought the game was stolen from them in the last couple of seconds. The MSAC people protested the play but there was nothing to do but take the referee's decision. A desperation pass from Dick Rockwood to Angel Santiago failed as time ran out.

MSAC had battled back from a 10 point deficit with 18:29 left in the second half. The comeback was led by Vigil who took matters into his own hands by scoring six of the 10 points to knot the score at 37-37.

The Mounties often were their own worst enemy as they turned the ball over numerous times. MSAC had many wide open shots underneath the hoop which the Mounties failed to capalize on in first half action.

Santiago came alive in the second half after scoring only eight first half points by dropping 12 points through the net and he gathered 10 rebounds to finish the night with 13 caroms. Vigil added 21 points to the Mountie offense that at times was stagnant until Vigil or Santiago got their hands on the ball.

Rio Hondo kept the score down in first half action as it passed the ball around looking for a good open shot for a 31-29 halftime lead. The Roadrunners almost gave the contest to MSAC several wild shots in the last two minutes. In fact the shot that won the contest was a twisting prayer shot thrown in by David Koza.

The Roadrunners were paced by forward Steve McGuire who pumped in 20 points from long distance. He hit on 9 of 24 shots and pulled down nine rebounds.

MSAC, now 1-1 on the season which includes the Alumni game, travels to Glendale Monday night for a 7:30 tilt.

Jackson to Yanks?

NEW YORK (AP) — Free agent slugger Reggie Jackson has agreed to sign with the New York Yankees, it was reported Saturday night.

Sports Editor Dick Young of the New York Daily News, writing in Sunday's editions, said Jackson had turned down better offers from at least two other franchises and agreed to a five-year deal with the Yankees for a sum slightly over $2 million.

"New York did it," Young quotes one Yankee official as saying in explaining why Jackson turned down higher offers from other clubs, including a reported $4 million, five-year contract with Montreal. "He always did want to play in New York."

The signing was to be announced at a Monday news conference, according to Young.

Asked whether an agreement had been reached with Jackson, the flamboyant slugger who led the Oakland A's to three consecutive world championships before being traded to Baltimore last season, President Gabe Paul of the Yankees said, "I can't comment on that."

Canadiens top Kings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Guy Lafleur scored on a breakaway with 11 seconds left to play to give Montreal a 4-2 National Hockey League victory over Los Angeles Saturday night, extending the Kings' winless streak to 10 games.

Lafleur, leading scorer in the NHL, took a pass from Pete Mahovlich and Steve Shutt and skated in, beating the Kings' defense to score the winning goal against Rogie Vachon.

The Canadiens, who are unbeaten in 12 of their last 15 games, hiked their advantage over the second-place Kings in the Norris Division to 18 points. Montreal fought to a 3-3 tie at 1:51 of the final period on Yvan Cournoyer's ninth goal of the season.

The Kings had taken a 3-2 lead in the second period after the team had battled to a standoff in the opening stanza.

Yvon Lambert got the Canadiens rolling 28 seconds into the period when he scored on a rebound with the Kings' netminder out of postion.

Gene Carr evened the score at 1-1 at 4:47 on a 30-footer past goalie Michel Larocgue. The Kings took a 2-1 lead on the first of Tommy Williams' two goals when he connected on a power play at 8:07.

Greenwood leads Bruins

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Greenwood scored eight straight points to lead the fourth-ranked UCLA Bruins to a 76-69 non-conference basketball victory Saturday night over the DePaul (Ill.) Blue Demons.

Greenwood paced the Bruins with his eight consecutive points midway through the second half to give the Bruins a 10-point lead, 52-42 with 12:42 remaining.

DePaul refused to concede the game, trailing by as few as five points with 2:40 remaining and again with a minute-and-ahalf remaining.

Bruin forward Marques Johnson led all scorers with 18 points, followed by Greenwood and Roy Hamilton with 16 each for UCLA.

Curtis Watkins and Joe Ponsetto each scored 12 points for the Blue Demons, followed by Ron Norwood, with 10.

Dayton discovers Pomona

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

DAYTON, Ohio — Cal Poly became the University of Dayton's 26th consecutive opening-night victim here Saturday night but the basketball fans in Ohio may now be aware of Pomona.

The host Flyers, who have won every opener since 1950, needed brilliant outside shooting in the second half to record an 83-73 win over Poly before 10,918 fans.

Like last year, Division II member Poly was certainly respectable against a major college foe on the road which has to be one of the toughest assignments in sports.

Coach Don Hogan's Broncos gained respect after being the subject of pre-game jokes in the local press, which doesn't think much of the quality of Dayton's opening-night opponents through the years.

One of the Dayton papers raised the question of "What is a Pomona?"

Its answer was "Pomona is a small city in California on the eastern fringe of Los Angeles where everybody owns an orange grove and writes letters to the networks whenever Anita Bryant comes on TV with a spiel about Florida orange juice. Pomona is also the site of a university called California State Polytechnic. Right . . . so what is a 'polytechnic,' anyway?"

Even the Dayton paper admitted it's best to call it Cal Poly Pomona to save ink. But the state university in the orange groves showed it isn't outclassed touring the big teams in the Midwest.

"This was a tough game for us," Dayton coach Don Donoher said. "Hogan has a fine team and you know it has to be good if James Webb doesn't even start."

Webb, a transfer from nearby University of Cincinnati, scored 13 points in a reserve role to be one of Poly's four players tallying in double figures as the Broncs displayed more depth and balance than the home team.

The seniorless Flyers made 18 of 26 shots in the second half for 69.2 per cent in burning the nets to delight the home crowd.

Sophomore Doug Harris and Jim Paxton, who are sons of former Dayton stars and were teammates at a local high school, led the way with 24 and 22 points respectively.

Harris, who is shooting more because of the loss of Johnny Davis to the Portland Trail Blazers, scored his career high in making nine of 12 field goals — mostly from the outside — and six of eight free throws.

Paxton chipped in with nine field goals in 17 attempts and four of six free throws.

Forward Jack Gamulin led Poly with 14 points followed by Webb and Charles Johnson with 13 apiece and center Don Johnson with 12.

All 10 Broncos scored while Dayton had only eight points from its reserves. Poly's five subs played a total of 69 minutes while three Dayton starters played the entire game until the final minute.

"We were trying to find an effective combination and keep our players fresh," Hogan said. "We played better than we expected. When you go on the road against teams of this caliber, you know you have to play well to stay close."

The game started out as if Dayton would win handily with the Flyers jumping out to an 18-8 lead but Poly cut the deficit to 35-31 at halftime.

Poly kept the pressure on in the second half staying within a basket until Dayton's Erv Giddings scored to make it 50-46 with 12:36 on the clock.

UD then went into its zone and Poly couldn't hit from the outside.

Dayton scored eight of the next 10 points to jump out to a safe 10-point margin. The Broncs were able to cut it to five but it proved to be too much of a task to get back in the game.

"We were running in our groove," Hogan explained. "But Dayton realized it and stopped us. Dayton got its game together and we had a couple of defensive breakdowns."

Poly shot 46.9 per cent while Dayton, helped by its sensational second half, hit on 54 per cent.

Redlands wins

REDLANDS, Calif. (AP) — University of Redlands defeated Valley State College 40-39 in overtime Saturday night, in a National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championship semifinal game.

Led by quarterback Steve Vento, who passed for 268 yards and three second half touchdowns, Redlands rebounded from a 26-7 halftime deficit to tie the game at 33-33 at the end of regulation play.

Sagehens victorious

Only the Pomona-Pitzer College team turned out a winner in Saturday night's basketball action. The Sagehens trounced LIFE Bible, 100-54, in Downey, while Claremont-Mudd was beaten in overtime by Azusa Pacific College, 79-77.

In the last SCIAC non-conference contest, the University of San Diego whipped the La Verne College Leos, 86-46, in San Diego.

Pomona-Pitzer (1-0) led all the way in easily defeating LIFE Bible (0-3). Freshman forward Jay Cornish did an outstanding job, as he came off the bench and scored 20 points and pulled down 10 rebounds, six on the offensive board.

The Sagehens led 44-25 at halftime and poured it on in the second half, as they outscored LIFE Bible 56-29.

Roger Washington started at guard for usual starter Steve Pinkston and had six points. Pinkston suffered a shoulder injury in practice.

Azusa Pacific pulled out a tight battle with C-M when Mike Street made three clutch free throws in the overtime period. Street calmly shot two charity tosses with 26 seconds to play and added another one with just 11 seconds remaining. Street led all scorers with 21 points.

Claremont — Mudd tried to stall with the score tied and with 54 seconds to play in regulation but lost the ball with five seconds to force the extra period.

Stu Du Vall, formerly of Upland High, was the high-point man for C-M with 15 points.

La Verne (0-2) will host the Republic of China today at the Supertent at 4 p.m.

'Fraser cops soccer title

PASADENA (AP) — Simon Fraser of Burnaby, Can. captured the American Youth Soccer Organization - sponsored 1976 NAIA national soccer championship 1-0 Saturday over Rockhurst College of Kansas City, Mo.

Before 10,250 spectator's at Pasadena's Rose Bowl, Simon Fraser looked stronger than their opponents throughout most of the match and scored early, as forward Ken Whitehead hit at 8:28 of the first half. Rockhurst's well-balanced defense kept favored Simon Fraser's offense bottled up much of the first half, allowing just seven shots on goal.

The four-day tournament, which started at Occidental College and Pasadena City College on Wednesday, drew in excess of 25,000 spectators to the 12 games.

Californians advance

LONG BEACH (AP) — All four California teams entered in the NCAA water polo championships advanced to the quarter-final round by defeating their eastern opponents Saturday at the Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool.

No. 1 seeded Stanford, the Pac-8 champion, slipped past Arizona 9-8. UC Santa Barbara, PCAA champions, defeated Loyola 13-5. UCLA trounced Texas A&M 18-3, and UC Irvine dominated Pittsburgh 18-4.

TOSS UP — It only appears to be a toss up as Notre Dame's Dave Batton (45) battles for a loose ball with Maryland's Steve Sheppard in game won by Irish 80-79 Saturday.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joe Gattuso Jr., a chip off the old block, rushed 29 times for 128 yards and scored three touchdowns Saturday as Navy beat Army 38-10 for its fourth consecutive football victory in the traditional rivalry of service academies.

The 181-pound Gattuso, of Mickelton, N.J., whose father led Navy rushers in 1953 and 1954, slashed two yards for a first-period touchdown that gave the Middies a 7-0 lead. Then he ran 20 and two yards for third-quarter scores.

The Navy victory reduced Army's lead in the 77-year-old series to 36-35-6 and erased the stigma of a 4-7 losing season for the Middies.

Army, which lost a chance for its first winning season since 1972, was competitive only through the first half. Greg King romped 11 yards to tie the score 7-7 in the first period. After Navy quarterback Bob Leszczynski passed 11 yards to Phil McConkey for a touchdown, Mike Castelli, with two seconds remaining, booted a 37-yard field goal that left the Cadets trailing 10-7 at intermission.

But Navy, which had outscored the Cadets 100-6 in winning the last three years, turned the game into a rout in the third quarter with two touchdowns by Gattuso and Bob Tata's 31-yard field goal.

Gattuso's three touchdowns was one shy of the Navy best against Army. Navy's Charles Emrich holds the all-time mark with four touchdowns in the first game in 1890. Joe Bellino, Pat Donnelly and Cleveland Cooper each have scored three TDs in a game Four Army backs have scored three touchdowns against the Middies.

Elsewhere, No. 7 Houston clinched the host spot in the Cotton Bowl against No. 5 Maryland by whipping Rice 42-20 as Alois Blackwell and Daryl Thomas combined to run for five touchdowns.

Fourth-ranked Georgia needed a 33-yard field goal by Allan Leavitt with five seconds left to defeat Georgia Tech 13-10. The Bulldogs, headed for the Sugar Bowl against No. 1 Pitt, blew a 10-point lead in the fourth quarter and needed a fumble recovery by Bill Krug at the 34 to set up the winning field goal.

Texas Tech, ranked No. 9, thumped Rice 30-7 with quarterback Rodney Allison completing 10 of 12 passes for 163 yards and three touchdowns.

No. 14 Oklahoma State ripped Texas-El Paso 42-13 with Charlie Weatherbie rushing for 180 yards and Terry Miller adding 110. No. 18 Alabama coasted to a 38-7 decision over Auburn as Tony Nathan rushed for 141 yards and scored two touchdowns.

In other major games, Tulsa and West Texas State battled to a 17-17 tie; Tennessee defeated Vanderbilt 13-10; Florida downed Miami, Fla., 19-10; Grambling stopped Southern University 10-2 before a crowd of 76,188, largest attendance for any sports event in the Louisiana Superdome; and Cincinnati defeated Louisville 20-6.

Other scores included: Boston College 59, Holy Cross 6; Baylor 24, Texas Christian 19; Southern Mississippi 21, TexasArington 10.

St. John's Minn., and Towson State advanced to the finals of the NCAA Division III playoffs.

St. John's walloped Buena Vista 61-0 as quarterback Jeff Norman passed for two touchdowns and ran for a third. Towson State had a closer call, nipping St. Lawrence 38-36 as Skip Chase and Mike Bennet each caught a pair of TD passes from Dan Duller for the winners. Kirk Demsey threw three TD passes for St. Lawrence before being injured. His replacement, John Farrar, hurled two more TD passes in the fourth quarter as a late Larrie comeback just fell short.

In Division II first round playoffs, Montana State edged New Hamshire 17-16, Akron defeated Nevada-Las Vegas 27-6, North Dakota State nipped Eastern Kentucky 10-7 and Northern Michigan whipped Delaware 28-17.

Tailback Tom Kostrba raced for 115 yards and one TD to lead Montana State into the semifinals against North Dakota State, which edged Eastern Kentucky on a first-quarter touchdown by Steve Campbell and Mike McTague's second-period field goal.

Scots, Braves, Walnut, Claremont girls advance

Upland High advanced to next Saturday's CIF Cross Country Finals by placing in a two-way tie for second with University High in the second 3A heat Saturday afternoon at Mt. San Antonio College.

Walnut High captured one of the final 10 spots in the 2A division as it finished second to Salesian in the division's second heat. Alta Loma also advanced to the finals with a fifth place finish as Joe Hope placed third individually at 10:29.

The Highlanders were paced by Roger Innes and Mark Trilevsky. Innes placed second in the individual battle to Hawthorne's Darrel Cessor. Innes came in with a time of 10:37 despite a brisk wind blowing across the rough MSAC course.

Trilevsky finished third with a time of 10:40 as he finished three seconds behind teammate Innes. Gary Borbon placed fifth for Upland with a time of 10:42.

Walnut was paced by David Mendoza and Tim Ball. Mendoza ran the two-mile course in 10:57 while teammate Ball finished 14th at 11:05.

Alta Loma remained in the running for the 2A title as Hope came in to capture the third spot behind Artesia's Brad Kester and Sherman Indian's Charles Rednick.

Claremont was led by Sue Atencio, Cherry Henry and Maureen Young. Atencio placed 16th with a time of 13:49 which was followed by Henry's 19th finish at 13:59. Young came in 25th at 14:18.

Johnny Majors playing it coy

PITTSBURGH (AP) — If the University of Tennessee wants to contact Pitt Coach Johnny Majors in the next few days here's his itinerary:

—New York on Monday for a luncheon to announce the winner of the Lambert Trophy, symbol of Eastern college football supremacy.

—Back to New York on Tuesday where Pitt star Tony Dorsett is expected to run away with the Heisman Trophy. Dorsett rushed for 224 yards against Penn State Friday night, setting an all-time NCAA single-season record of 1,948 and becoming college football's first 6,000-yard runner. He has 6,082 in his career.

—A quick flight to Ohio for a speaking engagement Tuesday night and then back to New York to appear with Dorsett on NBC-TV's Today Show Wednesday morning.

And then, Johnny, what then?

"I'm not planning anything right now except to hit the road for a few engagements that were made previously," he said Saturday, still savoring No. 1-ranked Pitt's 24-7 victory over Penn State Friday night that pushed the Panthers within one game of the national championship should they beat Georgia in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.

The high-strung Majors needed the weekend to "loaf and not get too ambitious" after Pitt wrapped up a 11-0 regular season. Pitt's last perfect record came 58 years ago over an abbreviated four-game schedule and Majors and his friends celebrated into the wee hours, uncorking a bottle of champagne in memory of each of Pitt's 11 victims.

"Daylight came early," Majors admitted ruefully.

But he was still playing it coy on the subject of his rumored return to Tennessee, where he was a star tailback in the 1950s and then spent three years as an assistant coach. Tennessee Coach Bill Battle quit under fire last Monday and Majors' name topped the list of candidates before and since.

The standard line from Majors goes something like this:

"I have not been contacted by anyone from Tennessee. Right now, I plan to be at Pitt next year, but does anyone know where they'll be tomorrow?"

All Majors will say is that he has to be in Pittsburgh around Dec. 10 to begin preparation for the Sugar Bowl. The Panthers will train in Biloxi, Miss., beginning Dec. 21 and move to New Orleans Dec. 26.

The Sugar Bowl is on Jan. 1. The question is: where will Majors be on Jan. 20?

Super Bowl champs trying to make playoffs

By Associated Press

Six weeks ago, the Pittsburgh Steelers were staggering and apparently on the verge of going down for the count. Now they're up and punching harder than ever, and trying to land a few knockout punches of their own.

The two-time Super Bowl champs were a dismal 1-4 back then, when they took on Cincinnati, which had won four of its first five games. Most insiders figured the Bengals would deal the Steelers a death blow.

But Pittsburgh came alive to beat the Bengals 20-6. That victory began an odyssey which is still going on. The Steelers proceeded to win their next five games, too, three of them by successive shutouts.

And in that six-game stretch, the Steelers held the opposition without a touchdown for 22 straight quarters before giving one up in last week's 32-16 triumph over Houston.

Now the team which began that streak is back, this time on its own turf. And the Bengals can still deal that knockout punch, with a little bit of help.

If Pittsburgh, 7-4, loses today in Cincinnati and the New England Patriots, 8-3 beat the Broncos in Denver, the Steelers' dream of reaching — and winning — a third straight Super Bowl will die even before the playoffs begin because Pittsburgh won't be in those playoffs.

On Thursday, Dallas staved off a frantic last-minute St. Louis drive to post a 19-14 victory while Detroit withstood a record-breaking performance by O.J. Simpson to down Buffalo 27-14.

The Steelers know how important today's game in Cincinnati—and the next two against Tampa Bay and Houston—are in the quest for yet another National Football League title.

"We could find outselves on the sofa watching the playoffs on television and thinking we're the best team," says linebacker Andy Russell. "It's a horrible situation ... We've got to win the rest and get help—and we're looking desperately to find out where the help is coming from."

If it comes from anywhere, Denver would be a nice place to start. The Patriots, who beat Pittsburgh in their lone meeting of the season, hold a one-game edge over the Steelers among runner-up teams in the American Conference, so the Steelers not only have to catch the Patriots, they have to overtake them.

Denver isn't just trying to play the role of spoiler, either. The Broncos, 7-4, still have a reasonably solid shot of their own at the AFC wild card.

The Pats, though, aren't just trying to settle for second-best at the moment. They're still trying to catch first-place Baltimore in the East. They trail the Colts by one game.

Washington's Redskins are still hanging in there, with a shot at the playoffs. If they turn back the Eagles today and the Jets next Sunday, their hopes will probably ride on the regular-season finale, a shootout against the Cowboys in Dallas.

Panther wrestlers good but have no conference

Coach Paul Iaeger's Chaffey College wrestling team won't win a Mission Conference title this season — but not for lack of ability.

The Mission Conference has dropped wrestling as a league sport following the scuttling of the programs at San Bernardino Valley and San Diego CC, but the Panther grapplers still hope for a successful 1976-77 campaign.

According to Iaeger, the team's biggest problem is the lack of a talented wrestler in the lighter weights.

"If we can come up with a 118-pounder, maybe by next quarter, this could be one of the best wrestling teams in the history of the school," the Panther mentor said.

A couple refugees from SBVC's folded entry, combined with a premium group of lettermen and a batch of promising freshmen has Iaeger eyeing the difficult CC schedule confidently.

Iaeger has been head wrestling coach at Chaffey for six years, and has always produced a winner. Returning from last year's third-place Mission squad are state finalists Dan Lehor and Ben Mendoza, joined by Steve Sparks, who attained a slot in the finals while wrestling for San Bernardino in 1975-76.

A trio of returning lettermen provide strength in the middle weight classes, Randy Campbell, Eric Peterson and Dave White. In addition, Steve Hargrave, a former Hacienda League champ at Alta Loma, will be back in uniform after sitting out most of last season.

Tee to Cup

Blind golf champs to arrive

Fourteen of the nation's finest blind golfers, most of whom shoot in the low 80s, will play in the first Brille Institute Celebrity tournament in Palm Springs Dec. 6 and 7.

Blind players follow U.S.G.A. rules with the single exception that they can ground their clubs in hazards. Each of the blind entrants is required to file an 18-hole score under 120 to qualify for membership in USBGA. Each player uses a caddy-coach who lines up his shots, gives advice and playing conditions.

There's a host of celebrities scheduled to be on hand at the del Safari C.C. in Palm Desert. The Canyon Hotel Racquet Golf Resort will be the headquarters.

The tournament is directed by Blind singer-auther Tom Sullivan who sang the national anthem at last year's Super Bowl, and actor-dancer Ray Bolger.

Men and women pros will open play on Jan. 18 in both California and Florida as the American Golf Tour begins its second season. Eddie Susalla of San Diego, a pro and president of American Golf Tour, Inc., announced that sites of the opening events will be Cathedral Canyon in Palm Springs and MacArthur C.C. in Palm Beach, Fla.

Men and women will compete in the same tournaments with the only advantage for women being the placement of tees 25 yards ahead of the men. Susalla said 12 events have already been planned with minimum purses set at $25,000. "We hope to make this a 10-11 month tour," said Susalla.

Bette Rex was net medalist in the recent President Cup event. Other winners are Neva Tassio, Shelby Myers, Luise Putnam, Lorraine Basinski, DeLayne Lazar and Betty Zapf.

Runnersup in their respective flights are Vickie Tauscher, Kay Liscum, Mary Joneslf.

Flight winners in the Glendora C.C. Auxiliary Turkey shoot were also announced. They are: first flight, Bobbie Hege, Isabel Alba and Bev Galaher, Jo Ward; second flight, Alice Burke, Phoebe Manning and Audrey Chapin, Mary Ryan; third flight, Betty Hawley, Peggy Podojil and Margaret Cooper, Peggy Woodard.

Publicity director for the club is Corky Booth.

Mary Reed shot a 50 to win low gross in A flight in the Mutt and Jeff Women's Auxiliary tournament at Glendora C.C. recently. Other winners: A flight, low net, Margaret Bills, Margie Kemby and Connie Dodge; B flight, gross, Phoebe Manning and Ina Cogswell; net, Sylvia King and Jeanne Slavin; C flight, gross, Rosemary Koppel; net, Polly Stephens and Alene Sparks; D flight, Sandra Robison and Sue Brooks, gross; Claudia Wehrman and Betty Turzan.

Bonnie Woodrow won low gross honors in the two-day President's Cup event at La Mancha recently. Low net winner in the first flight was Alta Hutchins.

Other winners were: 2nd flight, Margaret Mixon and Barbara Kohn; 3rd flight, Madeline Maxwell and Beverly Greenwood. Kicker tournament winners were Lucille Moore and Mae Extale.

U.S. Open champion Jerry Pate will compete in the Andy Williams San Diego Open golf tournament Jan. 26-30 at Torrey Pines, according to tourney chairman Hal Tebbetts.

A sensational rookie on the 1976 tour, the longhitting pro has more than lived up to his great expectations for him with his 71-69-69-68 — 277 in the U.S. Open. The Pensacola, Fla. player wound up 10th on the earnings list with $153,103, ahead of such established stars as Johnny Miller, Lee Trevino, Tom Weiskopf and Tom Watson.

Quotes

"This is not the first time something like this has happened in football. A lot of good teams have been beaten worse than we were." — Seattle Coach Jack Patera after his Seahawks were crushed 51-27 by the New Orleans Saints.

"They were nothing. We'll kill them next year. That's what I'm living for right now." — Colgate linebacker Pat Horan, whose vital clipping penalty helped Rutgers defeat the Red Raiders 17-9, completing an unbeaten season.

The Pomona Parks and Recreation Dept. announced that Saturday afternoon golf lessons at Palm Lake Golf Course will begin in about two weeks. Hal Cutler, PGA pro, will give lessons to juniors at $1.50 per hour with eight players in each class. A bucket of balls is also available for $1.

Classes for juniors will begin at 2 p.m. and at 3 p.m. each Saturday.

Classes will also be held for adults and senior citizens at $2 per hour with a minimum of five in each class. There is a $1 charge for practice balls.

Palm Lake is a 9-hole course ideal for beginners. The course, located on Phillips Blvd. in Pomona, has a driving range and a putting green.

The course is open daily from 8 a.m. until 9:30 p.m. with adequate lighting for both the three-par course and the driving range. Call 629-2852 for more information.

The older pros are banding together and forming their own association with their own tournaments, and the names of some of the pros signing up are impressive.

The new group is called the Senior Professional Golfers of America. Among their ranks are George Bayer, Tommy Bolt, Julius Boros, Jimmy Demaret, Doug Ford, Sam Snead and Bob Toski. See what I mean.

Anyway, they'll be playing a minimum of six tournaments a year beginning in 1977. The first event is scheduled for April 1977. All tournaments in California will benefit the American Cancer Society as well as the SPGA.

President of the association is Jack Shafer. Membership is open to all pros and amateurs who are 50 years old. Membership fee is $50. More information can be obtained by contacting Shafer at 714-752-1669.

For couples

Sociologist aims at communication

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Most married couples don't listen to each other, and many get into fights as a result, says a professor who helps couples learn to communicate better.

"The one thing that's real important is accuracy," said Jeff Edelson, a University of Wisconsin social scientist.

"Very often one person will say something to the other when the other is busy, they'll both assume something on that basis, and as a result nobody did the shopping when each of them thought the other would do it," he said.

Edelson, who oversees "couple communication" classes aimed at easing marital strife, said husbands and wives often misunderstand each other by trying to work out major decisions in piecemeal conversations.

"You should not try to decide whether to buy a new car or something like that by talking about it a little bit, now and then," he said. "You should set aside a time to talk about it, like after dinner, to spend as much time as you need going over all the details involved in the decision."

Edelson recommends basic steps toward better communication, such as calling your spouse's name before you begin talking, and making sure you and your spouse are looking at each other during conversations.

"Make sure everything you said was accurate and it was understood," he said. "If you both know why you're doing it, then it's okay to ask if they understood what you were saying."

Just as the speaker has to concentrate on saying exactly what is meant, the listener has to ask: "Am I hearing that right?" he said.

Understanding each other's words, however, is only part of the battle, Edelson said. "What you say is important, but how you say it is even more important," he said. "A reasonable request in the wrong tone or with the wrong expression can be a disaster."

For instance, one of the worst thing you can say, according to Edelson, is: "You always leave the music up too loud." He suggested instead: "I'm sorry, I'm trying to concentrate on this right now and the music is bothering me."

Trapezoid architecture

Ruins of 500-year-old Bolivia culture found

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Archeologists have uncovered the trapezoid-shaped ruins of what they say is a previously unknown culture that disappeared some 500 years ago.

"We've come across an extremely original form of architecture and we still don't know how it developed," said Carlos Ponce Sanjines, director of the National Institute of Archeology.

The institute is showing an exhibit of photographs of the ruins of Iskanawaya, a citadel discovered in mountainous jungle about 190 miles north of La Paz. The pictures show clearly the dominance of trapezoid-shaped buildings, doors and floors.

"This is something completely new in archeology," Ponce Sanjines said. A trapezoid has four sides, but only two of them are parallel. For centuries, the rectangle has been the basis for most architecture. architecture.

Iskanwaya covers about 34 acres and is among the largest pre-Hispanic citadels in South America, rivaling in size the Inca stronghold of Machu Picchu in Peru, Ponce Sanjines said. He said the citadel was the center of a "collectivist-styled" community of some 3,000 persons.

Scientists estimate that there was a population of about 10,000 at Iskanwaya and neighboring citadels. The culture flourished from about 1200 to 1480, and drought and starvation may have been responsible for its disappearance.

The Iskanwaya citadel was built on the eastern slopes of the Andes at about the 5,000-foot level. It was surrounded by terraces 10 to 45 feet wide used for growing grain and for supporting houses. Aqueducts up to two miles long watered the crops.

Ponce Sanjines said in an interview that extremely careful calculations went into the construction of the houses, but nobody can explain the use of the trapezoid. He said using right angles would have been much easier.

"We're having to study the structures slowly to see whether the culture based its architecture on some rare geometric conception, or whether it was based upon the climate or other characteristics of the region," he said. "Perhaps it's a combination of factors."

Easier credit gives stock prices a boost

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Steps by the Federal Reserve toward easier credit provided the inspiration for a moderate gain in stock prices this past week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 7.82 to 956.62 on top of a 21.11-point advance the week before.

By Friday's close the average had recouped all but 10 points of the 38-point loss it suffered in the initial selloff that followed Jimmy Carter's victory in the presidential election.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index posted a 1.23 gain to 103.15 for the week, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index was up .72 at 55.33.

Big Board volume averaged 18.86 million shares a day, down from 21.24 million in the previous week.

The mood for the week was set late the previous Friday, when the Fed announced a reduction in the discount rate — the charge it sets on loans to its member commercial banks — from 5½ to 5¼ per cent.

The move was taken as a clear signal that the central bank was seeking to push interest rates and lower and stimulate the economy.

And Wall Streeters also saw it as a further indication of a prospective harmonious relationship between Arthur Burns, the Fed's chairman, and President-elect Carter.

The Fed followed up this past week with several transactions in the money markets that touched off declines in short-term interest rates.

Progress Bulletin
Finance
Pomona, California ■ Sunday, November 28, 1976

That spelled clear sailing for the stock market on all but one of the week's trading days. The Dow rose 7 on Monday, fell back 6 on Tuesday, but added 1 on Wednesday before the Thanksgiving holiday, and picked up more than 5 on Friday.

Tuesday's setback was attributed largely to Chrysler Corp.'s reduction of its estimate of industry car sales for the 1977 model year — from the range of 10.8 million-11 million units to 10.5-10.8 million.

That news was followed by word of a less-than-1 per cent increase in auto sales for mid-November, and General Motors' disclosure of plans for the temporary closing of one assembly plant.

Not surprisingly, the auto issues came in for some selling pressure during the week while many other stocks were moving ahead.

A brighter note that helped the market bounce back on Wednesday came in a trade association report of a jump in sales of mutual fund shares last month.

With that increased buying, the flow of money out of common-stock funds slowed to its lightest pace since last December.

The exodus of shareholders from the funds of late has been a source of concern to market analysts, because it has reduced the amount of money the funds have available to buy stocks with.

At week's end, the market still faced the uncertainty of what pricing decision the oil-exporting nations would make next month.

The tally of NYSE-listed issues showed 1,332 gainers and 494 losers among the 2,075 traded.

Italian escort service

Women bodyguards used

TURIN, Italy (AP) — They know judo and karate, are fast with guns and willing to tackle just about anyone. Some dress elegantly and carry handbags containing lipstick, nail polish — and Colt-38s.

They are women bodyguards - 24 in all - employed in this north Italian city by Mondialpol, a private organization providing security and escort services for businesses and the wealthy.

"It is a peculiar, hard job, but I like it," says Tamara Chiereghin, an attractive 25-year-old Venetian woman, married and the mother of a child. A three-year veteran she was one of the first women enrolled by Mondialpol.

As with most women starting an unusual career, she faced opposition from her family and her fiance.

"They did not absolutely accept the idea I could become a private detective. My fiance was particularly critical. Now he is my husband and no longer criticizes my decision," Tamara said.

The women at Mondialpol, the only Italian organization with women detectives, specialize in antitheft activities in department stores and supermarkets. The women also act as escorts for bank vans and for wealthy women who prefer a body guard who looks like a woman friend when they go shopping.

"It looked like a crazy idea when I decided to hire women as bodyguards," says Giorgio Calleri, boss of Mondialpol, Italy's largest private police organization, employing 1,350 detectives.

Calleri said his advertisement in the major Italian newspapers drew a surprising 700 applications from girls seeking a really new career.

"After special aptitude tests and training we selected 24 women detectives. They are especially good against shoplifting in supermarkets and department stores since they can easily be mistaken for regular customers. But they can do everything else, such as escort bank cash and serve as bodyguards for wealthy businessmen."

The women detectives are paid $400 a month, nearly the same as their male colleagues and have the same social benefits as Italian women workers. The job is tiring and sometimes clashes with family duties.

"But it is the same problem for women working on an assembly line," said Elvira Pugliese, 26. In a recent pistol contest for Mondialpol detectives she finished 19th, leaving many men behind.

"I have not yet used the pistol outside the firing range. I hope to never use it. But I am prepared if it might happen," she said.

Adriana Arzeni, a veteran detective who also takes care of the new girls' training, often resorted to karate to catch thieves.

"One even tried to steal my hand bag in a supermarket. I floored him fast," Adriana said. She has captured about 20 persons.

A man detective said the women were good for antitheft operations, but expressed doubts about their efficiency with experienced bandits. "The girls are prepared, theoretically, to face such emergencies. But let's hope they are never involved," he said.

The girls agreed a holdup could be a difficult situation to face.

"But don't think we are going to faint at the sight of blood. We think we can do what the men do," Elvira Pugliese claimed.

China troops put down disorder

HONG KONG (AP) — Chinese military units were called out to restore order in Fukien Province, across from Taiwan, after supporters of Mao Tse-tung's widow and three other discredited radicals created "turmoil," according to provincial radio broadcasts.

China analysts in Hong Kong interpreted the broadcasts to mean there were violent clashes and possibly casualties in the southeastern province which faces the Nationalist-held island.

Troops used "effective measures to deal blows at the sabotage activities of the handful of class enemies," according to a broadcast made Sunday. There was no mention of casualties.

A separate broadcast by Fukien radio said supporters of the ousted leaders "provoked the masses to fight against each other and cadres to fight each other, instigated armed struggle, practiced beating, smashing and looting unscrupulously, and created confusion."

It said "they seriously undermined revolution, production and preparedness against war; and caused serious losses to the country and to people's property and lives."

Military units were dispatched to cities, villages, factories, government offices and schools to help local authorities "condemn, expose and criticize the towering crimes of the gang of four," one broadcast said.

The "gang of the four" is a reference to Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and Politburo members Wang Hung-wen, Yao Wen-yuan and Chang Chunchiao. They were purged in early October after reportedly trying to seize power from Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, Mao's successor.

Fukien has not been considered a stronghold of the four radicals, who had a power base in Shanghai, China's largest city. Thus, China analysts suspect the problems in Fukien may be more the result of a weak provincial leadership rather than radical influences.

A Hong Kong newspaper quoted a traveler in March saying one person was killed during a fight between moderates and extremists in Fukien and that the capital, Foochow, was "semiparaly'ed" as a result. The feud broke out with the radicals leading a campaign to oust ex-Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

Sunday's broadcast said the military units were ordered out after Hua issued "important instructions on the struggle in the province to expose and criticize" the four radicals.

Fukien radio said the four tried to undermine unity among the army, government and people and "extended their tentacles into Fukien and instructed a handful of people to practice revisionism, create splits and engage in intrigues and conspiracies in an attempt to overthrow the dictatorship of the proletariat and restore capitalism.

Died with his boots off

Earp lies among the respectable

COLMA, Calif. — (NEA) — The legend of Wyatt Earp doesn't jibe with the simple letters notched in the dark marble stone, which is tilted slightly off the ground and encased in concrete so that nobody'll steal it.

Underneath it lie the ashes of the notorious gunslinger of the Old West — in a Jewish cemetery on a hillside in the fog belt just south of San Francisco.

"Wyatt Earp
1848-1929
Josephine Earp
1861-1944"

Wyatt Earp, who along with his brothers Morgan and Virgil and consumptive Doc Holliday shot it out with the Clanton gang at the O.K. Corral (Oct. 26, 1881), should — to fit history — be buried in some place like Tombstone or Deadwood or Dodge City.

But here on this sunny Indian summer day — in the well-tended Hills of Eternity cemetery — you find out that Wyatt Earp lived to the ripe old age of 81 and died with his boots off, and that for the ages he reposes in the company of the Marcus family, his Jewish in-laws.

Maury Fitzgerald, a pipe-smoking English professor at the College of San Mateo, led this pilgrimage to the grave of Wyatt Berry Stapp Earp, who was a buffalo hunter, rode shotgun on a stage, was an assistant marshal and blasted and gambled his way through the silver and gold camps of Arizona, Colorado and Alaska before finding sedateness and respectability with Josephine Sarah Marcus, whom he married in 1897.

Earp died in Los Angeles. He was cremated and the ashes later transferred to the Marcus family plot here. The headstone, weighing more than a quarter of a ton, was stolen a couple of times — and once found in some bushes off nearby Skyline Drive — before it was sealed in cement.

The curious still wander by. A history teacher from southern California happens along, with his teenaged sons, and snaps a picture with an Instamatic.

"We get a few every week," says Don Kuczynski, the caretaker, a refugee from Poland and the only Jew in Cemetery Workers Local 265.

Fitzgerald, who brought us here, has more than a pedantic interest in grave sites, too. He is executive secretary - treasurer of the union, which has 450 members stretched out from San Jose to Antioch. Maury has held the job for 17 years while dispensing syntax and grammar to junior college students.

He is the only union leader who lives in Hillsborough, a swank suburb where Bing Crosby is his near neighbor. But Maury's working domain is Colma, a unique community on the Peninsula ridge below San Francisco. Graves are its main business (there are no active cemeteries in the city). A hundred yards from Wyatt Earp's urn stands the crypt of William Randolph Hearst, the grandfather of Patty, the immensely influential newspaper tycoon who was the model for "Citizen Kane." He lies in adjoining Cypress Lawn Cemetery.

Altogether there are 12 cemeteries in Colma. Fitzgerald, a San Francisco native, picked up spare cash here — $2 a day — digging graves as a 15-year-old high school kid.

"Grave digging isn't what it used to be," he admits. "Forty per cent of our business is now in cremation — except for the orthodox Jewish, Greek and Catholic cemeteries."

Those huge ornate headstones that have traditionally monuments with simple lines and simple designations are the fashion.

So Wyatt Earp in his final resting place, noted by a plain marker, fits right in with his neighbors. Little did they realize they'd achieve immortality of a sort by reposing near the man who won the Gunfight at the O.K. Corral.

Harmony puzzles

That was the method used to build America's first prefabricated homes — in New Harmony, Ind. — back in 1862. This historic Midwestern community, undergoing a massive restoration program, is using the exact methods of its earliest settlers to restore and rebuild the town.

New Harmony homes were constructed of standardized parts, all numbered and then stored in a central building. When a house was needed the materials were delivered to the site and quickly put together. Beams were firmly anchored by driving square pegs into snug round holes. Many buildings made of the original prefabricated sections still exist, as evidence of how effective these construction methods were.

This time, the culprit is the cocoa bean.

The Nestle Co. Inc. of White Plains, N.Y. announced Monday that it was raising wholesale prices on a variety of chocolate products. At the retail level, a typical chocolate bar will go from 15 to 20 cents, the company said.

The Nestle move was not unexpected since the Hershey Corp., M&M and Peter Paul announced similar price boosts late last month.

Figuring out the percentage of increase gets complicated because the companies tried to sweeten the impact of the higher prices by increasing the size of their candy bars.

A Nestle milk chocolate bar, for example, will grow from 1⅛ to 1¼ ounces; a Hershey milk chocolate bar is going from 1.2 to 1.35 ounces. The Nestle bar is smaller — 1¼ is equal to 1.25.

The smaller, cheaper Nestle bar costs 13.3 cents per ounce; the larger, higher-price variety will cost 16 cents per ounce; the increase is 20 per cent. For Hershey, the per-ounce price increase works out to 19 per cent.

Nestle said the wholesale price increases will go into effect early in 1977, after stocks of the 15-cent chocolate bars are used up. The increase is expected at the retail level next spring.

All the companies blamed higher costs for the increases, noting that cocoa beans which sold for 75 cents a pound a year ago now are going for close to $1.50. The firms said the chocolate increases would have come sooner if it had not been for the drop in the price of sugar which has declined about 90 per cent from 1974 levels.

Most of the world's cocoa beans are grown in Africa and the crop has been tight for the past two years. At the same time, the demand has been strong, causing the price increase.

Stephen Korsen of Nestle said there is no actual shortage of cocoa beans. He said however that the producing countries "are regulating the flow" of beans. Political upheavals in some cocoa-growing areas also have interrupted the supply.

The National Confectioners Association said it takes 65 pounds of cocoa beans to make 100 pounds of milk chocolate. The value of the beans in a 1⅛-ounce bar last year was about three cents; the value of the beans in a 1¼-ounce bar at the current price of cocoa is about eight cents.

In some places, candy bars in vending machines already sell for 20 cents and, presumably, could go up to 25 cents after the new increases take effect.

Try using sheets when decorating

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Not every art major will be lucky enough to marry a structural engineer as Marlene Siff did 17 years ago, but it is a great combination for homemaking, she says. She is an artist and designer.

"Any woman can have a great home if she learns to make decisions with her mate — that's the secret," she advises. "Planning together is important. My husband gets just as much fun out of making plans for our house as I do and he helps carry out my ideas," she said in an interview in her unusual home in Westport, Conn.

While Marlene's handiwork is all over the house, the house is also full of her husband's structural contributions. The middle part of the house is an Aframe, and there are rooms jutting here and there, which makes it particularly interesting.

On walls are her oil paintings and laminated plaques that are a commercial enterprise, and she has enveloped their bedroom in sheets she has designed. When she wears a caftan made out of a sheet, she could fade right into the walls, chairs, ottoman, draped tables and headboard that are slipcovered with it. The blue and white sheets, a sophisticated arrangement of stripes and cornflowers she calls Tailored Elegance, are also laminated to the stock white shades. Stripes taken from the sheets border the beams at the ceiling.

"Sheets are a wonderful way to decorate economically," she says in her exuberant way. "You can buy old chairs, tables, ottomans, whatever, and cover them with sheets, and they are washable." She puts glass over the covers on some tables.

The kitchen, too, carries her handiwork in tiles on counters and range top — she designed and glazed it herself — and the wall plaques that combine food with recipes. Her husband designed a dumb-waiter that goes from kitchen to garage where groceries can be loaded. The dumbwaiter might have cost $1,000, she explained, but he rigged up "a garage door opener, turning it on its side," at a cost of about $80. He also designed a small, stowaway, folding kitchen stepladder that holds up to 4,000 pounds, which has become another of their commercial ventures.

At one end of the kitchen is a den-like pit with fireplace, red leather banquettes and bookcases. Off the kitchen is a big glassed-in room furnished in white wicker and colorful upholstery. Its skylights provide so much light it gives the illusion of an outdoor setting.

The unusual gardens, swimming pool and tennis courts have been designed for maximum privacy, and provide a lot of togetherness with the couple's two sons, 11 and 14. A shower room off the outdoor play area adjoins a large room with built-in sleeping areas for the boys' guests.

Walls of the long hall that lead to that area downstairs are covered with the bedroom sheet pattern in brown, one of three Marlene has designed for J.P. Stevens. Another sheet was a butterfly design and her newest one, Wind Flowers, is a pattern of anemones. The sheet was pasted to the wall with wheat paste, she said.

"A king-size sheet can cover a lot of wall and the stripe can be appliqued to other things — a square topper to be used over the draped tablecloth made out of a sheet and a napkin, an oversized napkin that is made out of a pillowcase. I also cut flowers out of the Wind Flower sheet and applique them to cover sheets, towels or whatever." Marlene has done so much with sheets that she has been accused of having "textile fever," she said.

"Some of the best designs today are going into sheets," says Marlene, who believes more fine artists should become involved in designs for the home. In fact, she is planning "something really special for children's sheets," she said.

Art helps teach deaf

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Too much emphasis has been placed on deaf learners' disabilities instead of on their abilities, says Dr. Betty Miller, who studied the potential of "Deaf Students as Artists" for her doctoral thesis in art education at Pennsylvania State University.

The researcher, an associate professor of art at Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C., is herself a deaf learner who credits art with enhancing her self-image and ability to communicate.

She enlisted the help of four deaf Gallaudet students and two deaf assistants for her study, which she says has determined that a combination of art and sign language can help deaf students express themselves — both artistically and psychologically.

Telling the students to express themselves through drawing, she videotaped them at work. Later, through the use of Ameslan — American Sign Language — the students and teacher discussed the implications of the works.

The students' images of themselves came through graphically in the drawings, says Dr. Miller, a faculty member at Gallaudet since 1959. Their perceptions about deafness particularly were revealed.

For example, one student did a drawing which included a packaged ear, carrying a $7,000 price tag.

"Because deaf learners are auditorily deprived, much emphasis has been placed on the teaching of speech, lipreading and English so that deaf learners can supposedly function well in the hearing world," Dr. Miller points out. "Because of this emphasis, the deaf learners do not grow in their own right but instead become imitators of hearing people. Very little has been done about making use of their visual and tactile abilities."

Dr. Miller, who received the doctor of education degree at the summer term commencement exercises, is codirector of "Spectrum, Focus on Deaf Learners," an organization founded in 1974 in Austin, Tex.

Winter home tour set in mountains

Come "Home for the Holidays" is the nostalgic theme chosen for the 14th annual Mt. Baldy Christmas Home Tour to be held this week.

At home awaiting their guests on Friday from 1 to 4 p.m. and from 7 until 9 p.m. will be the hostesses, all residents of the canyon. The hours on Saturday will be the same. The opening of the homes on Saturday is an innovation, since the tour has not previously included a weekend.

The three homes are the Ed Ramstead home, built in 1929, the Harold Batchelor home which dates from the 1930s and the Gary Riley home, also built in the 1930s.

The Ramstead home is a survivor of the 1938 and 1969 floods. One of the residents is an artist and there is great charm and artistic taste there since the couple has been remodeling it to reflect themselves. They purchased the property in 1967. Previously, it had been only a summer cabin. A great deal of time has been spent on the remodeling and there have been many reasons for it.

The Harold Batchelors have practically rebuilt their house, which dates back to the 1930s and was a product of what the original builder could salvage from the debris left from the 1938 flood. The first cabin built on the location was a Kappa Delta fraternity house built by the men students at Pomona College in 1909. A fire destroyed much of it and the next owner was Dr. E. R. Son. In 1963 the home was purchased by the present owners from a member of the family who had inherited it. During the last year there has been an extension on the kitchen and sunporch.

The third home, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Gary Riley since 1974, has seen much remodeling in the last two years with both of the Rileys doing the work. Mrs. Riley is the registrar at La Verne College Law Center and a student in the law school.

Tea will be served this year in the old school house where the gift shop is located. Guests are also invited to visit the new school in the meadow at the entrance to the village, as well as the village church.

Tickets may be purchased in the village.

Give baby pretty and practical presents

NEW YORK (AP) — The baby of the family may not have been born with a silver spoon in his mouth, but that's a technicality easily overcome, advises the Jewelry Industry Council, which has some pretty and practical gift suggestions for doting parents and relatives to give the heir apparent.

About that silver spoon — there are elegant, baby-size silverware sets to start the little one on good table manners early. They can often even be matched to the sterling pattern the grownups use.

And you might consider a silver mug for the baby's milk and a silver porringer for pablum with a whimsical bear face in the bottom of the bowl.

If you think that such gifts are too pretentious, the council points out that silver tableware for baby is quite practical. Should the wee eater decide to send the applesauce into orbit, silver won't smash and it only takes on a richer patina with use. While you think of it, pick out a silver napkin ring and have the child's name engraved on it.

Other gift ideas grandma or grandpa may want to put on their list include silver baby banks. They come in an imaginative selection this year — from silver replicas of baby shoes to whimsical nursery rhyme pigs.

For youngsters a bit older, new and practical is the "lost and found" ident bracelet for kindergarten age kiddies.

Holiday party set Saturday

The Pomona Valley Dental Assistants Society has planned a fun-filled evening for all dental assistants and their guests. The dinner dance will be held Saturday at the Western Hills Country Club, Chino.

Cocktails will be served at 6:30 p.m. with dinner following at 7:30 p.m. Following dinner there will be a live band for dancing. Reservations may be made by calling Joan at 735-5666 or Elizabeth at 629-3847.

Joyce Brothers

American disease

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: What's wrong with my children? They complain constantly about boredom. They have had every advantage and yet seem unable to entertain themselves or appreciate what many people would consider a good life. I don't want to preach at them but I worry that they'll turn to drugs or God-knows-what in their search for new kicks. — C.A.

DEAR C.A.: Unfortunately, your family is not unique. Americans suffer from boredom more than most peoples, according to Tibor Scitovsky, Stanford University professor and author. They mistake comfort for pleasure and often end up experiencing little joy, he says.

The high level of this state of dissatisfaction, this sense of emptiness, probably reflects distorted values. We place so much emphasis on making money and achieving success that we forget about and lose touch with our inner selves. Often, we are afraid to show our emotions and when they're repressed or hidden for a long period of time, it's not surprising that the individual finds he's almost completely out of touch with his feelings.

There is some foundation for your worries. Boredom can be dangerous. It can make youngsters, and adults, for that matter, go to almost any extreme in an attempt to escape it. On the other hand, sometimes adolescents go through a period when they say they're bored although, actually, ideas may be germinating. Short periods of boredom can lead to periods of creativity.

Reading can help overcome boredom faster than almost anything else, for youngsters can share in lives they may find more interesting and exciting than their own. The child who has enough challenges can't be bored too long if he sees some possibility of winning.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm 12 and I'm kind of worried because I don't care much for boys. I like older women much more and I find them nicer and would rather be with them than someone like my father even though I like him very much. Some of my friends feel this is weird and not normal. I know you can't help how you feel but I think boy-crazy girls are dumb and boring. My mother says I'll probably change. — B.L.

DEAR B.L.: I think your mother is right. The important thing now is that you respect what and how you feel and don't allow yourself to do things just because others are doing them. Remain an individual and protect your right not to have to follow the herd. This takes courage. It's much easier to pretend to agree when you find everyone else is behaving in a certain way. If you have the courage to speak your mind even if it goes against the group you may give others courage and they may start opening up and confessing that they share some of your fears and anxieties.

Many youngsters today feel they have to push themselves into behavior they're not ready for. This actually delays the maturing process and can have permanently harmful effects. People develop at different rates of speed. Some develop in one area very rapidly and may be delayed in another area.

Workshop planned Tuesday

"Day Star Is Hope" is the theme of the creative workshop to be held at the Claremont Presbyterian Church by the Women's Association on Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 11:45 a.m.

Four classes will be available with two sessions each. "Caring for the Paraplegic" will be led by Dr. Wilson E. Daniel, associate pastor. "Jesus-Hope in the Year of Jubilee" will be led by Joan Huff and Chris Connelly. "Church Women United" will be led by Beatrice Russell. "Creative Endeavors" (crafts) will be directed by Frank Weyant and Barbara Janda.

This is the second workshop held by the UPW this year. It is open to anyone interested and child care is provided.

OES unit plans yule luncheon

The Emera Club, Order of the Eastern Star, will meet Wednesday at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Philip Gustafson, 367 Golden Carriage Lane, Pomona. Following the installation of officers, there will be a Christmas gift exchange.

Cohostesses for the meeting are Mrs. Mae Hunt and Mrs. Gertrude Smyers.

Meeting scheduled Thursday

Past commanders of the Auxiliary to Jack Ford Jr. chapter, Disabled American Veterans will hold the final meeting of the year on Thursday. The group will meet at noon at 644 E. Columbia Ave., Pomona, for a salad luncheon. Plans will be formulated for the work among shutins during the holidays, and there will be a gift exchange.

Krainik-Forester vows exchanged

MRS. KRAINIK

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Temple in Los Angeles was the setting for the marriage of Miss Annette Marie Forester of Claremont and Gregory Michael Krainik of Waukesha, Wis. The couple was married Saturday in a morning ceremony followed by an evening reception at McConnell Center, Pitzer College, Claremont.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Forester of Claremont. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Krainik of Waukesha, Wis.

Miss Ellen Anderson was honor attendant and serving as bestman was Steve Augerbauer. Other attendants were Kena Krainik, Sandy Apostal, Kathy Forester and Lynn Forester. Stephanie Peterson was the flower girl.

Among the guests were grandparents, Garland A. Swenson of Spanish Fork, Utah, and Mrs. Walter J. Krainik Sr., Waukesha.

The newlyweds will honeymoon at San Clemente and then will go to Provo, Utah to reside.

DAR unit will meet Thursday

Members of the Claremont Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will meet Thursday at Manor Hall, Claremont Manor.

Bonita High School Chamber singers, directed by Roger Winter, will provide a program for guest day. Following a 1:30 p.m. dessert, the 20 singers will present a program of Christmas music. The Chamber Singers received special honors in the spring when they were selected to perform in Washington, D.C. during Bicentennial celebrations in June.

Mrs. Frank J. Erhart will be chairman of the event. Assisting her are Mmes. Arthur E. Dale, Arthur DeMott, Eric E. DeMoulin, Edward A. Ewing, Ernest E. Jones, Henry Lacy, Joseph E. Barber Jr. and Robert L. Lamphier.

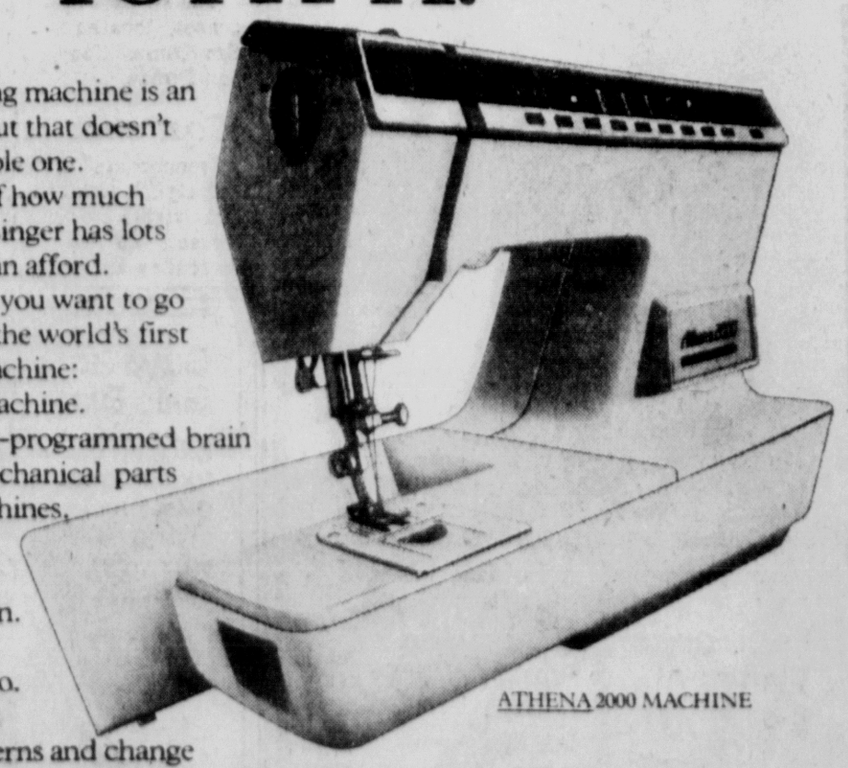
WHATEVER SHAPE YOUR BUDGET IS IN, THERE'S A SINGER GIFT TO FIT IT.

A Singer* sewing machine is an extraordinary gift. But that doesn't mean it's an impossible one. Because regardless of how much you want to spend, Singer has lots of special gifts you can afford.

For example, if you want to go all out, you can give the world's first electronic sewing machine: the Athena* 2000 machine.

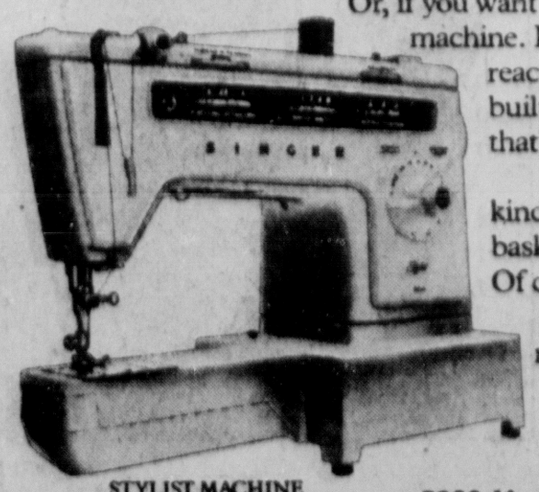
It has a tiny pre-programmed brain that replaces 350 mechanical parts in conventional machines. To tell the brain what you want, simply press a button. Then the brain tells the needle what to do.



ATHENA 2000 MACHINE

You can sew 25 different stitch patterns and change stitches without stopping the machine. Make a buttonhole easily. Or wind a bobbin in one easy step.

Or, if you want to be less extravagant, there's the Stylist* machine. It has a free arm for sewing hard-to-reach places like pant legs and blouse cuffs. A built-in buttonholer. And a front drop-in bobbin that's easy to see and easy to replace.



STYLIST MACHINE MODEL 534

At Singer, you'll find all kinds of gifts at all kinds of prices. From sewing books. To sewing baskets. (Even our quality vacuum cleaners.) Of course, the best thing about them is the one thing they all have in common: The Singer name. And that's quite a gift all by itself.

Hooyboer-Lowe vows repeated

The Grove Street Bible Church in Pomona was the setting for the marriage of Miss Donna Lowe of Los Angeles and Bob Hooyboer of Pomona. The couple was wed by the Rev. Charles A. White in an afternoon ceremony followed by a reception at the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lowe of Los Angeles. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Irene Hooyboer of Pomona.

Miss Joan Hooyboer of Pomona was honor attendant. Serving as best man was Joe Hooyboer of Pomona. Other attendants were Gwen Cox of Los Angeles and Peggy Province of Pomona, bridesmaids; Tim Cavsgrove of Granada Hills and Ralph Chertkow of Salt Lake City, ushers.

Holiday bazaar scheduled

Christmas is in the air and Holy Name of Mary Catholic School will help prepare for the day with a bazaar Dec. 5. There will be many shops with items of interest for all between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

The bakery and kitchen shop will arouse memories of Christmas past with its fragrant aroma of baked breads, pies and cookies.

Those who want to give a gift that lasts throughout the new year will be pleased with the large selection of plants, pots, and macrame hangars featured in the plant shop.

The children's corner will have anything a child can afford for any member of his family.

Earrings, necklaces and bracelets may be purchased in the jewelry shops. Both handmade, natural items and costume jewelry will be available.

The home shops will give everyone a chance to exchange lovely handmade gifts such as afghans, baby quilts and slippers.

A toy shop can help finish the holiday preparation. Pine cone wreaths, table decorations, tree ornaments, stockings and wall hangings will be waiting to brighten the home.

To add a touch of elegance to the Christmas bazaar, wine and hor d'oeuvres will be served in the parish hall. There will also be a children's area where punch, popcorn and Hot Dogs will be sold.

The shops will be in the school, located at 124 S. San Dimas Canyon Road, San Dimas.

Coat etiquette

Trenchcoats are smart and stylish but they don't look right over cocktail dresses, no matter how short they are.

Childbirth classes set in Covina

A new series of classes in prepared childbirth will begin Dec. 1 at 7:15 p.m. at Inter-Community Hospital at Covina.

The classes, conducted by Chris Wied, will consist of eight two-hour sessions. Prepared childbirth is a method of preparation for expectant mothers and provides them with methods of dealing with the discomforts of pregnancy through exercises and good body mechanics.

Mail soon

Better mail as soon as possible. That prolonged strike by United Parcel Service has caused a log jam for the U.S. Postal Service. The latter recommends mailing parcels no later than Dec. 3, with letters and greeting cards no later than Dec. 10.

Family Circus

There is etiquette in selecting cards

In a world that often seems brash and impolite, the exchange of greeting cards — particularly at Christmas — is a warm gesture of friendship. This is, indeed, the season in which to renew old acquaintances and the renewal might best start with the Christmas card list.

Is the card list up to date or is it hopelessly obsolete? Now's the time to check it, giving one plenty of time later to cope with the inevitable shopping rush.

The National Association of Greeting Card Publishers offers some helpful hints for this holiday season. First, the card list can be a handy reference when shopping for Christmas gifts. It is really a basic year-round clue to friends, acquaintances, relatives whenever one chooses to send a note.

Check each address to make sure of everyone's full name, street number, city, state and zip code. Once the list is in shape, be ready to shop for cards, a happy task with literally thousands of new designs available this year.

One may wish to give thought to personalized Christmas cards. These are the ones on which the name can be imprinted or engraved. Most of the cards can be selected from albums now on display in specialty shops and department stores. The style of imprint can be as formal or informal as one chooses. The choice of style can be taken directly from examples in the albums.

One can always add a personal touch to printed personalized cards by penning a warm note. These informal messages do much to add a dash of cheer to what might otherwise be considered a formal greeting.

It is considered correct to send one card to a husband and wife and separate cards to other members of the family. Or else, use the familiary "family to family" style cards. In sending cards to business acquaintances address them at their office unless one knows other members of their families, in which case the cards can be sent to their homes.

If a card is sent to a friend or acquaintance in mourning, select one with a religious theme.

Nothing makes a relative or friend happier than receiving a card especially chosen. There are cards for virtually every taste and personal interest that provide the means to reach out and keep in touch with those about whom one cares.

Christmas activity planned

The Pomona Junior Women's Club has Planned a Christmas boutique to be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Caren Whitside, 4022 N. Williams, La Verne.

The public is invited to join the Junior membership for coffee and refreshments. Proceeds from the sale of the boutique items will go to youth organizations in the valley.

The evening is also designed to acquaint women with the activities and functions of Pomona Juniors. A service organization open to women between 18 and 35, the Juniors offer many projects. Information may be obtained by calling the membership chairman, Laura Cramer, at 985-2156.

Check luggage

When you're shopping for a suitcase, check the zippers and clasps for easy handling. If they're too much trouble to open and close, choose something else.

Yule bazaar charted

Handicrafts, baked goods, Christmas decorations and many more lovely items for gifts or for yourself will be on sale at the Christmas bazaar on the Mt. San Antonio College campus Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The annual scholarship fund-raising event is sponsored by Delta Chi Omega, the home economics club, and its cochairmen are Tami Margid, Covina, and Cindy Garcia, Baldwin Park.

The bazaar will be held in the Home Economics Department, Building 19B Room 3 from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday and 6 to 9 p.m. Thursday, and from 9 a.m. to noon, Friday.

LEWIS HOMES-SAN DIMAS, framing stage reached

Real estate

By Walker and Lee

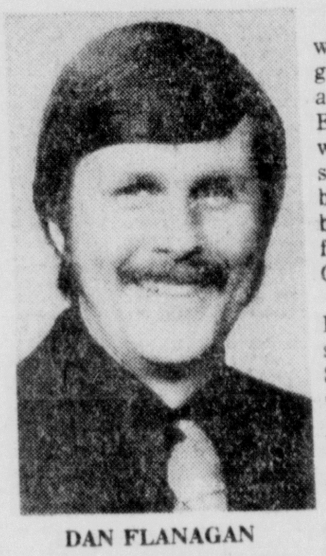
New D.B. office open

Walker & Lee Real Estate has opened its newest residential resale office in Diamond Bar Village just west of Diamond Bar Boulevard at Golden Springs Drive, announces Senior Vice President for the Anaheim-based diversified real estate services firm, Ron Rosen.

"This location was carefully selected to serve a booming residential area," noted Rosen. "While Walker & Lee is new to the area in resale, we have sold close to 3,000 new homes for such well-known builders as Presley, M.J Brock, Deane and Occidental in the past few years and currently selling in the area for Presley."

At 23453 E. Golden Springs Drive, the new office is of Spanish architecture and beautifully appointed.

The staff, which will consist of 25 salespeople, is directed by Dan Flanagan, who joined Walker & Lee as a salesman in 1972. Most recently in the Cerritos area, he earned numerous company awards including Office Salesman of the



DAN FLANAGAN

Year in 1973 and 1975; Top Ten in 1975; Winner's Circle in 1974, 1975 and 1976, the company's prestigous top producers club. As number one for 1975 in "Subsidary Participation," he just recently returned from the awarded prize of a Carribean cruise.

Flanagan previously was affiliated with Alpha Beta Markets as a manager from 1958 to 1969, and later in sales for Laura Scudder Potatoe Chips.

A native Californian, he was born in Bell, and he grew up in the Lynwood area, where he was an Eagle Scout and graduated with honors from high school. He earned a bachelors degree in business administration from Long Beach State College.

A resident of Walnut, Flanagan is an outdoor sportsman. His wife Sharon, also a salesperson with Walker & Lee, will join the Diamond Bar staff. The couple have three children.

The Diamond Bar office is the sixth new resale office to be opened by Walker & Lee Real Estate this year and brings the company total to 53.

Walker & Lee is the largest single-ownership residential real estate company in the nation. It serves as exclusive sales agent at over 125 new developments throughout California, Arizona and Nevada and has subsidiaries in mortgage banking, escrow, and insurance.

Recent Continental promotions revealed

Daniel J. Epstein, President of Continental American Management Corp. has announced the promotion of six individuals to various positions within his San Diego based organization.

Nancie Larimore has been promoted to Corporate Vice President; John M. Cooper has been named Vice President, Construction; Alfred L. Clark, Sharon C. Warren and Toni Nevers became Regional Vice Presidents, and Betty J. Workman has been named Controller. All of the individuals were associated with Mr. Epstein in the Multi-Family and Property Management Divisions of American Housing Guild which he acquired slightly over a year ago.

The Company currently manages 6,000 units valued at $120 million with annual revenues of $18 million. Properties are located throughout California, including eight large complexes in the greater Los Angeles area, and 4 other states.

Under an affiliate, Continental American Properties, Ltd., the Company is currently building two apartment projects.

MATILDA HOUT

Hout earns sales honor

Matilda Hout, associated with Future Realty, Claremont, was presented a sales award by the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors for having had the largest single sale — $215,000 — for the month of October.

Mrs. Hout has been in the real estate profession for the past five years. She is presently serving on the house and ticket committee at the Pomona Board.

By Lewis Homes

New home sites readied in S.D.

Construction has reached the framing stage and reservations for purchase are now being taken at a new Lewis Homes community at Base Line Road and Walnut Avenue in San Dimas, it was announced by the building company.

The 21 single-family residences comprising the initial unit are being constructed in four different floor plans and a variety of architectural motifs. They include three and four-bedroom stylings with two full baths, family room, interior laundry room and two or three-car garage.

"Because of the limited number of homes in the initial unit and the fast selling pace that has characterized our other residential development in the area, we recommend that potential buyers visit the Lewis Homes-San Dimas construction site at the earliest possible moment," said the building company's vice-president of marketing Randall Lewis.

"Not only will an early visit provide a wider choice of lot locations: it's a safeguard against possible price increases brought about by advancing building costs prevalent in today's market," Lewis said. He noted that reservations now being procesed are at a price range starting at $43,900.

Custom-designed fireplaces with gas valve and key, cultured marble pullman tops and ceiling lights in all bedrooms are appointments incorporated into each home. Other features vary in the different models, among them being cathedral ceilings, walk-in wardrobe and built-in snack bar or eating counter. One model has a spacious basement which may be converted to a bonus room or extra bedroom.

Kitchens are equipped with continuous-cleaning oven, range, dishwasher and disposal unit. Wall-to-wall carpeting is featured in living room, hallways, all bedrooms and wardrobe closets.

Information and reservation applications are obtainable at a sales trailer on the construction site. It may be reached from the Foothill Freeway (210) by turning north at the San Dimas Avenue exit to Base Line Road, then east to the homes.

Another route is via Foothill Boulevard to San Dimas Avenue, then south to Base Line and east to the development. The sales trailer is open daily till dusk.

1177 Astor Street – Upland – (714) 982-6119

By Crowell-Leventhal

Upland home sales scored

Daybreak Homes in Upland is down to selling the last five homes in the successful community of 69 homes. Reasons for the tremendous success of this Crowell-Leventhal development are varied.

"Value has been important to all our buyers," states Clara Sehi of Walker and Lee, brokers for Crowell-Leventhal. "Everyone has commented that they find our Daybreak Homes to be the most house for the money in the area. In a time of rising costs, our dollar value has impressed our homebuyers and given them incentive to buy now."

now."

A second factor in homebuyers acceptance has been quality. According to Dee Rafferty, also of Walker and Lee, "Our homebuyers are confident of a well constructed, well engineered home because they know the Crowell-Leventhal reputation for high standards. And these homes have stood the test of their inspection and proven themselves once a family moves in." Both ladies agree, "It's been a pleasure to sell at Daybreak. We only wish we had 69 more of them."

The five homes that are still available for sale are ready for immediate occupancy and are priced from $52,500. This price includes 4 generous bedrooms in an exciting two-story plan.

New community open for sales

Northview features dramatic views of snow capped mountains in a rural, yet easily accessible area in Upland. Homes range from the Golden Spur model with three bedrooms and two baths to the Northview model, two stories, four bedrooms, three baths.

Presently working out of a temporary sales trailer in the shadow of Northview framing, Jim Brown, Northview sales representative, reports that interest is high and sales brisk.

Each home at Northview is built on a large 10,000 sq. ft. lot and contains such luxury amenities as 3-car garages, fireplaces, large family rooms, walk-in closets and luxury home architectural accents.

Some of the homes offer such features as raised tile entries, formal dining areas, fireplaces in master bedrooms, luminous kitchen ceilings, breakfast rooms, wet bars, exposed beam vaulted ceilings and private balconies.

Prices range from $57,450 for the 3 bedroom 2 bath "Golden Spur" to $74,450 for the Northview, a 2-story, 4 bedroom, 3 bath modern formal large family home.

If you think you've been priced out of the market... think again!

Now you can own a single-family home filled with luxuries — at a price you'd expect to pay for just the bare walls. Two attractive communities. Both great buys. Lewis Homes-Alta Loma and The Highlands by Lewis Homes.

LEWIS HOMES-SAN DIMAS, framing stage reached

Real estate

By Walker and Lee

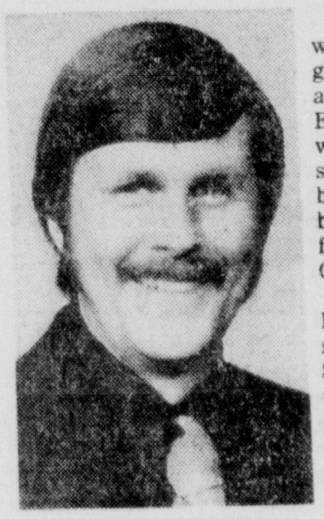
New D.B. office open

Walker & Lee Real Estate has opened its newest residential resale office in Diamond Bar Village just west of Diamond Bar Boulevard at Golden Springs Drive, announces Senior Vice President for the Anaheim-based diversified real estate services firm, Ron Rosen.

"This location was carefully selected to serve a booming residential area," noted Rosen. "While Walker & Lee is new to the area in resale, we have sold close to 3,000 new homes for such well-known builders as Presley, M.J Brock, Deane and Occidental in the past few years and currently selling in the area for Presley."

At 23453 E. Golden Springs Drive, the new office is of Spanish architecture and beautifully appointed.

The staff, which will consist of 25 salespeople, is directed by Dan Flanagan, who joined Walker & Lee as a salesman in 1972. Most recently in the Cerritos area, he earned numerous company awards including Office Salesman of the Year in 1973 and 1975; Top Ten in 1975; Winner's Circle in 1974, 1975 and 1976, the company's prestigous top producers club. As number one for 1975 in "Subsidary Participation," he just recently returned from the awarded prize of a Carribean cruise.



DAN FLANAGAN

Flanagan previously was affiliated with Alpha Beta Markets as a manager from 1958 to 1969, and later in sales for Laura Scudder Potatoe Chips.

A native Californian, he was born in Bell, and he grew up in the Lynwood area, where he was an Eagle Scout and graduated with honors from high school. He earned a bachelors degree in business administration from Long Beach State College.

A resident of Walnut, Flanagan is an outdoor sportsman. His wife Sharon, also a salesperson with Walker & Lee, will join the Diamond Bar staff. The couple have three children.

The Diamond Bar office is the sixth new resale office to be opened by Walker & Lee Real Estate this year and brings the company total to 53.

Walker & Lee is the largest single-ownership residential real estate company in the nation. It serves as exclusive sales agent at over 125 new developments throughout California, Arizona and Nevada and has subsidiaries in mortgage banking, escrow, and insurance.

Recent Continental promotions revealed

Daniel J. Epstein, President of Continental American Management Corp. has announced the promotion of six individuals to various positions within his San Diego based organization.

Nancie Larimore has been promoted to Corporate Vice President; John M. Cooper has been named Vice President, Construction; Alfred L. Clark, Sharon C. Warren and Toni Nevers became Regional Vice Presidents, and Betty J. Workman has been named Controller. All of the individuals were associated with Mr. Epstein in the Multi-Family and Property Management Divisions of American Housing Guild which he acquired slightly over a year ago.

The Company currently manages 6,000 units valued at $120 million with annual revenues of $18 million. Properties are located throughout California, including eight large complexes in the greater Los Angeles area, and 4 other states.

Under an affiliate, Continental American Properties, Ltd., the Company is currently building two apartment projects.

MATILDA HOUT

Hout earns sales honor

Matilda Hout, associated with Future Realty, Claremont, was presented a sales award by the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors for having had the largest single sale — $215,000 — for the month of October.

Mrs. Hout has been in the real estate profession for the past five years. She is presently serving on the house and ticket committee at the Pomona Board.

TOM RISELING, former contract management executive for Rockwell International, has joined the sales staff of Herbert Hawkins Realtors in Chino.

New home sites readied in S.D.

Construction has reached the framing stage and reservations for purchase are now being taken at a new Lewis Homes community at Base Line Road and Walnut Avenue in San Dimas, it was announced by the building company.

The 21 single-family residences comprising the initial unit are being constructed in four different floor plans and a variety of architectural motifs. They include three and four-bedroom stylings with two full baths, family room, interior laundry room and two or three-car garage.

"Because of the limited number of homes in the initial unit and the fast selling pace that has characterized our other residential development in the area, we recommend that potential buyers visit the Lewis Homes-San Dimas construction site at the earliest possible moment," said the building company's vice-president of marketing Randall Lewis.

"Not only will an early visit provide a wider choice of lot locations: it's a safeguard against possible price increases brought about by advancing building costs prevalent in today's market," Lewis said. He noted that reservations now being procesed are at a price range starting at $43,900.

Custom-designed fireplaces with gas valve and key, cultured marble pullman tops and ceiling lights in all bedrooms are appointments incorporated into each home. Other features vary in the different models, among them being cathedral ceilings, walk-in wardrobe and built-in snack bar or eating counter. One model has a spacious basement which may be converted to a bonus room or extra bedroom.

Kitchens are equipped with continuous-cleaning oven, range, dishwasher and disposal unit. Wall-to-wall carpeting is featured in living room, hallways, all bedrooms and wardrobe closets.

Information and reservation applications are obtainable at a sales trailer on the construction site. It may be reached from the Foothill Freeway (210) by turning north at the San Dimas Avenue exit to Base Line Road, then east to the homes.

Another route is via Foothill Boulevard to San Dimas Avenue, then south to Base Line and east to the development. The sales trailer is open daily till dusk.

Upland home sales scored

By Crowell-Leventhal

Daybreak Homes in Upland is down to selling the last five homes in the successful community of 69 homes. Reasons for the tremendous success of this Crowell-Leventhal development are varied.

"Value has been important to all our buyers," states Clara Sehi of Walker and Lee, brokers for Crowell-Leventhal. "Everyone has commented that they find our Daybreak Homes to be the most house for the money in the area. In a time of rising costs, our dollar value has impressed our homebuyers and given them incentive to buy now."

A second factor in homebuyers acceptance has been quality. According to Dee Rafferty, also of Walker and Lee, "Our homebuyers are confident of a well constructed, well engineered home because they know the Crowell-Leventhal reputation for high standards. And these homes have stood the test of their inspection and proven themselves once a family moves in." Both ladies agree, "It's been a pleasure to sell at Daybreak. We only wish we had 69 more of them."

The five homes that are still available for sale are ready for immediate occupancy and are priced from $52,500. This price includes 4 generous bedrooms in an exciting two-story plan.

New community open for sales

Northview features dramatic views of snow capped mountains in a rural, yet easily accessible area in Upland. Homes range from the Golden Spur model with three bedrooms and two baths to the Northview model, two stories, four bedrooms, three baths.

Presently working out of a temporary sales trailer in the shadow of Northview framing, Jim Brown, Northview sales representative, reports that interest is high and sales brisk.

Each home at Northview is built on a large 10,000 sq. ft. lot and contains such luxury amenities as 3-car garages, fireplaces, large family rooms, walk-in closets and luxury home architectural accents.

Some of the homes offer such features as raised tile entries, formal dining areas, fireplaces in master bedrooms, luminous kitchen ceilings, breakfast rooms, wet bars, exposed beam vaulted ceilings and private balconies.

Prices range from $57,450 for the 3 bedroom 2 bath "Golden Spur" to $74,450 for the Northview, a 2-story, 4 bedroom, 3 bath modern formal large family home.

Saving the best for last.

or basement or garage. You won't need a map to find the hidden treasure in your attic -- or garage, or basement. And you shouldn't have to do a lot of digging to find it.

If you are like the average householder, you'll find this "gold" is in "nuggets" of many shapes and sizes. Like small appliances, toys, athletic equipment, cameras or jewelry. Or such large items as a bicycle, musical instruments, furniture or appliances. You'll never know how great the list can be until you start digging.

These things that you no longer need are treasures for which somebody will pay you good money. So turn these still usable items into your gold mine. Call today and list your available goods, you'll be surprised how many prospects are ready to respond to your "prospecting." Thar's gold in them thar Want Ads.

It's the Truth!

THERE WERE NO PURITANS ON THE MAYFLOWER!
The Dictionary of U.S. History confirms the fact that the Puritans were members of the Church of England who wanted to "purify" it - while the pilgrims were separatists in sentiment. The Pilgrims came over on the May flower

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — When washing a garment that is to be drip-dried and you have only a wire coat hanger, first slip a clear plastic bag over the hanger. This eliminates any danger of rust getting on the garment. —MRS.M.R.

DEAR POLLY — Anyone who has bought a bicentennial decanter filled with cranberry juice will find they probably have a tight-fitting lid right in the house. Those plastic lids on the round cans that potato chips come in are perfect. — MRS. J.B.T.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — After you finish oiling your typewriter roll a paper towel on the roller to absorb any excess oil. — MRS. H.L.J.

DEAR POLLY — I got holes in the toes of my hose until I began putting nail polish right on the very ends of my nails after I cut them. No more holes. — EDE.

DEAR POLLY — When painting with an oil base paint and I am out of paint remover, I use some spray deodorant. It usually does the job. — MRS. H.L.J.

DEAR POLLY — I have suede shoes in several colors and I use colored chalk in the various colors to rub over scuff marks. Several colors may be combined to get an off-color, but try this on a piece of paper first. Be very gentle, and use a suede brush for the final blending. For whites and some pale colors I use baby powder. —ANDREA.

DEAR POLLY — When having trouble threading a needle due to poor eyesight, nervousness or whatever, buy embroidery needles for regular sewing. The eyes are larger and easier to thread. —BERTHA.

DEAR POLLY — Flower pots placed around a porch or balcony can be easily knocked off by a gust of wind. To secure such a pot, drive a nail in the railing, leaving two or three inches standing upright and exposed. Slip the hole in the pot over the nail and the problem is solved. — D.H.

DEAR POLLY — Use an apple corer when setting out tiny plants as it does a better job than a trowel or knife. — D.H.

DEAR POLLY — When dusting furniture with slats, like those in some chair backs, avoid getting furniture polish on the floor by putting a cloth under the piece you are spray dusting. The cloth will have polish on it for further dusting. — KAY.

The Set

Lucy's coming back! No that's not the title of a new, fifth series for TV's delightfully zany redhead. But Lucille Ball does indeed return to television, this Sunday at 8PM, when CBS honors her with a two-hour tribute, "CBS Salutes Lucy—The First 25 Years." The show chronicles her quarter-century of inspired comedy and clowning by presenting film highlights of her four TV series. Joining Lucy on the retrospective are John Wayne, Bob Hope, Danny Kaye, Johnny Carson, Jimmy Stewart, Dick Van Dyke, Danny Thomas, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr., Richard Burton, Milton Berle, Carol Burnett, Desi Arnaz Sr., Gale Gordon and Vivian Vance (the latter trio from her earlier series.

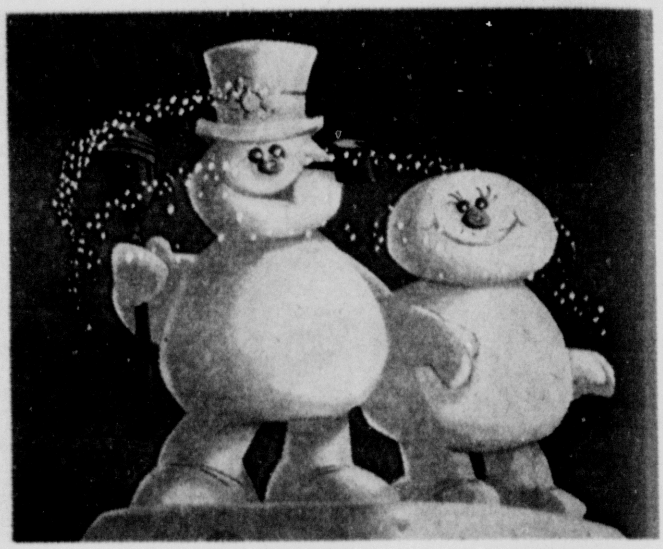
Frosty the Snowman, the enchanting holiday character who annually leads viewers into a fanciful winter wonderland of animated Christmas entertainment, takes a wife in a delightful new half-hour musical sequel "Frosty's Winter Wonderland," on ABC, Thursday at 8PM. Andy Griffith serves as narrator and sings in the Special that features Jackie Vernon as the voice of Frosty, Shelley Winters as Mrs. Frosty, Dennis Day as the singing Parson Brown and Paul Frees as Jack Frost. In the new story, Frosty comes back down from the North Pole to find himself a wife, but not without some amusing obstacles thrown in his path by Jack Frost.

...Frosty...



"Beauty and the Beast," the new drama starring George C. Scott and Trish Van Devere, airs as a Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation on NBC, Friday at 8:30PM. The 90-minute drama, drawn from the classic love story, marks the first time Scott and Ms. Van Devere (who are husband and wife) have starred together in a TV Special. The play was filmed on location at Knebworth House, St. Mary's Church, Lambeth and other sites outside London, and at Sudeley Castle in Gloucestershire, England. Featured in the Special are Virginia McKenna as Lucy and Bernard Lee as Beaumont (the sister and father of Belle, the "Beauty" of the title); Patricia Quinn as Susan, Belle's other sister; Michael Hordern as Anthony, Susan's husband, and Norman Burton as Nicholas, Belle's brother.

'REAL TERRYVILLE TRIP'

Tadewurz Wladzui Konopka recently discovered that nostalgia can be extremely fattening. He also found that comedy, in his old home town, is no laughing matter. He re-learned so many things about his native community and its people, as a mater of fact, that he created a show around them and called it "The Ted Knight Musical Comedy Variety Special Special."

Tadewurz Konopka is the real name of the Emmy Award-winning actor-comedian who is seen as news anchorman Ted Baxter on the Mary Tyler Moore Show. Last spring, Ted returned to his native Terryville, Conn., after an absence of many years, to receive the town's honors as its Man of the Year. That trip, translated into a comedic odyssey, is the basis of Knight's first starring special. With a little help from his friends Edward Asner, Rue McClanahan, Ethel Merman, Phil Silvers, Loretta Swit and Fred MacMurray, Knight recreates his Terryville triumph, Tuesday at 8PM on CBS.

"As a comedy character, I'm used to being laughed at," Knight said. "In Terryville, everybody cried when they saw me. That took some getting used to."

Most of his old friends in the largely Polish community had not seen "little Tadewurz" for a very long time, and they reacted to the reunion with characteristic emotion. "First they cried," Knight recalls, "and then they started cooking. We ate all the time. We went from one home to another. It was truly a 'full-filling' experience."

Many of the events that are given comedy treatment in the special actually took place during the visit. There was, indeed, a parade. There was a testimonial dinner attended by the mayor and various local dignitaries. There was the nostalgic visits to the old homestead, to the old schoolhouse and other sentimental safaris. "We treat it with laughter in the special," Knight says, "but it's warm, loving laughter. I think that comes through in the show."

'THE WAY HE WAS'

Harry Lillis Crosby Jr. was 7 when, with his hair slicked back, his knee socks straight, and his bow tie in place, he made his television debut on his father's Christmas show. That was in 1965 on the stage of the Hollywood Palace Theater in Los Angeles.

This Christmas, Harry makes his 12th annual appearance with his famous dad on "Bing Crosby's White Christmas Special," a musical hour with guests Jackie Gleason, Bernadette Peters and the rest of the members of the Crosby family, Wednesday at 9PM on CBS. Harry is now a young man of 18, and a serious musician who studies harmony and composition at a leading music college, and plays guitar and piano.

As he watched his father rehearse a scene with Gleason in a large bustling former motion picture studio in the London suburb of Boreham Woods, Herts., where the Special was taped immediately following Bing's smash two-week benefit engagement at London's Palladium, Harry recalled his debut, which is to him a lifetime ago.

"I do remember it," he says. "I remember that I wore short pants and something to flatten the back of my hair so it wouldn't flop over my forehead. I even recall thinking at the time that an awful lot was going on and I didn't know what it was all about—but I loved it!

"I sang a few bars of something," continues Harry, "and my dad said something about my having a bubble in my voice. I think he also gave me a small kick during a dance step as I was about to walk off the stage—not a real kick of course. It was really great fun."

Even at that age, Harry, the elder son of Bing and Kathryn Crosby, was not a stranger to a studio. He visited his famous father on film sets and in television, radio and recording studios from the time he was just a toddler. He got his first haircut in a studio makeup department when he was seven months old. And he turned 3 in England where his father and Bob Hope were filming the last of the classic "road" pictures, "The Road to Hong Kong," during the summer of 1961. He remains fascinated.

As he sits on the sideline, snaps pictures of his legendary father performing with other top stars, performs himself or chats with the band members, he is changed in many ways from the little boy with the "bubble" in his voice. An "awful lot" is still going on, but he knows what it's all about. And his manner indicates he still thinks it's "great fun, really great."

COVER CLOSE-UP

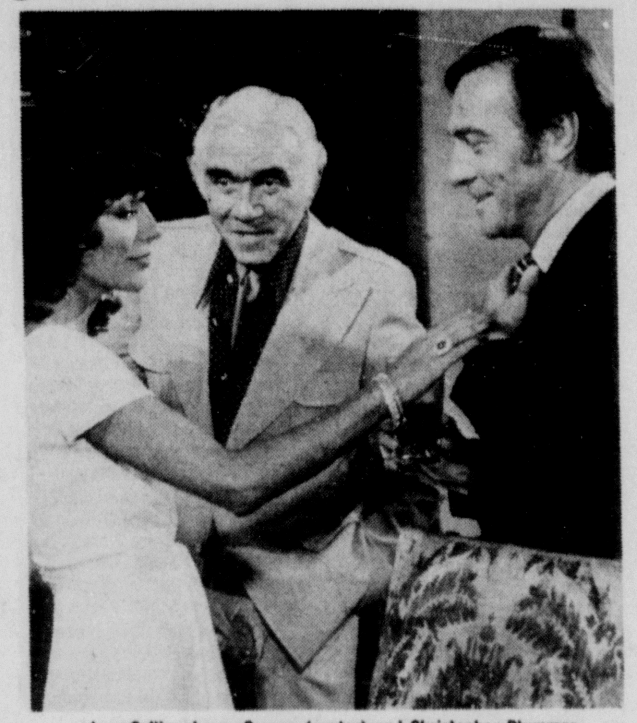
Kirk Douglas and Susan Flannery



Joan Collins, Lorne Greene (center) and Christopher Plummer

Kirk Douglas and Anne Baxter

It was shortly after 5PM in downtown Los Angeles and the streets were crowded with office workers anxious to get home. But the sight of a movie crew working on the sidewalk caused a small crowd of the curious to stop and gawk. Kirk Douglas, briefcase in hand strode briskly out of a large bank building and toward the camera. The crowd ooed and aahed its recognition.

This was no fly-by-night TV series hero. With that carved-out-of-granite face instantly recognizable after 54 movies, almost nobody had to be told it was Kirk Douglas. They were shooting a scene for "The Moneychangers," the six-and-a-half hour NBC World Premiere movie based on Arthur Hailey's best-selling novel, that will air on four nights, Saturday from 9 to 11PM, and on successive Sundays, Dec. 5, 12 and 19 (9:30-11PM).

Douglas, who plays a vice president vying with another vice president (Christopher Plummer) for the newly vacant job of president of a banking empire, talked about the price of being so recognizable.

"On balance, I've gotten so I like it," he said. "There are a few people who bother you when you're trying to eat in a restaurant or something but generally people are very good about it."

Douglas, a favorite of impressionists because of his distinctive voice and mannerisms, particularly likes comedian Frank Gorshin's rendition of him. "I was watching Frank do me one night on television and unconsciously my face was contorting to match his impression of me on the screen. My son looked over at me and said, 'Forget it, Pop, he does it much better than you'."

"The Moneychangers" was an enormous project as TV movies go. It took 63 days to shoot, had 182 speaking roles and cost nearly $4 million. And producer Ross Hunter called on old friendships to fill some key roles. For example he talked Helen Hayes (who won an Oscar for her role in Hunter's film "Airport") into working for a day as a psychiatrist treating Kirk Douglas' wife. And he got Jean Peters, who hadn't done a film in nearly 20 years (since "A Man called Peter" in 1957), to portray Christopher Plummer's wife. Peters has kept a low profile since her 14-year marriage to the late Howard Hughes. She admits she took the role because "Ross is an old, old friend and it was only two days work. I was a bit nervous, I guess, but everything went fine. But I did have a tension headache later."

Peters particularly enjoyed working with Plummer. "With me, he had a certain reserve and I found it most charming because I'm kind of, not shy, but not effusive, I don't think. He is very polite, friendly and warm—without being overpowering. Sometimes actors...they kind of sweep you off your feet."

Hunter says one of his more pleasant discoveries was "finding out what an excellent actress Susan Flannery is." She plays the love interest opposite Kirk Douglas. "I think the role will make her an important star," Hunter predicts flatly.

Already known to millions of daytime viewers as Dr. Laura Horton on NBC's daytime series Days of Our Lives, Ms. Flannery left the series after nine years to devote full time to other roles, such as Robert Wagner's secretary and secret amour in "The Towering Inferno." "There's no harder work than acting in soap operas," she says. "It's like learning a new play every day. But working live is stimulating and the exposure was terrific. And after working in soaps, every other acting job seems easy."

'SUSAN'S TURN'

Susan I started her career in daytime television, so did Susan II. Susan I appeared in "The Towering Inferno," so did Susan II. Susan I became a star after appearing in a television mini-series, and now it's Susan II's turn there, too.

Susan I is, of course, Susan Blakely, who made a name for herself in last season's Rich Man, Poor Man. Susan II is Susan Flannery, the female lead, Margo Bracken, opposite Kirk Douglas in the six and one-half hour "The Moneychangers," airing on NBC, beginning Saturday at 9PM.

Although Ms. Flannery isn't new to television (she won an Emmy for the role she played for eight and one-half years as Laura Hotron on Days of Our Lives), her role as Kirk Douglas' love interest in "The Moneychangers" is expected to launch her career as it did the other Susan. And "soaps" were also her springboard.

The part is a dream for Ms. Flannery. She plays the activist lawyer in the mini-series, a good part for woman who is liberated in her personal life as well as professionally. Susan is single, has her own house in Montecito, owns land in the mountains, tinkers with cars, scuba dives, golfs, rides a motorcycle and flies an airplane.

The blue-eyed blonde liberated herself from daytime television long enough to win a Golden Globe Award for her part as Robert Wagner's ill-fated secretary in "The Towering Inferno." Then she decided she had put in enough time in Days of Our Lives and left the "soap" and starred as the only female driver in a cross-country auto race in "The Gumball Rally," then on to "The Moneychangers."

'A PRESENT TO VIEWERS 12 DAYS OF TELEVISION GOODIES'

"On the first day of pledge week KCET gave to me
A whole night of British Comedy!"

There aren't really enough verses in this old carol (or space on this page) to do justice to the package of special programs in store for KCET viewers December 3 through 14. The photos give a peek at what is to come. But be sure to keep your TV WEEK handy between now and December 14, because you don't want to miss Anne Jackson in "84 Charing Cross Road," (Monday, Dec.6 at 11:20PM), or "Tennessee Williams' South" (Wednesday, Dec. 8 at 10:10PM), or the nostalgic "Good Old Days of Radio" (Friday, Dec. 10 at 9PM), or the fascinating "Christina's World" (Sunday, Dec. 12 at 7:45PM), or the great Preservation Hall Jazz Band (Monday, Dec. 13 at 10:45PM). These and other specials—in addition to KCET's regular programming—are the station's present to viewers during its annual Pledge Week campaign. It's much more fun than a partridge in a pear tree!

THE LITTLE SPARROW - Legendary French singer Edith Piaf is profiled in "I Regret Nothing," airing Monday (Dec. 13) at 9:10PM.

I ONLY HAVE EYES FOR YOU - Rudolph Valentino smokes up the screen in the rarely-seen film classic "Blood and Sand," airing Friday (Dec. 10).

THREE IN A ROW - A good way to end the week is with three (count 'em, three) Monty Pythons in a row, followed by a zany, outrageous and silent surprise "Picnic." The fun starts Friday (Dec. 3) at 9PM.

CARE TO TAKE A DIP? - Valentino demonstrates the tango in "The Legend of Valentino" airing Friday (Dec. 10).

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR LIONEL HAMPTON, jazz musician

Now that you're in your 60's, what's your future, and what is the future of jazz?—C.J., Gary, Ind.

● If you mean, am I thinking of retiring, the answer is "No!" Even though I've played for four Presidential inaugurations, toured the world 20 times and average almost 200 concerts a year, I'm just warming up. I think jazz is getting reborn. Kids today seem to enjoy dancing to a band with a different beat, and new expressions for jazz are developing in areas of rock music. I play more college- and high-school gigs than ever before. There's a demand for the big-band sound.

FOR JACK NELSON,
1976 women's Olympic swimming coach

What adjustments will the U.S. women swimmers have to make if they hope to challenge the East Germans in the 1980 Olympics?—S.V., Huron, S.D.

● They'll have to accept the fact that they need to get stronger. In order to do that, they must concentrate more on training with weights. There can be strength without huge bulk, and the women must have faith that after their competitive career is over, they will be able to get back to normal body shape within three to six months.

FOR GOV. ELLA GRASSO (Conn.)

Although you're often seen with your husband, you never seem to be with your children. Any reason for this?—Anna Micando, Prospect, Conn.

● Because he's retired, my husband is free to accompany me to many official functions. Susanne and Jim join us whenever their schedules permit, but photographers aren't always around when they do. Whether or not our children are with us publicly, they've always been our associates in the great and wonderful adventure of public service.

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER, comedienne

Why weren't you on the worst-dressed list this year? Did you bribe Mr. Blackwell—or get a new wardrobe?—Mary Brackley, Amherst, Ohio

● My designer of 15 years was finally sent to the rubber home for the terminally bewildered. Her last set of sketches left no doubt in my mind that she had really come down out of a tree.

FOR HANS HOLZER, authority on the occult and ESP

What has been your strangest supernatural experience?—M.B., Pine Bluff, Ark.

● While staying at an Austrian castle my wife and I woke simultaneously in the middle of the night. We saw a valet in a green uniform staring at us. As the vision disappeared, Catherine and I had a curious desire to pray. The next morning we learned that in the early 19th century, one of the masters of the castle was killed by a peasant, and the body was discovered by his valet, who wore a green uniform. We had slept in the victim's bed!

FOR LOUIS L'AMOUR, author

As a prolific writer of Westerns, are you an avid reader of them, too?—E.M., Cumberland, Mo.

● No. Not because I don't like them, but because I don't want to be influenced by any other Western writer's way of thinking. In fact, I never read any kind of fiction. When I pick up a book, it's always nonfiction.

FOR FLORENCE HENDERSON, singer

What was your proudest moment?—C.R., Bloomfield, Conn.

● When the Catholic Actors Guild named me Woman of the Year. All on their own, my kids (Barbara, Joseph, Robert and Elizabeth) took space in the souvenir program and said wonderful things about me. All four wrote long statements. They were so touching that it was all I could do to stop from crying my eyes out.

FOR MELISSA SUE ANDERSON
of "Little House on the Prairie"

Are you anything like your TV character, "Mary Ingalls" in real life?—E.M., Grand Island, N.Y.

● I guess I am a lot like Mary in real life. Mary likes school, and so do I. Mary gets straight "A" report cards, and so do I. Mary likes to read books, and so do I. But in real life, I'm much more outgoing than Mary; and I think I have more fun in life.

FOR JAMES BEARD, gourmet

● Mud pies on the beach when I was four. I wondered how they tasted and sampled all of them.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

What is the feud between Helen Reddy and Rod Stewart all about?—Lynn Anthony Oliver, San Antonio, Texas

● We checked with Helen, who gave us this report (by the way, she and Rod have never met): "Whenever my husband Jeff and I go to Hawaii, we always stay in the same suite at the Kahala-Hilton. On one occasion, about two years ago, Rod and Britt Eklund were in 'our suite' and were overstaying their reservation dates. Our booking had been confirmed earlier. It seems they decided to stay an extra couple of days. When Jeff went upstairs to find out what was going on, Rod refused to vacate or switch to the comparable accommodations offered by the management elsewhere in the hotel. In no way did we evict them. Rod did go, but, before doing so, left the room a wreck. I was shocked that anyone could behave like that. Since then, our paths have not crossed."

A COACH'S FORMULA FOR PRODUCING WINNERS

Indiana University's Bobby Knight believes in talent, discipline and sacrifice. His no-compromise philosophy has created a team of national champions.

Larry J. Crewell

Inspired by Gen. George Patton and other military leaders, Bobby Knight has sent his Hurryin' Hoosiers to victory in 63 out of 64 games in the last two years. In his career, his teams have won 225 of 295 games, and he is the youngest coach to have won 200 major college games.

By Bob Hammel

As the wild cheering of basketball fans splits the air, the handsome young coach with the plaid jacket and prematurely gray-streaked hair seems close to exploding with energy and excitement.

His eyes blaze, his face strains and his arms are constantly in motion as he shouts commands. He suffers with each minor setback, reacting instantly to errors and substituting players without a second's hesitation. Throughout the game, he is a picture of agonized concentration.

That's what it was like last season, and if history repeats itself, this coach may go so far as to hurl a chair to the floor, or angrily seize a player by his jersey, or turn and forcefully reprimand the crowd for unsportsmanlike conduct. And if the fans slacken in their enthusiasm, the coach is likely to turn cheerleader, to face the crowd and pound the air with his fist until he has the stands worked up to where they are showing a suitable measure of devotion. That means nothing less than 100 percent fanatical loyalty, for high on the long list of things coach Bobby Knight can not and will not tolerate, must be placed fans who fail to appreciate fully the team that is virtually an extension of himself—Indiana University's Hurryin' Hoosiers.

Bobby Knight is today the most highly regarded coach in college basketball, and assuming he doesn't pop a blood vessel shouting at a referee, he seems well on his way to the Basketball Hall of Fame. At 36, the controversial Knight is the youngest coach ever to have won 200 major college games. Last year, Indiana won 32 straight games in route to the national championship, and along the way they twice defeated defending champion UCLA. Statistics aside, Robert Montgomery Knight is already something of a legend, a legend composed of several parts. First and foremost is the warrior side. He is an unabashed disciple of Gen. George Patton, and even played a tape to his team of the general's speech from the George C. Scott movie about him. The speech is the one in which Patton reminds his troops that they won't win any wars by dying for their country; they'll win by forcing the other slob to die for his country.

And then there is the quotation from Patton which Knight has hanging in his office:

"You have to be single-minded, drive only for one thing on which you have decided . . . and if it looks as if you might be getting there, all kinds of people, including some you thought were your loyal friends, will suddenly show up doing their hypocritical [best] to trip you, blacken you and break your spirit."

Central to Bobby Knight's philosophy of winning is the principle that you don't get ahead by compromising.

"There are a lot of places where a kid can do his own thing," Knight says, "but Indiana is not one of them. And I tell them that the first time I meet them.

"I don't give them any rules after they get here. I tell them before we recruit them: 'If you come to Indiana, you're not going to do your thing, you're going to do MY thing. If you can't do that, then let's get an understanding right now that you're not going to consider Indiana because I'm not going to change.'

"I believe if we recruit a boy this way, he knows exactly what to expect because I think we're very demanding. I think we probably expect more of our basketball players than most schools do. We expect them to perform better. I don't think we can compromise in any way when we start recruiting.

"And I really don't think we turn very many off with that. I think kids want somebody who's honest with them, who's going to discipline them—somebody who lets them know exactly where he stands."

Knight's players aren't the only ones who have to contend with his demanding nature. He once ordered a red-faced university vice president out of the gym during practice because the official had violated Knight's rule that requires total silence during the two-hour sessions. The sessions, moreover, are generally off-limits to everyone but participants.

Knight is also uncompromising on the subject of recruiting violations. He feels the player, as well as the coach who made the offer, should be penalized. (The boy should lose his eligibility at all schools, the coach should lose his job, and the school's schedule in that sport should be suspended for a year.) Knight adds that he would have no compunction about turning in a fellow coach, and he even warns alumni to stay away from his recruits. "We just don't want you interfering," he stresses to them. "We'll recruit. . . . We know the rules; you don't."

In addition to being a single-minded disciplinarian and moralist, Knight is a clever strategist who is fond of quoting from the ancient classic, The Art of War. Among his favorite passages are:

"The good fighters first put themselves beyond the possibility of defeat and then wait for an opportunity of defeating the enemy."

"Just as water contains no constant shape, so in warfare there are no constant conditions. He who can modify his tactics in relation to his opponents and thereby succeed in winning may be called a heaven-born captain."

"Regard your soldiers as your children and they will follow you wherever you may lead. Look upon them as your beloved sons and they will stand by you even unto death. If, however, you are indulgent, unable to make your authority felt, kind-hearted but unable to enforce your commands, then your soldiers must be likened to spoiled children. They are useless for all practical purposes."

Knight is a strong father figure to his players and sees that they live in dorms or fraternity houses until they are seniors. Last season, when senior Quinn Buckner began to lose his stamina, Knight determined that the cause was too much junk food. He began supervising Buckner's meals, and the player's endurance returned. He also goes to considerable trouble to save his seniors the hassle and expense of using agents when they are negotiating contracts with professional teams.

On the other hand, he can rip into a player ferociously, as he did once last year during a tense moment when he shook one of his players by the jersey in front of 17,500 fans, an incident that received wide press coverage and briefly subjected Knight to sharp criticism for being overly zealous.

Mike Krzyzewski, who in 1969 captained a team at Army (where Knight became head coach at age 24) and now coaches there, said potential recruits always asked about Knight's temper. "I'd always tell them, 'He's gonna push you, and you're not going to like it sometimes, but overall you're going to like it because you never lose respect for him. You always know that nobody does a better job of preparing you for a game, making you a better player—and that nobody would do more for you.' "

This year may be Knight's most challenging as a coach. Gone from last year's national championship team are Scott May (1976 College Player of the Year), Quinn Buckner, Bobby Wilkerson—all first round selections in the pro draft—and Tom Abernethy—a third round selection. But with All-America center Kent Benson as a nucleus and a highly talented group of recruits and last year's reserves on hand, Indiana will probably be in the thick of the fight for the national championship again in 1977.

A year ago, the 12-year reign of John Wooden, the quiet, low key professorial coach of the UCLA Bruins, came to a close with his retirement. In Bloomington, Indiana most everyone believes that the Bobby Knight era has already begun and that some day it may equal Wooden's remarkable record. Hoosiers, as well as more objective observers, agree that Knight's ability to attract gifted players and to mold them into a disciplined, highly efficient team is what makes him the most likely successor of Wooden atop the ranks of college basketball coaches.

BASKETBALL: NOW IT'S TURNING WOMEN ON

By Larry Bortstein

After the game, boys and girls clamored around the towering basketball player, begging for autographs in time-honored fashion.

The game last spring had decided no less than the national collegiate championship and the team with the explosive offense had finally succumbed to the deliberate passing and persistent timing of its taller opponents. The players were all women, and the 6'3" star surrounded by fans was Lusia Harris of Mississippi's Delta State College. The 22-year-old senior had just led her team to victory over Immaculata College of Philadelphia and was now being hailed from many quarters as the finest female basketball player in the world. Whether she is or not, it's indisputable that the country has finally noticed women's basketball, and towns and cities everywhere are catching the fever.

Cathy Rush, Immaculata coach and a leading figure in women's basketball, remarks, "The interest is phenomenal, in colleges, high schools and even many junior high schools. There's a greater awareness that sports are good for girls, and basketball is one of the best."

Indeed, there seems no limit to how far women's basketball can go. Major colleges are diverting large amounts of money from men's athletics to women's programs, and there is even a popular women's professional team ("The Red Heads") which tours the country playing local men's teams. Interest was fired even more by last summer's Olympics, which included women's basketball for the first time. The American squad, led by Lusia Harris, surprised everyone and captured the silver medal.

"I think more girls will now play basketball because of our success," predicts Billie Moore, coach of the U.S. Olympic team. Ms. Moore is eager to develop tall players able to take on giants like the U.S.S.R.'s Iuliyaka Semenova who at 7'2" stood 10 inches above the tallest U.S. player and led the Soviets to the gold medal.

The U.S. Olympic Committee, the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women and other groups are encouraged by the interest the sport is receiving. The Las Vegas Convention Center, for example, is hosting a four-team tournament December 3-4, featuring four top women's teams—Delta State, Immaculata, Long Beach State and the University of Nevada. This will be the country's first regular-season tournament exclusively for women's basketball teams.

"We need to play in the big arenas around the country," says Rush, "to let people see our product and how good our players really are. Madison Square Garden was the first major arena to invite us to play, and women's basketball always will be grateful for that opportunity."

The Garden, New York City's basketball mecca, offered its first women's game in February, 1975, as the first game of a Saturday afternoon college doubleheader. About 12,000 fans were present for the game, which pitted New York's Queens College against Immaculata.

"I don't want to overestimate this," says Rob Franklin, a spokesman for the Garden, "but after the Queens-Immaculata game, about half the crowd left rather than stay for the second half of the doubleheader, which featured a men's game between two traditional Eastern rivals. There's definitely a market for women's basketball, so next March 6, we'll have our first women's doubleheader."

With that kind of growing interest, can a television network contract be far behind?

NANCY WALKER: "I'm a Great Listener–So I Know Who Not To Waste My Time With"

By Helen Dorsey

Like many professional clowns, in private Nancy Walker is a rather melancholy sort who regards the Hollywood circuit with the same disdain which Rosie (the TV pitch lady for paper towels) does for bumbling customers. Nancy once said, "I'm probably one of the shyest, most introverted ladies who ever walked, but the part of me that works is like the women I play."

In her personal as well as professional life, things are going splendidly for this 53-year-old Wunderkind. There is also no doubt about Nancy's priorities in life: her husband of 25 years, David Craig (one of Hollywood's most successful vocal coaches of musical-comedy performers, including Rock Hudson, Alexis Smith and Jean Simmons), and their married daughter, Miranda.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Is it true you're an excellent listener?

NANCY WALKER: I listen very hard, but I don't tune in to everybody. Haven't you heard people who just rattle on? That's why I listen—so I know who not to waste time with. I find most people are really not that interesting.

FW: You've said that you can be hostile with people. What brings out this trait?

NANCY WALKER: Time wasters, who are also energy sappers. We live in a world of such fools. Take politicians, for example. I can't read or listen to them any more. I'm really quite scared to death because we live in such a world of fools. The world is 99 percent filled with energy sappers! I am not going to let people I met just once, more than 10 years ago, come up to me and act as if I just left them and let them talk and talk. No, I'm not using my energy to dredge up a false relationship that never existed in the first place. And these people know full well I don't remember them. I want to say, "Get out of here." It's just so tiresome. I don't have time for acquaintances, only my friends and family. About the only free time I have these days I spend with my husband, and so often that's tired time, and that's not good.

FW: Why have you always said, "Comedy is so personal"?

NANCY WALKER: Because, for example, my way of opening a door is not like Bea Lillie's way of opening a door. Once Director Richard Brooks asked me how I account for the comedy in my work. I told him I have always thought people like Bert Lahr, Bea Lillie and me do everything like other people, except that our bones are off one-eighth of an inch! I may think I'm crossing the room like anyone else, sometimes in grand style, but then everyone goes ha-ha. Richard said, "That's what comedy is all about. It's about life being a certain way because your bones are set differently from the rest of the world. It's probably an illusion of the psyche, but it affects everything you do in life." I don't know who set my bones the way they are, but I just know the way our psychic bones are set affects our behavior every minute of our life, even though we aren't aware of it.

FW: Have you ever thought of yourself as different from other people?

NANCY WALKER: Yes, but I'm me, and that's a good thing to be—I finally found out. As a young girl, however, it upset me terribly when people seemed to be laughing at me and not with me. This isolated me from other people. I didn't realize then that isolation is a very big privilege. I'm thrilled to have been born one of the "privileged few" like Bert Lahr and Bea Lillie.

FW: Who finally convinced you that you are truly funny?

NANCY WALKER: My set-designer friend, Oliver Smith, took me aside one day and said, "Don't you know that being a comedienne is one of the greatest gifts in this world? Why do you hide in corners?" He was the first person to sense the pain I was going through. He tried to knock some sense into my head. Some of it sank in, and, eventually, my head began to grow!

FW: Does your husband help you in your career?

NANCY WALKER: He's a highly intelligent gentleman and someone I listen to a great deal. You can listen more gently to someone you love and have lived with a long time because you know his style and can take comfort in it. His dialogue changes every day, but his style doesn't.

A quarter of a century ago, a great domain — nearly one-fourth of the earth and nine times vaster than the Roman Empire at its zenith — lay under her scepter.

Now, as Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth the Second, prepares to celebrate her Silver Jubilee, she is Queen of fewer lands, but not of fewer hearts. In her person The Crown remains a human link among a quarter of the world's peoples. The symbol of mutual cooperation that stems from a common history. The heritage of an Empire on which the sun never set. The focus of an allegiance given through love and respect but never through compulsion.

Heiress of a thousand years of history

By the Grace of God, Queen of the United Kingdom, its territories, and more than ten other independent Nations, she reigns but does not rule. Head of the Commonwealth of more than thirty realms and republics, she presides but does not direct. Yet, hers is a voice which is heard. The advocate of a happier, more just, and more gentle world for her peoples and the whole of the human family.

Truly an anchor in the tempest of the modern age, the Queen is heiress to noble ideals as timeless as the Coronation Ceremony at which she — like her predecessors since William the Conqueror in 1066 — was crowned at Westminster Abbey. A Coronation which, as in every age, affirmed the people's acceptance of their Sovereign, and the Sovereign's dedication to the people.

An unprecedented philatelic event

It is therefore fitting that to celebrate The Queen's Silver Jubilee in 1977, more than forty members of the Commonwealth will preserve the pageantry and meaning of the Coronation in an international series of nearly eighty different stamps.

Significantly, the scope and concept of this collection are unparalleled in philatelic history. For, never before have so many Nations cooperated to issue a series of individual stamps which, when viewed as a complete collection, captures an event of this magnitude.

And, never before has there been a collection which traces step by step the events of the Coronation. Or portrays the individual Crown Jewels and Coronation Regalia in all their beauty.

Individually designed by the Commonwealth's most prominent artists — perhaps the greatest assemblage of talent ever gathered to a single purpose — each issue will be a masterpiece of the philatelic art. Together capturing with uncommon sensitivity the glittering panoply of tradition, religious rite, and chivalrous pageantry just as it happened nearly twenty-five years ago.

Ascension Island opens this timeless story with the golden State Coach departing from Buckingham Palace pulled by eight perfectly matched Windsor Greys enroute to Westminster Abbey.

In Montserrat's issue, the actual moment of crowning by the Archbishop of Canterbury seems to echo within the Abbey's hallowed walls.

And, vividly portrayed by the issues of Turks and Caicos Islands, loyal subjects cheer the Queen and Royal Family as they wave from the Palace balcony following Coronation.

From beginning to end, this great ritual unfolds. Inspired by a thousand years of history. Recorded in painstaking detail by official stamps of Canada, Barbados, New Zealand, Hong Kong, Australia, Gibraltar, and others. A collection worthy of The Queen's Silver Jubilee, and an inspiration for our times.

Available to you: the First Editions

The unprecedented character of this tribute to The Queen's Silver Jubilee makes your opportunity today to acquire first editions all the more significant. For it is a collection certain to command the attention of collectors and historians for many years to come. And the first editions . . . First Day Covers . . . will be but a small fraction of the total number of stamps sold to the public.

First Day Covers of the individual stamps marking The Queen's Silver Jubilee will be available only on the exact date the stamps are first issued, and never again. In many countries, the First Day of Issue will be February 6, 1977: the precise twenty-fifth anniversary of Her Majesty's accession to the Throne.

Applied as part of lavish Jubilee ceremonies attended by leading officials and citizens of each Nation, the coveted, one-day-only, First Day of Issue postmark will indelibly certify the First Day Cover for posterity and guarantee its authenticity and limited edition character.

The superb, limited edition of the Westminster Collectors Society

Appropriately, the Westminster Collectors Society will issue The Queen's Silver Jubilee in one complete collection of over forty official First Day Covers. Of special importance to collectors, this is the first collection ever authorized by the Society, which was established under the auspices of Fleetwood, America's oldest purveyor of First Day Covers, to encourage a greater appreciation of British and Commonwealth culture, history, and tradition.

As befits a collection of this importance, each First Day Cover will be lavishly engraved. Each will bear the Coat of Arms or Emblem of the issuing Nation, as well as the imprimatur of the Society. And each will be made of a special paper exclusively created for The Queen's Silver Jubilee.

This exquisite collection will be issued solely for subscribers, with an absolute limit of one collection per subscriber. And the total number will be forever limited to the exact number of original subscriptions, postmarked not later than February 6, 1977. The collection will not be available after that time except from collectors who acquired it at the time of issue.

A deluxe collector's album will protect and display your collection

Collectors who take advantage of this limited opportunity to acquire the Official First Day Covers of The Queen's Silver Jubilee will receive, without additional cost, a lavishly bound collector's album. To enhance the historical and educational value of the collection, an authoritative reference guide will be included. And, specially prepared information will accompany each issue.

A convenient plan of acquisition

Each subscriber will receive the First Day Covers of The Queen's Silver Jubilee at the convenient rate of three per month, beginning in March, 1977, and concluding in early 1978. The original issue price of $3.25 per First Day Cover will be guaranteed for the entire collection. In view of the high denomination of the stamps, it is an exceptional value.

As a convenience, moreover, collectors may pay for the first month's shipment now, or charge it to their credit card account.

A collection for all seasons

A modern world which has split the atom and put man on the moon has found itself starved for the color, the romance, the chivalry, and most of all the sense of history which The Queen's Silver Jubilee Collection will preserve for the future. For you, and for future generations of your family, it will be a source of great satisfaction and inspiration.

Subscription Deadline: February 6, 1977

Please remember that this is the only time that this collection can ever be issued. To take advantage of this historic opportunity, postmark your application no later than February 6, 1977. Applications should be mailed directly to Fleetwood, 1 Unicover Center, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82008, under whose auspices the Society was established.

Can your child read these words?

napkin	fuzzy	liquid	punch	camel
misty	chicken	velvet	whisper	zigzag

Your child will learn how to read these and more than 300 other words after working with the very first record of The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

Try out this Phonics Course FREE FOR TWO WEEKS with your child in your own home—without risking a penny. Mail the coupon below.

If your child is a poor reader, if he has not been able to keep up with his class in school—here is a way that you can help him. Many parents have seen their poor readers gain up to a full year's grade in reading skill in just six weeks with the Sound Way to Easy Reading.

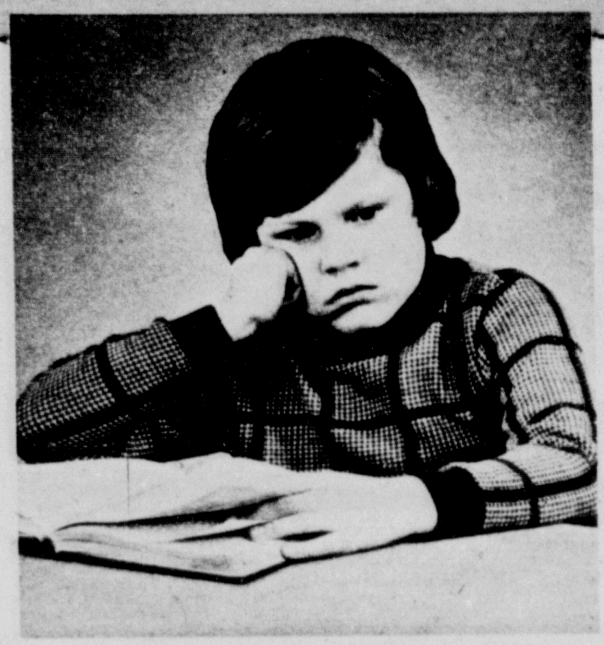
As soon as your child starts playing the records and using the charts of The Sound Way to Easy Reading you will know why it works so well. It takes the mystery out of learning to read because it teaches your child by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago).

Teaches with records

With this course your child discovers that letters have sounds. When he starts sounding out the letters he hears himself saying the word. He's reading!

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters of the alphabet and their blends. By the time he completes the first record (about two weeks for the average child) he can read 300 words. After finishing all four records he has been taught 123 basic phonics sounds.

Once he knows these sounds he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades and even in high school. Its records tell your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.



Tested and Proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in four Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp some of the current methods taught in most schools today. Many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

Help Your Child Now

So don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before coming to his aid. By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of success. Try it free for two weeks. Why Buy A Genuine Diamond

IT'S TRUE— — FEW PEOPLE CAN TELL THE DIFFERENCE. — This is why movie stars and millionaires often wear simulations when they make public appearances. They know that only real experts or jewelers with powerful magnifiers can tell (for sure) if they are wearing a ring worth thousands or a Gemfire Simulation costing less than $25!

GEMFIRES ARE CATCHING ON LIKE WILDFIRE! — Your friends and neighbors sporting big beautiful sparklers may be wearing Gemfires now and using the difference to make a payment on their dream house or buy a car! And once you see a Gemfire you'll be proud to wear one yourself, or give it to someone you love.

PICTURES DON'T DO JUSTICE TO GEMFIRE BEAUTY. — You can't really tell how lovely they are from pictures. That's why Crown Galleries offer every Gemfire Simulated Diamond with a FULL ONE YEAR GUARANTEE. You can't lose!

GEMFIRES ARE SELECTED FOR BRILLIANCE AND FIERY BEAUTY. — No cracks! No bubbles! No imperfections to dull their radiance. They are carefully cut and polished by master-craftsmen and just as genuine diamonds Gemfires have 58 facets. Then they're hand-set in handsome 18Kt-Heavy Gold Electroplate or solid Sterling Silver mountings. Remember - - Gemfires are not cheap paste or glass. They're so hard they cut glass! Order your Gemfire today - - and put some sparkle into your life!

OUR NO RISK GUARANTEE!

If within one year of date of purchase you are dissatisfied in any way with your Jewelry, return to PLANTRON, INC. by INSURED MAIL for either repair, replacement, or refund of your purchase price.

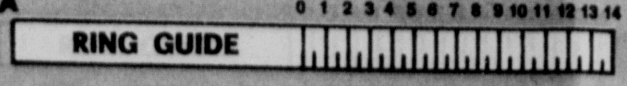
How to Find Your Ring Size

1. Cut a strip of paper 3 inches long and 1/4 inch wide.
2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot, on the strip where it meets the end.
3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.



LADIES RINGS AVAILABLE IN SIZES 5 THRU 10

MEN'S RINGS AVAILABLE IN SIZES 7 THRU 13

ALL RINGS SHOWN LARGER THAN ACTUAL SIZE.

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

CARAT (CT)— a measure of weight for a diamond. Our simulated diamonds are given approximate carat values based on size, not weight. A 1-carat Gemfire is approximately the same size as a 1-carat diamond.

HEAVY GOLD ELECTROPLATE (HGE)— this mounting uses karat gold (either white or yellow) that is electrically bonded to the mounting after it is formed and the gold, by government standard, is 14 times thicker than the designated "gold electroplate."

STERLING SILVER (SS)— the mounting is 92.5% pure silver, 7.5% other metals for strength, and to eliminate tarnishing is lightly plated with precious rhodium.

GOLD FILLED (GF)— a lamination of Base Metal placed between sheets of gold.

Wh. Mtg. - - white mounting
Yel. Mtg. - - yellow mounting
SS - - Sterling Silver
GF - - Gold Filled

SMART COOKING / By Marilyn Hansen

"After Thanksgiving, Let's Make Turkey Soup"

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen suggests a delicious (and thrifty) dish you create from the "third helpings" of turkey no one could eat.

TURKEY NOODLE SOUP

Leftover cooked carcass from a 15- to 20-lb. turkey
5 qts. water
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped celery leaves
1 cup chopped onion
7 chicken bouillon cubes
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 bay leaf
½ cup chopped parsley
1 cup fresh, frozen or canned peas
1 cup sliced carrots
1 cup cut green beans
4 cups (8 ozs.) fine egg noodles
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup all-purpose flour

1. In 8-qt. kettle or Dutch oven, place turkey carcass, water, celery, celery leaves, onion, bouillon cubes, salt, pepper and bay leaf. Heat to boiling; lower heat; cover and simmer 1 hour. Remove carcass and let cool.
2. Add parsley, peas, carrots and green beans to soup; heat to boiling; reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes until vegetables are just tender.
3. Remove meat from carcass, return pieces to soup. Discard bones.
4. Heat soup to boiling, add noodles, cook, uncovered, 10 minutes.
5. Melt butter in small frying pan; stir in flour. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until flour is browned. Stir into boiling soup. Return to boiling and stir. Reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes.

Makes 5 qts.

APPLE CIDER UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE

3 medium-sized tart apples
1 cup apple cider
⅓ cup butter or margarine
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
½ cup chopped walnuts
1 pkg. (18½ ozs.) spice cake mix
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
¼ cup wheat germ
Sweetened whipped cream, whipped topping or vanilla ice cream, optional

1. Preheat oven to 350° F. Lightly grease a 13 x 9 x 2-inch pan.
2. Pare and core apples; slice thinly. Simmer apple slices in cider over medium heat until just tender. Drain, reserving cider.
3. Combine 2 tablespoons hot cider, butter and brown sugar in prepared pan and stir until butter melts. Sprinkle with walnuts.
4. Prepare spice cake mix according to package directions. Then stir in vanilla extract and wheat germ.
5. Pour batter over walnuts and cider mixture.
6. Bake at 350° F. for 55 to 60 minutes.
7. Invert pan onto large cake platter and let stand for one minute; remove pan. Cut into squares. Serve warm with sweetened whipped cream or soft vanilla ice cream. Heat any remaining cider mixture and serve as a sauce.

Makes 12 servings

What's Smart: Here's a recipe for five quarts of rib-sticking soup. A bargain meal for only $1.48. (The turkey carcass isn't included, since it has been already figured into the cost of Thanksgiving dinner.) One ingredient, the egg noodles, adds immeasurably to the good taste and nutrition of the dish.

Turkey Travels Far in Tempting Ethnic Recipes

TURKEY AND OLIVE MANICOTTI

8 pieces packaged manicotti tubes
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen chopped spinach
1½ cups pitted ripe olives, drained
1 tablespoon oil
1 teaspoon finely chopped garlic
1 cup finely chopped onion
1 cup finely chopped cooked turkey
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ teaspoon oregano leaves, crumbled
1 large egg, beaten
1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 can (15 ozs.) tomato sauce with tomato bits
½ cup water
1 chicken bouillon cube, crushed
½ teaspoon basil leaves, crumbled
½ cup sliced Monterey Jack or Muenster cheese

1. Cook manicotti as package label directs; drain and cool. Defrost spinach and press out all excess liquids.
2. Set aside ½ cup whole ripe olives for sauce. Finely chop remaining ripe olives.
3. Heat oil. Add garlic and onion and cook until onion is soft. Add turkey, spinach, salt, pepper, oregano, beaten egg and ½ cup Parmesan cheese to onion.
4. Fill manicotti with this mixture. (If any filling is leftover, stir into the tomato sauce.)
5. In medium saucepan, combine tomato sauce, water, chicken bouillon cube and basil. Heat to boiling. Simmer for one minute. Stir in ¼ cup Parmesan cheese and remaining ½ cup whole pitted ripe olives.
6. Preheat oven to 375° F. Pour ½ cup sauce in bottom of a 1½-qt. shallow baking dish. Arrange filled manicotti in sauce. Pour remaining sauce over top. Sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup Parmesan and sliced Monterey cheese.
7. Bake 25 to 30 minutes until bubbly throughout.

Makes 4 servings

TURKEY CURRY With ALMOND RAISIN RICE

1½ cups chopped unpeeled apples
⅔ cup minced onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon curry powder
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
1½ cups turkey or chicken broth
2½ cups cooked turkey, cut-up
Almond Raisin Rice

1. Sauté apples, onion and garlic in butter until tender-crisp. Stir in flour, seasoning and turkey broth.
2. Cook and stir over medium heat until thickened. Add turkey; heat thoroughly. Serve with Almond Raisin Rice.

Makes 6 servings

ALMOND RAISIN RICE

½ cup slivered almonds
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
¾ cup light raisins
3 cups cooked rice

1. Sauté ½ cup slivered almonds in 2 tablespoons butter until golden brown. Stir in raisins and rice tossing lightly to combine. Heat thoroughly.

Makes 6 servings

TURKEY CANTONESE

3 cups thinly sliced celery
2 cups sliced onion
2 cups green pepper pieces, cut into 1-inch squares
1 qt. turkey or chicken broth
1 can (4 ozs.) water chestnuts, drained and sliced
1 can (4 ozs.) sliced mushrooms, drained, or ½ lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced
½ cup soy sauce
¼ cup cornstarch
3 cups cooked turkey pieces
6 cups hot cooked rice

1. Parboil celery, onion and green pepper in broth about 5 minutes.
2. Add water chestnuts, mushrooms and soy sauce. Dissolve cornstarch in ¼ cup cold water; stir into vegetable mixture. Cook 10 minutes longer.
3. Add turkey and heat thoroughly. Serve over hot rice. If desired, garnish with additional turkey, cut in strips.

Makes 8 servings

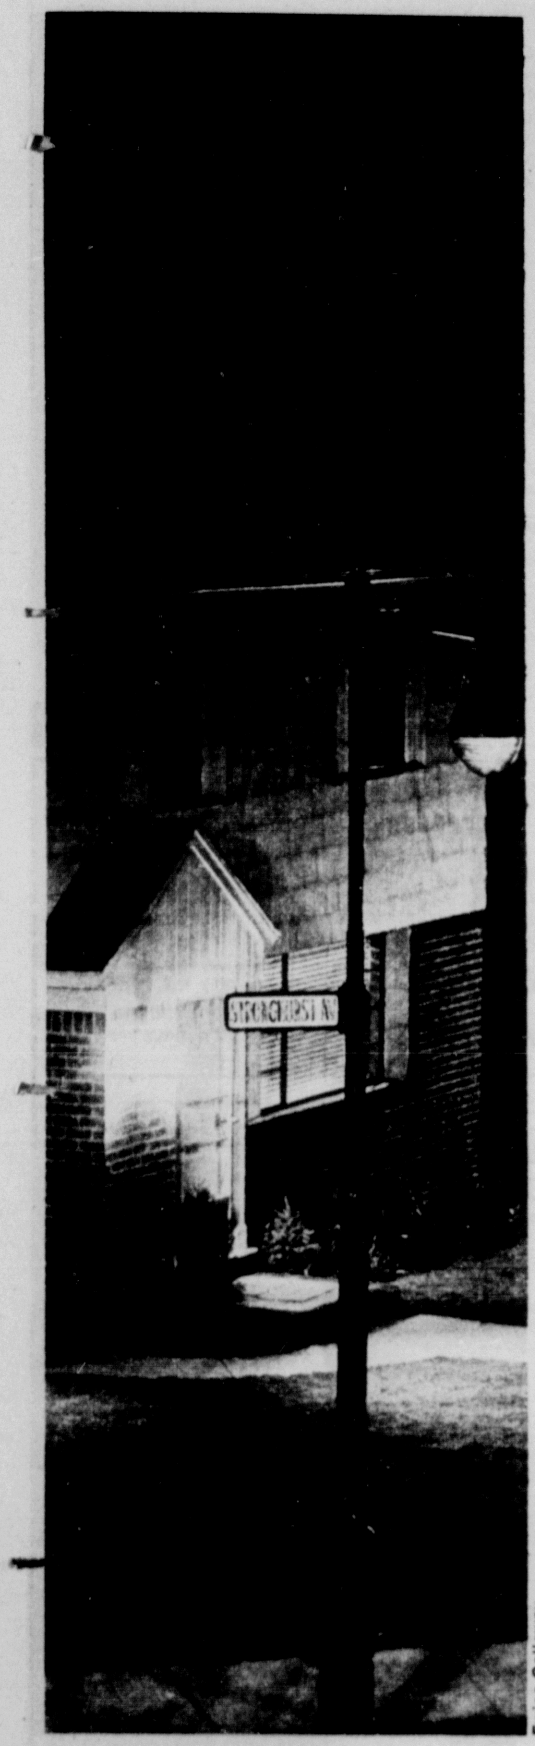
IS THIS HOME REALLY SAFE FROM BURGLARS?



Ewing Galloway

With crime rates in the suburbs rising faster than those in big cities, it's a good idea to scrutinize your house the way a professional burglar would.

By Polly Dranov

Joanne Martin still gets the shakes when she thinks of that night. The house was a shambles. Papers and clothes were strewn everywhere, and it took hours to figure what was missing. The television, of course, and the stereo. All her good jewelry and Bill's cameras. Clothes, too—all of his suits, her fur coat. Then, there were the binoculars, the pocket calculator, the portable typewriter, the clock radio and the $160 in cash in the desk drawer.

"They sure knew what they were doing," Joanne says bitterly. "They just took the good stuff. But that didn't bother me anywhere near as much as the thought of strangers going through my house. I felt so vulnerable, so violated. It took me weeks to calm down."

Burglary rates are edging up everywhere. And the victims aren't just big-city dwellers any more. In 1975 burglaries were up 10 percent in the suburbs, eight percent in rural areas and seven percent in the cities.

Most burglars now work days. In fact, more than 50 percent of home burglaries now occur during the day.

"It's very well organized," explains Sheriff Bill Lombard of Monroe County, N.Y. "A burglar will stake out a whole suburban subdivision and ring every doorbell. If someone answers, he'll ask for a fictitious person and then move on. Burglary is one of the most difficult crimes to investigate, but we could prevent more of them if people would just call the police when they see suspicious activity or strangers about."

Few American homes are truly burglarproof. In addition, an astonishing number of people don't even lock their doors.

Police say the first line of defense against intruders is a good deadbolt lock. But there's no point in installing one of these on a flimsy door or near a glass panel. A Government-sponsored study recommends that all exterior doors be at least an inch and three-quarters thick.

The National Sheriff's Association suggests equipping all your windows with key locks. Garage and basement windows are best nailed shut.

Try to see your home with a burglar's eyes, and you'll get an idea of how vulnerable you are. How would you break in? Does the shrubbery provide good cover for an intruder trying to pry open a door or window? Is there a gap between a door or window frame big enough for a crowbar? Can you enter the house from the garage? Are all entrances illuminated at night? Do the lights cast concealing shadows? Could a burglar get into a second-floor window from a tree?

You can burglarproof your home fairly cheaply. If it seems an unnecessary nuisance, consider the fact that a burglary is committed every 13 seconds. In 1975 there were 1,526 offenses per 100,000 inhabitants, and residential losses totaled $925 million. And police estimate that nearly half of all residential burglaries aren't even reported. So why not take the precautions police suggest: install strong locks (and use them!), shore up windows and doors, trim back shrubbery.

Police across the country also have been enlisting citizens in community crime-prevention efforts. The biggest, "Neighborhood Watch," is administered by the National Sheriff's Association. "Neighborhood Watch" goes by various names—"Block Watch" in Seattle, Phoenix and St. Louis, "Home Alert" in Oakland and "Neighbor Help Neighbor" in New Orleans. The program is essentially the same everywhere: a block-by-block organization of citizens who are trained by police to secure their own homes and to watch out for burglars. Incidentally, "Neighborhood Watch" reduces burglary rates. Some police departments report that the mere presence of orange and black "Neighborhood Watch" decals on windows seems to deter criminals.

One of the most successful "Neighborhood Watch" programs is in Monroe County, N.Y., where Bill Lombard reports that "the number of calls coming through our dispatchers is going up, but the volume of crime has been going down." In another nationwide program, "Operation Identification," valuable possessions are engraved with the owner's social security or drivers license number which police keep on file. Participants get an "Operation Identification" decal for their windows or doors. Marked goods are difficult to fence, and the burglar knows that if he's caught with marked property, he's as good as convicted. Another advantage is that you get marked property back if the police recover it. Otherwise, you're usually out of luck unless you've got theft insurance. As a rule, if you can't prove that stolen property is yours, you can't get it back from the police. Moreover, six months after "Operation Identification" was initiated in Minnesota, the likelihood of a burglary in member homes had dropped by 78 percent.

Although theft insurance is available under most homeowner policies, in some areas of the country it's virtually impossible or prohibitively expensive to buy. Coverage is so hard to get in 15 states—most of them along the East Coast—that residents are eligible for Federal Crime Insurance, which provides a maximum of $10,000 worth of coverage for about $100 a year. However, you're not eligible unless your doors are equipped with vertical deadbolt locks.

Police say two things will deter a skilled burglar: a barking dog and an electronic alarm system. Most family pets can be relied on to bark at strangers, but your dog may take a liking to an intruder. Attack dogs are a different story. The rising crime rate has sent hundreds of thousands of Americans rushing to kennels for trained dogs. But even the best animal may fail to discriminate among a burglar, the milkman, the mailman and a curious child. A lawsuit by a victim could cost much more than a burglary.

Unfortunately, fancy electronic alarm systems are expensive. There are two basic kinds: a local alarm designed to frighten off burglars and a silent alarm that signals police headquarters or a security service from which guards may be dispatched. Silent alarm systems can cost up to $600 to install, plus a regular monitoring charge.

The least costly alarms, "contact devices," are mechanical switches attached to doors or locks. The contacts form an electrical circuit which, when broken, sounds an alarm. Contacts cost as little as $2, but you would need one for every point of entry to be completely secure.

One New York man credits the arrest of a burglar to his "Touch Tone" phone. After awaking to the sounds of an intruder, he feigned sleep when the burglar looked in on him. Then, while his house was being rifled, he silently phoned for help. The police caught the intruder in the act.

Police warn against ever trying to apprehend a burglar yourself. And they frown on keeping guns around. More people are shot accidentally than are hurt by burglars. And shooting a burglar or a prowler is sometimes a crime.

The odds are that you'll never encounter a burglar face to face. Most of them will clear out fast if they realize they've broken into a house they thought was empty. So your best protection is to make your house appear as if you are home. That, plus deadbolt locks, strong doors and good neighbors should be all the burglar-proofing you'll ever need.

You don't have to live in a fortress to be safe. But your house should present enough obstacles to send a burglar elsewhere.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Can a good laugh affect your blood pressure?

How Seriously Should You Take Your Sense Of Humor?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The simplest way to test a person's sense of humor is to tell him a joke that isn't very funny and see how hard he laughs.
2. When a person is angry and likely to "blow his top," you can usually cool his rage by telling him a side-splitting joke or story.
3. The kind of jokes a person tells and the jokes he laughs at reveal a lot about him.
4. Humor can serve an important function in business as well as social relationships.
5. When somebody makes you laugh, he really does you a favor.

ANSWERS

1. True. When a person laughs hard at a mediocre joke, he's often trying to mask the fact that his own sense of humor leaves much to be desired. There are exceptions, of course—the salesman, for example, who laughs hard at pointless jokes a customer may make. But just as there are those who pride themselves on the sense of humor they haven't got—but pretend to have—there are the killjoy types who wouldn't give you the satisfaction of laughing at a joke regardless of how funny it is. His desire to laugh, as one psychologist points out, fights with his desire to "put down" the joke teller.

2. True. However, psychological studies at Lewis University have shown that to be effective the humor must be of a specific variety. The investigators found that racy humor was the one type that "led to the reduction of aggression." This type of humor provides a safety valve for aggressive feelings.

3. True. As psychiatrist Werner M. Mendel observes: "An individual who can tell husband/wife jokes in which the husband expresses his aggression in an indirect way is obviously less able to face his own aggressive feelings." The "Boston Strangler" story is cited as an example: a husband and wife are having dinner when the doorbell rings. The husband goes to the door, and a man says, "I am the Boston Strangler." The husband turns around and yells to his wife, "It's for you, dear." In this joke the husband indirectly expresses aggression toward the wife.

4. True. Humor can be effective in bridging or smoothing over awkward situations in business and social relationships. As one authority observed, "In situations of emotional tension and conflict, humor frequently helps those involved to gain the perspective needed to view a situation calmly, realistically and objectively."

5. True. Laughter has an interesting effect on us in ways you might not suspect. In his definitive treatise, The Psychology of Laughter, University of Auckland Professor of Anthropology, Dr. Ralph Piddington, points out that laughter "stimulates respiration, circulation and blood pressure and sends a fuller stream of blood to the head and brain." A good laugh, he concludes, does us good because the physiological effects of laughter help produce a physical state of well-being.

PEOPLE AND YOU

How to Fight With Someone You Love

"All people who live together fight from time to time," says psychiatrist David Viscott in his book How to Live With Another Person. Dr. Viscott points out that most men and women don't know how to have a "good argument" that clears the air and helps make future battles less likely to occur. He suggests: 1) Decide beforehand what you want to accomplish. Are you just exploding emotionally or are you trying to make a point? 2) Pick a time and place where you both can talk comfortably. If you choose a setting where you have all the advantages, the other person will know it and may be so furious that he will refuse to accept your point of view. 3) Don't try to win by overwhelming. Dr. Viscott explains, "In some instances it may be permissible to overpower people, but not in marriage relationships." Equality must be the essence of that relationship. 4) Never argue in bed in the dark. You need to see the other person's face and reactions, which often tell a great deal about what your partner really means. 5) Try to begin arguments with the expectation of resolving them and making up.

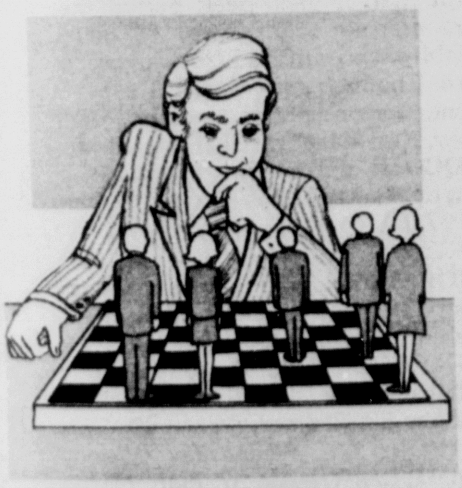
JOBMANSHIP

How to Read an "Invisible" Corporate Power Chart



Every business organization has two power charts, the official one and the real one. The official organization chart is there for anyone to study. The real power chart is invisible, and you can understand it only by persistent observation. Since the power chart affects who gets promotions and raises, who stays and who is elbowed out, it's well worth your while to learn about it. Things to watch for: 1) Who supplies the reliable information? A decision-maker or someone having close access to the real decision-maker is the source of such information. 2) Who has social contacts with top executives? Social connections may have been achieved through long-standing friendships or through a spouse with good connections or through activities in some political, community, athletic or religious organization. However gained, they give that person an edge in company power. 3) Which long-time employees have quietly cornered power by taking on the authority to initial memos or plans? Even if their initials on the project really mean nothing, by making themselves a part of the chain, these senior employees can delay or kill a project by leaving it quietly on their desks. That's negative power. But it's power. 4) Which co-workers have relatives or former bosses in the executive hierarchy? They may have realistic expectations of promotions that will turn them into powerful people eventually. 5) Who is currently involved in an office romance? Some day, it's true, the romance may be over. But at the moment, they're a duo commanding power from two directions in the organization. Once you understand the real power structure, you'll know how to get results and who is really important to your future with the company.

PERMA TWEEZ® AWAY UNWANTED HAIR FOREVER

Perma Tweez is a simple electrolysis instrument that PERMANENTLY removes undesirable hair from all areas of the face—such as the chin, upper lip, eyebrows. Embarrassing body hair can now be removed forever at home in total privacy. Arms and legs can be forever free of the inconvenience of constant hair removal. An exclusive U.S. patented safety feature allows you to do this without puncturing the skin.

AN EXPERT'S APPROVAL

Perma Tweez has been clinically tested by a university professor of dermatology and proven to be safe and effective. One of his patients had previously been tweezing hairs from her chin every day for 15 years. After treating herself with Perma Tweez, she has eliminated this time consuming chore for the rest of her life! Over 15 thousand instruments in use by doctors—over 500,000 in use by people like yourself.

Easy instructions make you expert in a few minutes. Save hundreds of dollars on salon electrolysis by doing it yourself.

BOBBY CLARKE
Diabetic and Athletic

November is National Diabetes Month: Mary Tyler Moore is severely diabetic. She gives herself two insulin shots a day and insists: "I'm healthier because of my handicap. I've been forced to take very good care of myself." Bobby Clarke, the Philadelphia Flyers' hockey star, has been diabetic since the age of 17. He had only this to say about it: "Maybe I've been lucky. But anyone—diabetic or not—has to have a lot of perseverance to get what he wants out of life." You're probably aware that diabetics can lead nearly normal, healthy—even athletic—lives. But if you think diabetes is a rare disease, you're mistaken. It's now one of the most common ailments in America. In the last 10 years, known cases have increased by more than 50 percent. At this rate, an American born today and living an average life span (70 years) has greater than a 1-in-5 chance of developing the disease. Diabetic patients face the possibility of a shortened life and serious medical complications. If they overlook or neglect their disease, it can lead to heart attack, blindness, kidney disease or gangrene. Yet diabetes is easily detected, and some of its complications may be prevented if caught early and treated properly. Some symptoms: excessive thirst, extreme hunger, rapid weight loss, frequent urination, drowsiness, general weakness, blurred vision (or a change in vision), skin boils or infection. See your doctor if any of these symptoms persists or recurs. As a plan of prevention, it's simple enough: 1) Have an annual medical check-up. 2) Maintain normal weight and follow good health practices. 3) Support those who are working to conquer diabetes. Write to: American Diabetes Association, 600 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10020.

GUESS WHO? You might think a young cavalry officer known as the "Little Beauty of the Regiment" might be due for a difficult career. He was light and weak and always needed too much sleep. He probably had a latent case of tuberculosis. He had a soft, pretty, girlish face with a rosy complexion, small delicate hands and a soft, melodious voice. He was ridiculously modest and would never bathe along with the other recruits. He was a soldier who couldn't stand the sight of blood or injured animals and couldn't touch meat unless it was almost burned. He only cursed once (when someone mistreated his horse). His military career was as poor as one might predict except, of course, for winning the Civil War. He and his wife are buried on a pleasant hill overlooking the Hudson River, in Grant's Tomb. IT'LL HAPPEN TO ALL OF US
We asked: "How do you feel about growing old?"

The fickle fates of show business have traditionally favored the young and beautiful. Is it especially tough to grow wrinkled in the spotlight? FAMILY WEEKLY checked with a group of celebrities and got some surprising answers: MARLO THOMAS: "I'm not scared of losing my looks, or my shape. What frightens me is the thought that I might become incapable or lose control of my mind." YUL BRYNNER: "I have no fears. In fact, I'm all for maturing. It's as comforting as a security blanket." RONA JAFFE: "My horror is growing stiff. I don't want all those little aches and pains that people collect as they get on in years. I'm terrified at being unable to do all the physical things I could when I was young." DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: "I'm looking forward to it. I'm curious about how the years will treat me. I expect to improve with age—just like wine. Life's first half is a cocoon; the second is the butterfly." FREDA PAYNE: "A young attitude is important, and I'm holding on to mine. There'll be no hair dyes and face-lifts. I'll age gracefully and be glad I have the kind of intelligence no 20-year-old could have." DON RICKLES: "Considering the alternative, it's enticing."

PICK A PAIR
The inside story on twins

You're expecting a baby and looking forward to taking home an addition to the family. How would you feel if it turned out to be two? One in about every hundred pregnancies in the U.S. results in twins. If you're over 35 and have had children, you're about three times more likely to produce fraternal twins than a woman under. 20 having her first baby. Whatever your age, the more children you've had, the greater your chance for twins the next time. Also, once you've had a simultaneous pair, you're three- to 10-times as likely as non-twin first-time mothers to have still another set. According to Amran Scheinfeld, probably the foremost authority on twinning, these facts apply mainly to fraternal twins. Identical twins, he says, are most likely the result of inherited tendencies and are rarer than fraternal. Most twins are the same sex, with slightly less than a third of twin births being boy-girl combinations. Twins tend to be born on an average of three weeks early. Up to 60 percent are premature and small, compared to 7 or 8 percent of singletons, but once they've come through prenatal and birth ordeals, they can be expected to be just as healthy and big as loners.

QUOTE: "If you have headaches, it may be small consolation to know that you are in good company. Some of the most brilliant and celebrated people in history were tormented by migraine to such an extent that their creative productivity is a source of wonder. The worst victim may have been Friedrich Nietzsche, philosopher of sorts and the intellectual parent of Superman. Nietzsche's headaches were so frequent that in their peak period they were coming about every 72 hours. Notables who suffered from migraines were Thomas Jefferson, Ulysses S. Grant, Sigmund Freud, Madame Pompadour, Karl Marx and Charles Darwin." UNQUOTE. From The Conquest of Pain by Samuel Mines (Grosset & Dunlap, $7.95).

BUILD A TIMELESS CHRISTMAS PRESENT

Build Emperor's Model 120 in gleaming solid ¾" black walnut as a Christmas present for yourself, your family or treasured friends. Starting with an Emperor kit, thousands of people without woodworking experience have enjoyed the rewards of building their own beautiful, heirloom-quality grandfather clocks . . . and you can, too! Emperor buys solid American black walnut in high volume to get the best prices possible. This wood is then cut in our own woodworking plant, with efficiency and strict attention to dimensional accuracy. Because of these quantity purchases and operating efficiencies, Emperor is able to pass substantial savings on to our customers. As always, from Emperor, you receive the highest quality product at the lowest possible price. When completed, your finished clock will add beauty and grace to your home and will be worth many times its original low purchase price.

All kit pieces are professionally pre-cut and sanded smooth on both sides. All miters pre-cut at no extra charge. (For those who prefer, kits may be ordered unmitered.) Divided swan neck and finial, waist and dial face doors, dial frame and sculptured base front are preassembled. Complete assembly instructions included. No woodworking experience necessary. Each piece may be reordered separately.

SOLID BRASS EMPEROR MOVEMENTS • EIGHT-DAY • WEIGHT-DRIVEN • WESTMINSTER CHIMES

Emperor's West German, completely weight-driven 100-M pendulum movements contain two sets of four musically-tuned rods. One set sounds the Westminster chimes each quarter-hour. The hour is struck on the other set. Emperor movements include weights, solid brass weight shells, brass bob, pendulum and chimes. All plates are solid brass and pinions hardened steel. Installation and adjustment of the movement is simple, following the step-by-step instructions.

There are two dial versions of the 100-M movement: Tempus Fugit (Time Flies) and Moving Moon with lunar calendar. Each movement is individually and thoroughly tested in our quality control room. Emperor West German movements are known and valued everywhere for their lasting accuracy and dependability. Don't risk buying anything less.
